Commission Contemplates the Installation of a Filtration System

Twenty-eight Acres of Land, Known as the Carnegie Property, Has Been Secured for This Purpose.

THE WATER SUPPLY

Last evening the City Council authorized the Utilities Commission to purchase the old Carnegie property in the north end of the city for the sum of seven thousand dollars. Mr. R. Hicks and Mr. W. H. Moore, representing the Commission, waited on the council in connection with the matter. Mr. Moore said that it was only a question of time until the Commission would have to consider installation of a filtration plant. With the added number of summer visitors to the back lakes and along the waterway from which the city's water supply is obtained, such a move cannot be delayed for more than a few years at the most. The property has been on the market for twelve thousand dollars, but the owners have agreed to sell it to the Commission for seven thousand. It comprises twenty-eight acres of land and a large house suitable for two families. It is near the waterworks station, and the house on the property will provide accommodation for some of the men who are employed at the pumping plant.

At present the water supply is treated with chlorine and while at the present time it is regarded as acceptable for domestic purposes, at times it has a tendency to approach the danger mark, and in a few years the installation of a filtration plant will be imperative.

Letter From Lieut. W. J. O'Brien

The following letter comes from Lieut. W. J. O'Brien, of the Canadian Artillery, who writes from Mons:

France, Nov. 21, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Your columns must be fairly well filled with news from old Peterborough boys abroad, during the present weeks, and you may be inclined to look upon me as somewhat of a trespasser. My connection of old with your paper, however, coupled with the fact that I am on the ground, prompts me to give you a second article on recent events.

In my last letter I attempted to describe some of the scenes attendant upon the repatriation of the towns in the Douai-Cambrai sector — in the present note I shall try to tell you what has been happening since the morning on which the German emissaries put their signatures to the famous armistice.

On this eventful day our headquarters were in the small town of Q——, on the main road from Valenciennes to Mons. This town had seen some rough days during the Valenciennes fight and was more or less destitute of civilians when we entered. We had been ordered to rest here for a few days and our boys soon had the place cleaned up and made a more or less going concern. Upon entering the chateau which was to be our home I explored the upper storey and found a boudoir, the former property of Rose Marie Somebody or other. The bed was bare of linen and blankets, but it was long enough, fortunately, and I had a sleeping valise so I worried not. The betting had been very free on Sunday, the 10th, as to the acceptance of Marshal Foch's terms, and we all retired in a more or less sanguine mood, knowing that to-morrow would likely call a halt to the fighting that had raged continuously since August 7th. I was awakened about seven o'clock on Monday morning by a clerk who handed me a wire from Corps. It read: "Hostilities will cease at 11 a.m. to-day, and all units will rest and not advance until further orders." This wire was immediately posted up on the front of our billet together with a translation in French for the benefit of the townsmen. In a very few minutes a shout, lengthening into a perfect roar convinced me that it was no dream. A halt had indeed been called to the long carnival of blood and tears.

There have been occasions in the past four years when I have allowed my mind to dwell upon the prospect of a cessation of hostilities. Such lapses have, however, been invariably brought to an abrupt close by the resumption of battle—so many times have I been awakened from my day-dream of peace by the thunder of guns and the other noises which go to make of war a horrid nightmare that I had finally resolved to quit dreaming and look upon the whole business as something whose ending was a matter of vague conjecture only. The past three months of the war proper—a veritable tornado of violence, stretching from the Belgium coast to the Valley of Lorraine—a long continuous blood-red line, awake to the roar of countless guns, and bright with the gleam of a million bayonets—ending, all of it, in the Sabbath-like calm of a dignified meeting of war lords has truly been the strangest dream of all. The feelings of a soldier may not properly be analyzed at such a stage. Not one I think, is sorry that the business is done—but not a few will miss—and with regret— the exultant moments of victory, at the close of the attack, the return to rest after taking and holding dearly-bought gains, and the golden camaraderie that exists only on the battle field.

Marching to the Rhine.

From the fifteenth up to the present a great deal of our time has been spent in the march towards the Rhine. The greater part of this trip has taken us over the Mons road, a highway that has become the most famous in history. There are two processions daily along this road—towards the east travels our Corps a-step to the music of a hundred bands, while westward files a never-ending string of "evacuers" from a thousand towns and villages. It needs but a glance at this latter procession with a question or two, to convince one that war is indeed a scourge—for in the homely petiable looking conveyances that are being trundled over this stone road are the most incongruous collections of humanity and material imaginable. We see a two-wheeled affair upon which a large box is mounted carrying bedding, a couple of fowl in a crate, a dish pan or two and a very aged woman or a very young child, the whole being pulled by a couple of girls in their Sunday best. The next vehicle will perhaps be smaller, but manned by a couple of stalwart men pushing instead of pulling it; it contains books, a canary in a cage, a bicycle, a few candlesticks and what not. Every cart, and wheelbarrow, is distinctive from the nature of its load, but all are similar in that they exemplify misery, a love of home, and half-starvation—at least.

Tommies Share Rations.

Apropos of this latter it must always be said to the credit of the Tommies that they did what they could to alleviate the hunger of these unfortunates. Chocolate, biscuits, bread and bully have been freely shared and other help has been generously given, in the attempt to reduce the general misery. You might read newspaper accounts of shortage of food until dooms-day, but you, who have not been on the road to Mons, cannot understand the difference between getting bread and missing it.

The civilians of freed Belgium are happy—their best rooms, and most cordial hospitality, are ours to command. They all have the same story to tell and it is a sad story of brigandage, affront and destitution extending over four years and three months. In the town where I am to-night a business suit of male clothes costs two hundred dollars! a cow one thousand dollars; a lady's waist (not silk) thirty dollars, and a pound of tea twenty dollars. This will give you some idea as to how industry has become paralyzed by war.

We passed through Mons a few days after the capture by Canadians. The Grand Square by which you enter will hereafter be known as Canada Square, and this is indeed a compliment to our land. But the town itself and the long road that winds away to the west will forever cause the mind to hearken back to the day when a pitiable handful of stout-hearted Britishers, clenched their teeth, fixed their bayonets, and put the first great crimp in the aspirations of a foul, presumptuous braggart, who dared the world and ruined himself by his conceit.

The march to the Rhine symbolizes the triumph of right (backed up by the only argument a Hun admits) over a might that has eventually proved his weakness. Prophetic indeed were Lord French's words when he stated in 1914: "We will talk peace to Germany at the cannon's mouth." Somehow or other every one here now feels that Europe is once more fit to breathe in since the might of the blasphemous tyrant of Germany has wilted under a fusilade of honest blows and he and his scheming copartners in wrong-doing have been relegated to questionable havens of refuge in other countries.

VERSAILLES' CONFLAB HAS BEEN POSTPONED

Visit of Pres. Wilson and Reconstruction of British Cabinet Given as the Reasons.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Dec. 21.— The preliminary Peace Conference at Versailles has been postponed until the beginning of February, at the earliest, says Marcel Hutin, editor of the Echo de Paris. This postponement is due to changes in plans because of President Wilson's visit to England and the reconstruction of the British Cabinet, which will occupy Premier Lloyd George as soon as the result of the elections in announced on December 28. Preliminary exchanges, which were to begin in Paris to-day, according to original plans, have also been deferred.

Miss Katherine Stinson Flew a Handley-Page Over London

Will be Remembered as the Aviatrix Who Entertained the Peterboro Exhibition Crowd—Her Machine is Still Here.

AN ANSWER TO RUMOURS

(By Don Chamberlain.)

LONDON, December 21. — Katherine Stinson, the American aviatrix, announced to-day that she will attempt to fly from Europe to America. She expressed confidence in her ability to do what no man has ever done. Miss Stinson is the first pilot of her sex to fly over London. She accomplished the feat yesterday in a Handley-Page machine. The American girl was scheduled to fly to Paris today, where she will enter the employ of the Red Cross.

Peterboro has an interest in Miss Stinson that grew out of her flights here during the last Industrial Exhibition. For some reason the aeroplane she used then is still at the Customs House. The order to forward it to New York did not come through, and from the presence of the machine here developed the most absurd rumours that Miss Stinson had been arrested "after leaving Peterboro, taken to Kingston, and shot as a German spy." This bit of febrile war fiction gained quite a wide circulation here, and some of the citizens who had stood her against a wall before a firing squad in Kingston will be surprised by the above announcement of her flight in a big Handley-Page bombing plane over London.

Four Day Holiday Planned in Blighty

No Traffic on Christmas Afternoon For London's Millions.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A curious state of suspense and doubt exists in political circles here. Candidates who put their fortunes to the test last Saturday have hanging over them during the festive season a sword of Damocles, which falls December 18, but the public seems to care little, being occupied in preparations for a real old-fashioned Christmas, in which store clerks, tram conductors and others, usually condemned to work, will get their share, for business will be practically suspended for four days and London be without traffic on Christmas afternoon.

The Westminster Gazette, the mouthpiece of official Liberalism, in advancing the argument that the apathy is due to the indignation of the electorate at an untimely election, makes a significant statement as to the anticipated result. It says:

"The results of the elections depend almost wholly on the proportions in which the progressive vote is divided between Liberal and Labor. If at all evenly divided a great number of the minority coalition candidates will slip in, making a preposterously inflated Government majority but if unevenly divided, the bulk going in some constituencies to Liberals and in others to Labor, a good many of these seats may be saved and the Government strength proportionately reduced. The general impression is that the Labor vote is heavieh than either of the other parties. If Labour and Liberal had been working together they would have driven the Government hard on Saturday, but no doubt three-cornered fights have been disastrous to both in a great many constituencies. This is what the Government staked on when it forced the election, and in the absence of the alternative vote there is no way of avoiding it."

INFLUENZA IN SOUTH AFRICA COST INSURANCE COMPANIES $7,500,000

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 19.—It is authoritively stated that the Spanish influenza epidemic in South Africa resulted in a financial loss to the insurance companies of a million and a half sterling. A leading manager states that the few weeks of the epidemic cost the companies considerably more than the whole of the heaviest claims of the war paid out in Cape Colony and the Orange Free State.

Christmas Pies

If any thrifty Peterboro housewife thinks she is going to cull some choice recipes from this article, let her sheath her scissors here and now, before there are any hard feelings or misunderstandings. For this is no culinary treatise—such may be found elsewhere in this sheet. It is simply a narrative the aim of which is to amuse and probably instruct those who have not intensified on pies The proportions as given in some of the pies discussed here are unbelievable to us, who are on all sorts of rations, but the story has been told with authority and by those who know the facts.

Since time immemorial the old-time Christmas in England has meant two things—merriment and pies. Now it is easy enough to be merry when pies are in evidence, or at least the where withal to purchase them. And one might scrape up a little joy without pies, but sad to contemplate would be a predicament which we sidetracked merriment altogether in pursuit of pies as we are dangerously prone to do these ration-wide days. So a merry quip and a little information concerning ye old type pies is not amiss, to remind us of the pieful and joyful Christmases we used to know.

The first pies, so Selden tells us, were made in shapes to resemble cradle of Bethlemen babe, hence we till have the crossed bands across the tops of our own tiny pielets, replicas of the original bands which adorned the cradle-shaped pies and were meant to represent the lines bands which held the baby in. The cooks in those days evidently had a corner on all games, for to believe the tales, they put every game bird they could find into these famous pies. It was nothing for a crust to be lined with such makings as twenty salmon, ten peacocks, eggs, raisins, lemon peel, and sugar and spice and everything nice to make a game pie taste like more. The mixture was a mystic wise ceremony, jealously guarded by the chief cook and consuming days in perparation of the actual cooking. The most remarkable pie on record, and one not likely ever to be duplicated, was concocted in 1770, and contained the following bewildering array of ingredients: Two barrels of flour, 20 pounds of butter, four geese, two turkeys, two rabbits, four wild ducks, two woodcocks, six snipes, four partridges, seven blackbirds, six pigeons, two curlews, two neats' tongues, and oh, a few other little things like lemon and orange peel and raisins, and seasoning to make it a real piece de resistance. This pie was nine feet in circumference, and required two men to lift it. This was evidently the crisis in pie making, for never has man heard of such a pie, and indeed they have decreased in size until we can't be sure we will bake any at all, much less the kind that mother used to make.

CITY COUNCILS CAN ADJUST PRICES.

Municipal councils are now empowered to appoint a committee of three resident taxpayers to make a preliminary enquiry into the cost of any of the necessities of life specified by the council, and the price at which they are offered for sale. Evidence can be taken on oath, and if the committee reports that further enquiry is necessary ,the council can appoint a commission for the purpose, composed of three members, one of whom is to be a judge of the county district court, one a representative of labour, and the other a representative of the trade dealing in the articles under investigation. The commission will report its findings to the Minister of Labor and the council, and they will also be published in the local press.

Cleanses Blood, Builds Up Strength Improves Complexion

As a result of debility, sickness or improper diet the blood often becomes weak and unable to free itself of poisons.

Morbid, unhealthy matter accumulates and breaks out in sores that discharge and will not heal.

Washes, salves and ointments are useless because they have no action on the poisoned blood.

But Dr Hamilton's Pills cleanse and enrich the diseased blood, drive out impurities and fill it with nutriment and strong building material.

Ulcers, boils and sores heal up.

Likewise all weakness due to impoverished blood is cured by these famous pills, and anaemia, erysipelas and rheumatism go before it as chaff before fire.

The skin grows smooth, complexion clears, health, vigor and strength are evident on all sides.

A blood remedy for blood diseases, the formula of a famous physician—no improvement can be made on Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Their use extends to the people of many nations and thousands have proved that they do cure when all else fails.

Peterboro County Farmer Suggests Silo Legislation

The following letter which speaks for itself is advertised in the "Farm and Dairy":—

"If the number of deaths that have occurred in silos last fall could be tabulated, the total would stagger us. Laws are already in force requiring safety first precautions in factories and construction work and I am strongly of the opinion that we should have legislation in Ontario without any conditions attached whatever, requiring that no silo be erected without a scaffold at the top strong enough for men to cross on with safety. A few years ago there were no silos erected in our own neighborhood that did not have these scaffolds. In the new silos going up to-day they are left out. This is as true of the patent silos turned out in factories, as it is of the home-built silos erected by the farmers themselves. Perhaps a few instances will illustrate the necessity of what I advocate.

Just this fall in the neighboring county of Hastings a man started to walk across a plank from the top of the silo chute to the blower window. The plank was not secure and he was killed. I understand that Mr. A. C. Hallman, of Breslau, of whose death we all regretted to hear, was killed in the same way in his own silo.

Last spring a young man asked me for advice as to the type of silo to build. I told him that any silos were good, but that all should have a strong scaffold. I was at his place this fall at silo filling time. The builders had put in a scaffold all right, but the young farmer said that not for any money would he cross it himself, and there wasn't a fellow in the crowd that could be induced to cross it to haul up the blower pipe. I went up to investigate. I found that on the far side, and at one side of the blower window, a scantling had been nailed to the side of the silo, a nine inch plank resting on this scantling at one end and on the silo ladder at the other. There was not a spike in the plank to hold it steady and that silo was 14 feet across and 40 feet to the bottom. In another silo I found scaffolding in which two three-inch nails were holding up a scaffold on which two men were supposed to cross and stand while hauling up the blower pipe.

Such Carelessness Almost Criminal

The best scaffolding that can be erected is of two good stout cedar poles built right into the silo. Short pieces of plank can be securely nailed crosswise on these for the operators to walk on. It may be objected that, where the roof of the silo is blown full of silage, this scaffolding might interfere with the settling of the silage. In our own silo the cross pieces are two feet apart and the silage settles right through them. Even if it did clog somewhat, the silage should be tramped each day and when tramping it should be an easy matter to kick off what might have collected on top of the scaffold. Every argument that can be advanced in favor of protective legislation for workers on construction work can, I believe, be advanced in favor of legislation, requiring a proper scaffold in the silo.—Samuel Armstrong, Peterboro County, Peterboro, Ont.

THE BAGDAD RAILWAY IS BADLY RUN DOWN

Germans Allowed Most of the Locomotives to Become Unfit for Use—Danger in Taurus Tunnels.

Line Might Be Completed to Persian Gulf in Two Years, Director Says.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 23.—One of the greatest German schemes which the war has overthrown was the ambition for a German-controlled railway line from Hamburg to Bagdad. With the armistice the Bagdad Railway has entered another phase. Its eventual history rests with the peace conference to decide.

As to the actual condition of the line I had to-day a conversation with M. Edouard Haguenin, Director General of Railways. The tunnels through the Taurus Mountains were opened for broad-guage traffic last month and trains can now run as far as Neisibin, 100 miles west of Mosul. The track throughout is in good condition, but the rolling stock has been much deteriorated by overwork during the war.

Although there are still plenty of freight cars serviceable, two-thirds of the engines are unfit for work through lack of spare parts, which Germany has not supplied. Nevertheless, a limited daily traffic from Constantinople to Neisibin would be possible, together with a larger service of trains in Western Asia Minor, from which the food supplies of Constantinople are drawn, if it were not for the lack of coal, which has brought the working line to extremely reduced and irregular proportions. As regards the continuance of the service, the question of the existing German staff is a vital one.

"Most of our German engineers," said M. Haguenin, "are civilians who have been in this country thirty years. They have the required special knowledge of the Bagdad Railway, without which the line could not be worked. Even should the Allies insist on replacing them by engineers of their own, it would be necessary for the latter to pass a couple of months in collaboration with the present German staff before they would be able to accept the responsibility.

"The system of the Taurus tunnels alone is one of the most difficult in the world. Daily inspection is necessary for the safety of the line."

As to the probable time required to complete the Bagdad Railway to the Persian Gulf, M. Haguenin said that a great deal depended on what the British had done in Mesopotamia. Several hundred miles of tracks laid by the Turks beyond Neisibin would need to be reconstructed, as they were hastily done with poor material. Working from both ends with adequate supplies of material and labour and with the use of the British military railways in Mesopotamia as lines of supply, he thought that trains might be running through to the Persian Gulf in two years.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

LEO CORCORAN DEAD

MOUNT FOREST, Dec. 19.—Leo. Corcoran, a prominent bowler, and manager of last season's hockey team, died at his home yesterday of pneumonia following an attack of influenza. He was 26 years of age and leaves widow and four children the youngest being only two weeks old.

EMPRESS'S WAR RECORD

(1) Captain Geo. S. Webster, R.N.R., of the "Empress of Britain.
(2) Arthur E. Philp, Chief Engineer of the "Empress of Britain."
(3) Six inch gun crew standing by the gun on the "Empress of Britain," at right Chief Officer F. H. Moore, who gave the gunners the range.

THE "Empress of Britain," which sailed from New York on Sunday afternoon with 150 officials of the British War Mission, Y.M.C.A. and Knights of Columbus workers, has already covered 173,130 miles since the outbreak of hostilities, when she was taken over by the British Government and has transported 119,000 troops overseas. She took thousands of Australians and Britishers to Gallipoli, and was one of the transports assigned to take them away. The Suez Canal being closed, she made a 16 months trip around the Cape of Good Hope with troops for German East Africa and also for Mesopotamia. She made eight trips with Canadian troops and for the first seven months of the war, patrolled the South Atlantic as an admiralty cruiser.

It was during one of the trips across the Atlantic with 5,000 troops aboard, that a German submarine launched two torpedoes, one of which, due to a lucky zig-zag, missed the bow by three feet, and the other passed a dozen feet astern. At least a dozen attacks were made upon the "Empress of Britain" during the war, by U-boats.

Captain George S. Webster, R.N.R., who is the present commander of the "Empress of Britain," has made 37 trips across the Atlantic since the outbreak of the war. When the "Empress of Britain" reached New York last Tuesday, she had aboard 2,450 U. S. troops, including 400 sick and wounded heroes, and she is returning to Liverpool for more. When this work of repatriating U. S. troops is finished, she will return to her home port, St. John, New Brunswick.

During the war, the C. P. O. S. ships have transported over a million troops and passengers on war business. Only eight soldiers were lost by enemy action. The "Empress of Russia," now in Liverpool, will take troops to Australia, and then return to her regular route across the Pacific from Vancouver to ports in the far east. The "Empress of Asia" will go back to Vancouver through the Panama Canal with Canadian troops enlisted in British Columbia.

Arthur Edward Philp, O.B.E., Chief Engineer of the "Empress of Britain" and Senior Chief Engineer of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Ltd., has been on the Empress throughout the war and has never missed a trip. He was personally decorated by King George for his services and is an Officer of the Order of the British Empire. His services on transports cover four wars, the Benin and Ashanti expedition, the South African war, and the present war. His fellow officers call him "Pa."

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Mr. Mandel Urges Ruth to Take a Rest. She Refuses.

CHAPTER LXIX.

Ruth had wanted terribly to ask Brian not to take Mollie King out while she was away; but felt she had no right. She was leaving him, he would resent any suggestion as to how he should spend his time during her absence. Then, too, she was happy that he had been so loving and kind at the end of their interview.

Although she had told Brian she was a clerk like all the rest, and she really had meant it, she well knew that Mr. Mandel did not furnish taxis for the others. Yet she saw no sinister reason because she was so favoured. She was the highest paid woman, consequently the most valuable one in his employ. He probably figured that her strength was worth more to him than the price of the taxis.

Her helplessness as regarded Brian's intimacy with Mollie King, sent her heart down sickeningly. Yet she well knew that any false move on her part—while she kept her position—would make a breach between them. That it was already there she would not admit even to herself.

She had forgotten a paper she wished to take with her, so after getting her bag, and giving Rachel directions for Brian's comfort while she was away, she went back to the store to secure it. Mr. Mandel found it for her, then said:

"You have been working hard lately, worrying a little, too, I fear. You have shown it, he answered her questioning look. "Now, my dear Mrs. Hackett, my best interests can only be served when you are feeling at your best, mentally and physically. You've earned a play spell. 'Take a couple of days and go to the Springs"— he named a famous resort near the city she was to visit—"Here is extra money for your expense while there. Don't hesitate to take it, you have earned it."

"Oh, but I couldn't!"

"You couldn't. Why?"

"Oh, I couldn't stay away from Brian, Mr. Hackett, just to have a good time at some fashionable resort. That wouldn't be fair. It is hard enough for him when I am on business. Thank you just the same, Mr. Mandel, but I will come directly home when I finish the work."

Ruth had spoken with feeling. There had been no hesitation in either her speech or her manner. Yet the idea had a wonderful appeal for her; there had been much to attract her in the proposition. It sounded like the rest and also recreation, both of which she knew she needed. Not so much because of her work, as because of her almost constant worry over Brian, and his attitude toward her.

"I am sorry you feel you can't take a rest," was all Mandel said, as he laid the envelope he had offered upon his desk.

"Please do not think me ungrateful. You are very kind to me." Ruth had not intended to show any feeling, but his thoughtfulness had touched her deeply, and there were tears in her eyes when she raised them to his.

"I never think of any but kind thoughts of you, little lady," he replied, with the nearest touch of comeradie in his tones he had allowed himself.

Ruth thought only of Brian, as the train carried her away from New York. Because of his constant fault finding on account of her work, his sensitiveness as to his status in the household, Ruth had not found the spirit to praise and encourage him of late as she used to do when they were first married.

Nor was Ruth the only one who found the tension under which they lived, hard to bear. That he no longer had Ruth's outspoken encouragement to hearten him, to urge him on, was hard for Brian. He had sort of depended on her cheerfulness when things went wrong, or were "slow" at the office. He lived mostly on hope, in those days; clients were few, pay (when he did find one) uncertain. Ruth's cheer was badly needed.—And Mollie King was always sympathetic, always cheerful.

Arrived at her destination, Ruth sent a message to Brian before she left the station. Just a few words, "Arrived safely. Love." But she sent it happily, hoping because of his tenderness when she parted from him that it would find him at home eating the dinner Rachel would have ready.

A man's conscience—perhaps a woman's also—is very elastic. When she was with him, or when, as just before she left his office, Ruth showed her love for him so plainly Brian made all sorts of good resolutions.

So he had this time when Ruth left the office.

"I'll behave myself his time and eat at home," he said aloud as he put away the papers over which he had been working. "It's lonesome as the devil. But Ruth is a good sort."

That Rachel was also an excellent cook may have had something to do with his determination to go home to his dinner.

A woman's understanding seems to consist of understanding that men don't understand her.

It may be that women have no wit, but they have a sense of humor which they perpetrate in the most exaggerated form. It is their choice of husbands.

Next to suffering religious martyrdom, a woman's sweetest privilege is to believe that she has been the guiltless object of some man's hopeless love.

When a man is cornered in deviltry he throws up his hands. When a woman is cornered she kicks up her heels.

After a girl has experienced two or three broken engagements it will be found that the strain has left a certain indelible mark upon her. The mark is usually $.

Women hate snakes, and two of a trade can never agree.

The genius of masculine duplicity never ventured on such tortuous flights as a lazy girl in her efforts to appear charmingly industrious before her fiance.

A man makes a home to escape his enemies and a woman to confound her friends.

Every woman under thirty believes she is an actress, and every actress believes she is under thirty.—Puck.

The Lump's Identity.

The whizzing motorcar struck a stump, and one of the occupants of the back seat, a lady possessed of considerable embonpoint, executed a neat but not gaudy parabola in the atmosphere and alighted by the roadside like a polypus falling from a shot tower.

"I don't believe I have broken any bones," she stated, in reply to the inquiry of the omnipresent bystander, "but there is a lump on this bank that"—

"Lump—nuthin'!" snarled a smothered voice. "I'm the constable that's goin' to arrest you gosh durned joy riders, if I live!"—Judge.

He Misjudged Her.

"If I had my life to live over," she began.

"Yes, I know," he interrupted. "If you had your life to live over you would marry one of the fellows who proposed to you before I came along."

"Nothing of the kind," she replied, "If I had my life to live over I'd marry some weak minded, brutal person. Then I'd have nothing to expect and shouldn't be disappointed."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Kind of Her.

"Why does Miss Howler shut her eyes every time she has high notes to sing?"

"Didn't you know? Well, you see, she is very tender hearted."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Everything. She simply can't bear to see how we suffer."—Exchange.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Drugs and Indigestion.

Like everything else, drugs have their use as well as their abuse, but as a cure for indigestion their value is absolutely nil. True, a little bicarbonate of soda in water will temporarily relieve an attack of heartburn due to acidity, but it will not remove the condition that is causing the heartburn. This can only be remedied by careful dietary. A seidlits powder, too, may—nay, often does—give relief in case of biliousness, but the condition causing the attack must be investigated and a natural remedy applied before permanent relief and freedom from attacks can be expected.

Servant Girls Disappearing.

During the last thirty years the demand for servants has doubled, while the supply has increased only by half—in the last decade only by 5 per cent. In 1870 there was one to every twelve. Even in the recent crisis, when the cities were filled with unemployed, the demand still outran the supply. And yet during the thirty years past the number of self supporting women—that is, the actual labor market—has more than trebled. Forty years ago a woman thrown upon her own resources would tend to select housework for a living—in fact, one woman in two did so select. Thirty years ago only every third woman entered domestic service. Ten years ago only one in four rapped at the kitchen door. The other three applied—where? Every one knows—at the shop, the factory, the store.—McClure's Magazine.

Plato's Tree.

The giant redwood trees of the Pacific coast have a rival in Greece in one respect, for at Athens there lives and even flourishes a tree under which, tradition says, Plato used to expound his doctrines to his disciples. This is an olive tree—one of the longest lived kind among trees—and experts say that the tradition may be true, so far as its age is concerned. It is over twenty-three feet in diameter. For many years it bore no fruit, but was a source of profit to its owner, for every tourist thinks he must visit it. But a year ago it surprised every one by bearing a beautiful crop. The proud owner when the fruit was cured sent presents of these "platonic olives" to all the sovereigns of Europe.—Boston Herald.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Keeping the Chaperon

By OSBORN JONES

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

William Rogers had been promised a "land army" of eight girls to help pick his peach crop, and he was considerably disgruntled when the pompous Mrs. Van Deusen arrived before his farmhouse in her spotless dove-gray limousine with its spotless gray-liveried chauffeur and spotless gray-liveried footman to tell him that the supply of labor was not forthcoming.

"Well, I can't say that I was especially stuck on the idea of having a bunch of girls working in the orchards from the first," he commented. "But you ladies who are boosting this idea talked us farmers into the idea—and besides the peach crop is bully this year and there just isn't a man to be had now." He cast a look all but contemptuous at the two spotless gray-liveried ones and would have suggested to Mrs. Van Deusen that by way of showing her much-vaunted patriotism she might dispense with at least one of these able-bodied retainers, but Mrs. Van Deusen was not interested enough in any one's point of view but her own to be at all likely to suspect his sentiments.

She explained patiently for the second time just wherein lay the hitch. The army of eight girls had been secured. They came from the other end of the state—they were "good, strong, willing girls," Mrs. Van Deusen was sure—and the chaperon had been secured and the cook on the horizon and an order for the first week's supplies made out by the chaperon had already been delivered to Mrs. Van Deusen's provision dealers. The trouble all lay with the absence of an available house in which to shelter the girls. Mrs. Van Deusen had really worn herself quite out, and had used gallons of gasoline scouring the neighboring country for some sort of empty house in which to lodge the girls. She had thought even of setting up cots and other temporary furnishings in one of the nearby school houses but one was positively falling to pieces and the other was already occupied by a gang of Polack's who were keeping the roads in condition for the army trucks. It must have been quite apparent to Mr. Rogers that Mrs. Van Deusen had done her best and that if his peach crop went to waste and the country was thereby deprived of that contribution to the general food supply, it would not be in the least her fault.

"Worst of it is, I counted on those girls," commented the persistent agriculturist leveling his brown eyes on Mrs. Van Deusen's flabby face. "I had a chance to get some Polacks that I could have housed in the sheds, but you'd asked me to save the work for the girls, so I let the chance slip."

"Well, you can't in the least blame me," Mrs. Van Deusen drawled.

"I wasn't blaming you—I was just wondering whether you had thought of putting up the girls yourself. You are a little down on the folks around here because they won't move out and let young girls take their houses — well, there are no more than three in your family and I guess there are twenty rooms in your house."

"Twenty-eight," corrected Mrs. Van Deusen automatically.

"I'd fetch the girls every morning and carry them back at night—"

Mrs. Van Deusen began to grow crimson at the suggestion. Perhaps it had troubled her before but she assured Mr. Rogers that it was "obviously out of the question."

"I'll let them have my own house," declared Rogers, more in defiance than as a result of a calm decision.

"Quite impossible—we are responsible for the girls and obviously we can't board them around promiscuously among the farmers."

But Mr. Rogers explained that he would set up a portable shack for himself quite at the remote end of his large farm and would surrender his entire large old farmhouse to the girls and their chaperon.

So Mrs. Van Deusen went away feeling that she had scored a triumph, and took great pleasure in telling her associates in the patriotic work how she had argued Farmer Rogers into taking the step he had taken. By the next day at nine the portable shack was on its way from the nearest city. The girls were learning their task in the orchard under the guidance of Mr. Rogers' one and only "hired man," and the chaperon, Miss Phoebe Ferris, by profession if not by natural inclination a public school teacher, was working miracles in the old farm house. Incidentally she was making mental comments on the domestic arrangements of bachelors, but the these thoughts were not unkind you could tell from the amused smile that played around her mouth as she put up white swiss curtains at the upstairs windows, rearranged heavy old pieces of furniture and added a hundred and one touches to the place that were to transform it to an Adamless Eden from a place that had surely been Eveless but not surely an Eden. And the cook was pottering over kettles and pans in the old-fashioned kitchen, crooning to herself the satisfaction she felt in doing this, her share, in bringing comfort to the eight girls now in the orchard.

Mrs. Van Deusen did not forget her responsibility and, though she did not forget that Miss Ferris was all of thirty-five and did not miss an opportunity to tell her associates that she was a "plain little motherly body who would be safe anywhere," still she hovered around the farm with what seemed to Mr. Rogers to be unnecessary frequency. He could see quite clearly that she was going to take full personal credit for the bumper crop of peaches his orchard was yielding, and she did seem to forget entirely that by the arrangements he was making he was paying very full value for the amount of labor he received. She apparently forgot that the rent of his house had been a gift since he paid the girls wages that did not take into consideration their shelter. Apparently Mrs. Van Deusen wanted to make perfectly sure that Mr. Rogers kept entirely at the far end of the farm. She even stipulated to Miss Ferris that he should never take a meal in the house, "and I want to be sure," she told her, "that he shows no signs of attention to any of the girls. It is your responsibility and mine," she said condescendingly. "So please make a point to be with the girls as much as possible when he is with them. You would have a restraining influence, I am sure."

Miss Ferris did not take the trouble to remind Mrs. Van Deusen that as Mr. Rogers was staid and studious and forty and the girls were for the most part uneducated young Polack girls on their vacations from factories it was not likely that he would find much to interest him in their presence. Instead she looked very grave and assured Mrs. Van Deusen that she would keep a motherly eye on everything. And Mrs. Van Deusen made it quite clear to Mr. Rogers himself that he was not even to cross the threshold of his own house; hence arose within Mr. Rogers' breast an insatiable desire to do just that thing. The fact was, from glimpses he had secured from outside, a marvelous transformation had been wrought in the interior of that house. The swiss curtains in the windows swaying back and forth in the breeze, the glimpses of bouquets of flowers on the tables, the airiness and spaciousness of the house as contrasted with the stuffiness and formality of it as it had been handed down to him by his old aunt and uncle five years before fairly staggered him. Apparently it had become the house he vaguely dreamed that it might become, yet Miss Ferris had brought only a few hampers of "fixings" and had made no definite change that he knew about save to move some of the furniture into the attic "to make more room." She had asked his permission to do that.

No doubt Mr. Rogers was sorely tempted; at any rate, he fell and, forgetting his promise to Mrs. Van Deusen, sneaked into that transformed house of his, one day when Miss Ferris was in the orchard with the girls, and looked around. What had been done he could not say, but that the house had been transformed into a home, he knew, and it was only by dint of firm resolve—and fear of being caught by Miss Ferris, or worse still, by Mrs. Van Deusen—that he tore himself from the charming rooms.

The experience left an impress that seemed really out of proportion to the importance of it. It seemed to William Rogers as if seeing that modified interior left him transformed as if he had gone through a great experience. It left him more with a desire to seek out the woman who had wrought the change than with a desire to revisit it again as it would be after the eight girls had returned from their day's work. So it was that a message was carried by the solitary hired man through the cook to Miss Ferris that Mr. Rogers had important business to discuss in the orchard after the girls had retired.

In a week more the girls had gone and the peaches had all been sold, and thereby contributed to the national food supply, and Mrs. Van Deusen was telling guests at dinner parties in her spacious house how successful had been her work.

"And you didn't know I was a match-maker, did you?" she would say. "There was a lonely old bachelor farmer and I just made up my mind to find a wife for him. So I worked my little plan to get her in there to transform his house and show him how much he needed a wife, and I threw them together as much as I decently could and—well, I have actually made the match. They were married yesterday and they have settled down there in the old house with the proceeds of the peach crop that I got for him."

In a Fort William school recently the little folk were required to write compositions on the old familiar, "How I Spent My Holiday," and one tot naively but conscientiously wrote that she had not done much as she had a "sore throat and rash." MECHANICAL EXHIBITS.

The New Idea Is "Try It Yourself" Instead of "Hands Off."

"Try It Yourself," instead of "Hands Off" is proving to be such a success for the motto of a museum that an enormous one to be run on this principle is to be built at Munich. Thousands of machines will be so arranged that any person who wishes—even boys and girls—may turn a lever or touch a button and so start an electric motor running a pump or a machine tool drilling a hole into a block of steel.

The idea has been well tested and found to be practical. In the present industrial museum at Munich about half of the great number of machines on exhibition are arranged so that visitors may run them without assistance. Automatic attachments are provided so that no injury can come to the machines: in fact, in most instances all the visitor is allowed to do is to press the button to start the wheels moving.

The fascination of controlling power is enough to draw great numbers of people to the museum and to make the erection of a much larger and more ambitions exhibition worth while.—Saturday Evening Post.

Lone Trees Are Dangerous Shelters.

Getting under the lone tree to escape wetting when a sudden shower comes up is risky. The smaller the shower, it seems, the more deadly the lightning that accompanies it, and a lone tree standing in a field is an inviting attraction for lightning. Better take a ducking than act as terminal for an electric current.—Iowa Homestead.

MATCHING UP GENTLEMEN.

A Striking Definition of the Very Essence of Aristocracy.

There is an ancient British anecdote still in perfectly good standing which gives a definition of a "lady." This states that the mistress of a house on returning from an afternoon's shopping was informed by her housemaid, "A lady was here to see you, mum." Asked the mistress, "How do you know it was a lady?" Said the housemaid, "Because she was covered with joolry and smelt of sherry somethin' awful, mum."

A New Yorker who goes to Canada annually on business recalled the anecdote the other day in telling of a Canadian definition of a "gentleman" which he received some years ago.

"I was at a dance in Ottawa," he said, "the year before the Boer war. One of my partners was a snip of a miss who had virulent Anglomania. The talk ran upon class distinctions, and she voiced some bizarre opinions as to the gulf between 'gentlemen' and all other men.

"'Well, won't you please tell me exactly what is a gentleman?' I finally asked.

"She was puzzled, but just for a moment. Her eyes ran around the room until they rested upon Lord Ava, the eldest son of the then Marquis of Dufferin.

"'A gentleman,' said my partner, 'is a man who knows Lord Ava well enough to ask him for a match.'"—New York Times.

Japs Erect War Museum.

To commemorate the services of officers and men who have been serving abroad in the Japanese-German war, a building has been erected at Fukiyama garden, Tokyo, where all war trophies will be assembled, under the care of the naval and military departments. The collection will include soldiers' uniforms, pictures of sea craft, photographs of engagements in which Japanese vessels have taken part, and various weapons used by the enemy. The museum was named the Junmei-fu by the emperor on June 16th, at the request of the minister of the imperial household.

Rockweed Soup.

Rockweed soup, rockweed omelet and rockweed pie may soon be found on the table of the housewife who is alert to obtain nutritious and inexpensive food, says Popular Science Monthly. A considerable variety of edible seaweeds, of which rockweed is one, can be found along both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of this country. In Maine rockweed is being gathered and prepared for market.

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humors. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills today.

FELL RALLYING MEN.

How Capt. R. A. West Won His V. C.

Particulars may be cited of two cases which exemplify the bravery shown by men who receive the Victoria Cross.

Capt. Richard Annesley West, of a tank corps, while commanding a battalion of light tanks, found the infantry endangered by an enemy counter-attack. Despite extremely heavy machine-gun fire and the propinquity of the enemy, West rallied men who had lost their officers and hastily issued orders. West then rode up and down in front of them in face of certain death, encouraging the men and calling to them: "Stick to it, men; show them fight; and for God's sake, put up a good fight." He fell riddled with machine-gun bullets. His magnificent bravery inspired the infantry to redouble efforts and the hostile attack was defeated. West was a Canadian.

Another member of the tank corps, Lieut. Cecil Harold Howell, showed equal disregard for his personal safety. When commanding the whippet light tanks he left the tank and crossed open ground under heavy shell and machine-gun fire in order to rescue the crew of another whippet which had sideslipped into a large shell hole and had overturned and was afire. The tank door was jammed against the side of the shell hole. Howell, unaided, dug away the entrance to the door and released the crew, thereby saving them from otherwise certain death.

Social Hygiene.

The Social Hygiene Association of Canada has endorsed the principles adopted at the New York conference, and the Dominion Government has been requested to adopt the general principles in any plan which they may have in view for Dominion control. The principles are as follows:

1. That the single standard of morals should prevail for men and women.
2. That continence is compatible with health and intellectual vigor for both sexes.
3. That men and women should serve together whenever possible on bodies whose functions concern the development and enforcement of moral standards.
4. That prostitutes be not treated as a class apart from other women, and that prostitution be not recognized as a trade.
5. That all measures, either preventive or repressive, concerned with social morality, apply impartially to men and women.
6. That a simultaneous vigorous attack on venereal disease should be made, and that the issues of public health and morals be thoroughly correlated.
7. That sound sex education be incorporated into one entire educational system in homes, school, college, and the church and press.
8. That social and economic adjustments granting to the individual decent living conditions and adequate recreation are essential to progress in social morality. These adjustments concern especially:
   (a) Housing conditions.
   (b) Industrial conditions, including conditions of work and wages.
   (c) Proper and sufficient recreational opportunities.

Amends.

"Would you believe it now, Miss Sparks?" said the genial stout young man as he mopped his brow. "I weigh all of 250 pounds."

Miss S. (sighing)—I suspected as much just now when we were dancing and you stepped on my foot.

G. S. Y. M.—Oh, I'm sorry. Please forgive me. The very first thing in the morning I'll go on a diet.—New York Post.

Unbidden Guest.

Mrs. Uptyump (to hostess)—That grizzly faced brute standing over there at the door had such poor taste as to refuse to get me a glass of water. Surely you didn't intend to invite such a man to your reception?

Mrs. Hostess—Don't fret, my dear, I didn't invite him. He is my husband. —Calumet.

Entitled to It.

The small boy was seeing, for the first time, a picture of Atlas supporting the earth. After looking at it for a minute he turned to his father and asked: "Why doesn't he take his base?"

"What do you mean?"

"Don't you know the rule, pop, when a man has been hit by a pitched ball?" —Puck.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Dressing Wounds.

For either moist or dry dressings for wounds glucose may be used. For the former the surface of the wound is first thoroughly cleaned with sterilized cotton swabs moistened with a 4.5 solution of glucose in water. This forms an isotonic saccharine "serum." It is then covered with dressing soaked in the solution, which is secured in the usual manner with sterile wool and bandages. For the dry dressing powdered glucose is dusted over the surface of the wound. In some few cases this is painful, although the moist dressings occasion no pain. The dressings are renewed every day for infected wounds and thoroughly cleansed at each dressing. When nearly disinfected the dressing is changed only on alternate days and then less frequently as healing progresses. Glucose appears to favor granulation and cicatrization.

CLOTHES AND THE STATUE.

Creased Trousers Now In Statuary Hall in the Capitol.

Creased trousers have broken into statuary hall, in the capitol, where bronze and marble statesmen for years have gazed at each other in silence with clothes that bagged at the knees and bore the appearance of having otherwise been used up. But when the statue of Zachariah Chandler, formerly senator from Michigan, arrived a little while ago a new style was set. Zachariah is chiseled in a fashion suit—a frock coat and trousers with creases so sharp they would cut your finger.

Lewis Cass' trousers bag frightfully at the knees. Daniel Webster stands face to face with Chandler in a cutaway coat that is awfully mussed. General Lew Wallace is near by, with his cuffs rolled up and the appearance of never having seen a tailor. Frances Willard, the only woman in the aggregation, wears a dress that looks like it had been used as a sleeping robe.

But Zachariah Chandler's sartorial effect is marvelous. His frock coat is clothing store chart perfection, and his collar and tie are arranged in the most approved form. He has no cuffs on his trousers, but they fit him well.—New York Herald.

Captain Scott's Ship.

Captain Scott's ship, the Terra Nova, will not be taken to London for exhibition purposes. She has been repurchased by the original owners and will proceed to Newfoundland, where she will again be employed in sealing. Of the natural history collections aboard the ship when she arrived at Cardiff, perhaps the most important, and from a personal point of view certainly the most precious, is the collection of fossils discovered by Captain Scott and Wilson during the ill fated return journey from the south pole. This box of fossils was found on a sledge when the relief party arrived at the place where Captain Scott and his companions perished.

Moving Pictures and Surgery.

In a description of the use of the moving picture as an aid to the study of surgery the Berliner Tageblatt says: "We looked with emotion upon the late, never to be forgotten Professor Berkmann in the fact of amputating a limb, and later there was thrown upon the screen every detail of an abdominal operation. Other operations were shown, and then the spectator saw in magnified pictures the pulsations of a frog's heart and the movement of the stomach and the digestive organs. Among the most interesting of the pictures was the series which showed the effect of various poisons on the heart action."

Human Body Gives Off Light.

Is the human body luminous? Commandant Darget of the French Academy of Sciences maintains that the human organism gives off radiations that act on the sensitive plate much like the X rays or the radium emanation. One French firm has several times been obliged to discharge men and women who fog the photographic plates when manipulating them.—Chicago Tribune.

The Intentions of Olga

By IMES M'DONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

By birth Olga Mivchlakoff was half American, but in looks and temperament, all Russian. When she was six years old her American mother had brought her back to Indiana, never again to return to the old, tumbledown estate of her Russian father. At the time she had no understanding of the reason for this, and though she never missed to any extent her gruff, rough-bearded father, she did dream of the old half-ruined castle in which she was born, and the sturdy, kindly peasants who were so like children all grown up.

By the time she was sixteen, the fine thread of her dreams had woven itself into the fabric of desire—the desire to be an artist, and her American mother, being an intelligent as well as a practical person, saw to it that Olga should get the best art training obtainable in the locality in which they lived. But when she was twenty Olga had outgrown the possibilities of that locality, and with a little sigh her mother sent her to New York.

Her mother was much surprised a little more than a year later when Olga wrote that she was working in a commercial studio at thirty-five dollars a week, for she herself had been teaching school for fifteen years and had only reached twelve hundred a year. However, two years later Mrs. Mivchlakoff married again—an old sweetheart of her youth, and Olga breathed with a new feeling of freedom.

In spite of the fact that in Monon, Indiana, Olga would have been looked upon as a terrible young person, she was a demure, conventional, little thing deep down inside. Her mother was immeasurably horrified on her last visit to Olga in New York to find that young woman with fluffy shorn hair after the style of New York's bohemia.

But the conventional Olga went blithely on her unconventional way. She was making sixty dollars a week now, and she and Clara Sommers, the newspaper woman with whom she lived, put their savings together and found, to their joy, that they had enough for a modest little home in the country. So the summer Olga was twenty-seven they chose a pretty little place within commuting distance of New York. That same summer Olga's salary was raised to seventy-five dollars a week, and she decided to get a small car. The car necessitated a garage, and the garage needed a builder, so the village carpenter was called into consultation and given the job.

At two o'clock the following Saturday afternoon, Olga arrived from the city hot and eager for the cool bath that awaited her. She slipped into fresh clothes and pulled a bright-colored smock over her pretty bobbed head, then skipped out into the garden to watch the progress of the garage building which was half completed.

Stephen Niles, the village carpenter, saw her coming. He was nailing the sheeting on the roof, and he stared in surprise as she scrambled up the ladder and slid along the slanting roof toward him.

"You're getting along beautifully, aren't you?" she smiled.

"Oh, fair," conceded Stephen Niles.

He had given women but little thought until he saw Olga Mivchlakoff, but he thought her the strangest creature of them all, and at the same time the most wonderful.

When they descended from the roof that afternoon she sat on a sawhorse in the shade and nonchalantly watched him measuring and sawing some boards.

"You don't quite approve of me, do you, Stephen?"

He laid down his saw deliberately. "Most people don't approve of what they don't understand," he said, looking at her thoughtfully.

"You blessed man!" she laughed. "Did you know that you were a philosopher?"

"I know this much," he said slowly. "I can't do any work when you are around. I haven't done a dollar's worth since you came this afternoon."

"Oh," she threw up her hands in mock despair, "he's temperamental, too."

And it all happened just as he feared it would. The next afternoon he came over just to look over the work—he never worked on Sunday at his trade, but the girls were working.

They pressed him to stay to supper, and reluctantly he stayed. And afterwards Olga sat with him in the shadows and chattered on and on.

"Now that you approve of me more," she said, "you can see how easy I am to understand, can't you, Steve?"

"I don't suppose," he said, slowly, "you'd hurt anyone on purpose," his strong hands gripped tight her arms and he looked down into her upturned face trying to read her heart through the darkness. "I don't suppose you would, but after you'd made me love you what did you figure to do about it?"

"Oh, carpenter-man," murmured Olga, leaning toward him eagerly, "after I'd made you love me, I figured on marrying you, Steve."

Of course her friends said she was a fool—her talent and culture wasted—that they could never have anything in common, but the other night I saw them at a restaurant and a certain question keeps recurring to me, "What is this wonderful thing that has happened to Olga Mivchiskoff?"

The Jack Captured the Queen and King.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

"Jack o' Spades," Culbert called him that first morning he had gone to work in the Buckley building. Protests to the effect that his name was John Symonds were of no avail. His name was Jack, and he was as black as the ace of spades, so the name clung.

At first he was angry, but one could not remain angry long with Kingsland Culbert, and in the end Jack wound up by paying him a hero worship that at times threatened to cost the man his position, for with Culbert in the elevator it ran express to the next to the top floor, no matter what the other passengers might threaten.

But Jack had gained the position through having saved Buckley's little girl from a runaway accident, and he merely smiled tolerantly at the complaints and suggested that perhaps the elevator had become unmanageable.

Until Edith McQueen came Culbert had reigned alone, but after that he was relegated to second place, the only instance wherein, according to Ben Hodgman, the queen outranked both king and jack in the pack.

Miss McQueen was employed by Hodgman & Pettit, whose office was on the third floor, and it was Culbert's habit to drop off at their offices on his way out to lunch and pick up the girl. He had obtained the position for her, and it was understood that they were engaged, though no golden band announced that fact.

Then there came the day when Jack noticed that Miss McQueen had been crying when she came in. Culbert did not arrive until late, and his face was drawn and very white. He did not even smile when he nodded to Jack. When he went out to lunch he stayed twice as long as usual, and when he did return it seemed to Jack that he had had more than the one cocktail he usually allowed himself.

Miss McQueen did not go out to lunch at all, and when her employers had ridden down to lunch together Jack slipped into the office to ask if he could bring her in something. There he found her with her head upon her arms. Her eyes glistened with tears as she raised her face at the sound of his entrance.

"Don't you want a cup o' tea, Miss Queenie?" he pleaded. "It's sho' good for the headache."

She shook her head with a wan little smile, and Jack slipped out again. That night the car passed Culbert's door twice before it stopped for him. A king had been deposed.

But he was reinstated again because of his evident suffering. After that first day he did not repeat the cocktail episode; indeed, he seemed oblivious to lunchtime and never by any chance used the elevator when Miss McQueen might happen to be going out or in.

Jack pondered the situation, but there was only one conclusion possible in his limited experience. There had been a quarrel, and both were too proud to speak first.

It grieved him because they were good friends of his, these two, and their quarrel hurt him as much as it seemed to hurt them. More than once he was tempted to speak to one or the other and tell how the other suffered but a certain delicacy held him back and he could only miserably wait the turn of events.

Then came Jack's scare. It was a dull afternoon, and he let the elevator drop slowly down. At the ground floor he threw open the door to look up at a huge policeman; not Charlie, who had the beat and who sometimes came in to get warm, but another man, a stranger.

Though he had never had direct dealings with the police, Jack was afraid of them. To him they were not guardians of the peace. They were men who arrested people. When the big man demanded to know which office Miss McQueen was in, refreshing his memory as to the name from a formidable looking document, Jack's heart sank.

"I want to see her about a stolen watch," he added, and Jack's misery was complete. The little chatelaine she had worn had been replaced lately by a more elaborate affair of gold with a long chain. It must be this one that was wanted.

There was only one thing to be done. Hadn't Mr. Culbert got the janitor out of jail that time he had trouble with his wife? Jack ran the car up to the sixth floor and with a vague "To the left" shut the door and dropped down to the third.

He burst in upon Miss McQueen with a face gray with horror and excitement. She rose uncertainly at his call and came into the hall.

He fairly dragged her into the car and shot up to the top floor. Through the lattice guard he could see the officer descending the stairs. Some one had told him where the girl worked, and he was going after her.

Panting with fear, he stopped at the seventh floor and pushed Miss McQueen into Culbert's office, closing and locking the door after him. Culbert looked up wearily from the desk.

"What's the matter, Jack?" he demanded, with a formal bow to the girl.

"Dar's a policeman after her," he explained. "She done stole a watch, and he's after her."

"What are you talking about?" Culbert cried. "Miss McQueen a thief! Impossible!"

"He done say he want to see her about a watch that was stole," insisted Jack. "Ah done hear him."

"A policeman wishes to see me?" asked the girl. "About a watch?" Jack nodded. "I think I can explain," she went on, turning to Culbert. "When—when it happened I stopped wearing your watch and used mother's. I left yours on the bureau, and when I came home it was gone. I made a complaint to the police, and I suppose they have caught the thief and wish me to identify my property."

"But what have I to do with it?" he asked.

"I don't know," she replied. "Jack just came after me, his face livid with fear. I supposed that something terrible had happened, that perhaps"—

"I was in trouble," Culbert suggested, supplying the break. "I have been tempted to, but it seemed cowardly to kill myself. What I cannot understand is Jack's chain of reasoning."

"Ain't lawyers for to keep people from goin' to jail?" the boy demanded. "And ain't you the bes' lawyer?"

"You cannot expect me to answer 'no' to that," laughed Culbert.

"Dat's it," explained Jack. "I brung her up here to save her."

The two threw back their heads and laughed, and in that laugh the misunderstandings were forgotten. Culbert tucked her under his arm in the old familiar way and unlocked the door.

"I guess I'll go down with you and see the officer," he said. "It looks important to have your attorney."

He threw open the door, and Jack slipped out. There was a soft but significant sound that brought a grin to Jack's face, and then the two followed him into the car.

The big policeman grinned at Jack in most friendly fashion when the interview concluded, and he stepped into the car. On the up trip Culbert slipped a bill into his hand.

"There's a piece of wedding cake goes with this," he said, "but that comes a little later. This is a time, my boy, when the Jack of Spades captured the Queen of Hearts and the King of Idiots."

"Yessir," assented Jack, wondering what it all meant. He knew about the wedding cakes and ten dollar bills. The rest was Greek, but satisfactory because his king and queen were pleased.

An Aeroplane Compass.

A compass has now been made for aeroplane pilots that will automatically make the necessary allowance for the side drift of the machine. An aeroplane flying across the wind may drift to one side as much as twenty miles in an hour's flight, so that in such a wind an ordinary compass would be useless, while the standard methods of a ship's captain for calculating and allowing for the drift are hardly practical for an airship. The new compass has a transparent bottom, so that the aviator can see the earth below through it. On starting his flight he sets an arrow to the direction he wishes to go and then watches to see if objects on the earth move parallel to the arrow or go across it diagonally. If they move parallel the arrow is correctly pointed, and he knows there is no side drift. If the objects on the earth go across diagonally he must straighten out his course until their movement is parallel to his arrow, which will make an exact allowance for the drift.—Saturday Evening Post.

Cutting Iron Under Water.

A German inventor has made an oxyhydrogen burner that cuts metals under water. Hitherto this has been a difficult thing to accomplish. Most iron cutting tools work very slowly and unsatisfactorily under water, and the oxyhydrogen flame in the ordinary burner is immediately extinguished when immersed. In the new apparatus the burner is protected by a bell-shaped metal hood. A powerful jet of compressed air keeps water out and effectually protects the gas orifice. Sixteen feet below the surface of the water the burner has cut through a bar of iron two and one-half inches square in thirty seconds. It can cut a twelve inch slot in a three quarter inch plate in one and a half minutes. The burner should be useful to divers for cutting iron and steel in wrecks, for removing rivets, boring holes and other submarine work.

Chicago Shines in Electricity.

According to the technical magazine Power, Chicago produces and uses more electricity than any other city in the world. The output of 303 electric supply undertakings in Great Britain for the year 1911-12 amounted to 1,127,490,742 units, but Chicago by itself has an annual output of over 800,000,000 and expects within a year to turn out 1,000,000,000.

Mayor Duncan Elected by Acclamation for 2nd Term

Nine Candidates Proposed for Board of Education—Four Vacancies to be Filled—Mr. W. H. Moore Elected to Utilities Commission Without Opposition.

MRS. MORRIS A CANDIDATE

MAYOR.

GEORGE HENRY DUNCAN, proposed by W. H. Bradburn, seconded by Roland Denne. (Elected by acclamation.)

UTILITIES COMMISSIONER.

WILLIAM HENRY MOORE, proposed by T. F. Matthews, seconded by Jos. J. Duffus. (Elected by acclamation.)

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

ROLAND DENNE, proposed by W. G. Morrow, seconded by J. J. Turner, jr.

VINCENT EASTWOOD, proposed by J. J. Turner, Jr., seconded by W. G. Morrow.

WILLIAM H. PRETTY, proposed by Frank Whitehouse, seconded by J. J. Turner, Jr.

EDWIN BRUCE FOWLER, proposed by V. Eastwood, seconded by A. Stevenson.

JOHN A. McKONE, proposed by G. L. Hay, seconded by J. J. Turner, Jr.

ALBERT ALLAN FOWLER, proposed by Samuel Taylor, seconded by Joseph Succee.

MRS. KATE ETHEL MORRIS, proposed by W. H. Hill, seconded by A. Stevenson.

WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON, proposed by W. H. Hill, seconded by W. H. Bradburn.

GEORGE N. GORDON, proposed by John Edgar, seconded by Geo. H. Duncan.

This morning's municipal nomination disposed of two of the elective offices without a contest. Mayor Duncan and W. H. Moore were returned by acclamation, Mr. Moore continuing as Utilities Commissioner and especially as trustee of the waterworks department, in the administration of which he has given long and faithful service.

Nine candidates were proposed for the four vacancies in the Board of Education. The members, whose terms expire, are Roland Denne, Vincent Eastwood, A. A. Fowler and G. N. Gordon. A few days ago Mr. Eastwood announced his retirement.

Mrs. Morris Nominated.

The nomination of Mrs. Morris reflects the new and virtually universal recognition of the right of women to share in the conduct of public affairs, in which they have a vital, perhaps a primary interest. It is also a belated admission of their ability and fitness for positions that have been monopolized by men. Whatever be the results of the elections for the Board of Education, the nomination of Mrs. Morris was a quiet intimation that the new order of things, the assertion of woman's equality with men in the direction and control of public affairs, has reached Peterborough.

Mayor Duncan's Address.

After thanking his proposers, Mayor Duncan expressed his appreciation of the confidence the ratepayers had placed in him by re-electing him by acclamation for a second term. He promised to give the city's administration the most careful attention. He outlined the problems that confronted the incoming Council, and said that he hoped the business would be conducted with the progressiveness that was demanded by the returning normal conditions of peace. He referred to the question of the two-platoon system for the fire hall, which had been investigated during the past year, and reviewed the incidents of the Hunter street bridge preliminaries, which had been brought to a halt by

The Peace Conference

Feeding the Liberated Nations is a Big Problem for the Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 23.—President Wilson's conference to-day and to-morrow will virtually complete preliminaries he is expected to dispose of before going to England.

They will probably lay the principal part of the groundwork for the actual peace conference.

Mr. Wilson considers the most pressing of all the problems before the Entente nations in a fair way toward being solved. There is the question of supplying food to the starving peoples of liberated countries. It now seems probable that the work will be handled principally by the United States through Herbert C. Hoover. Satisfactory understanding appears to be in sight. Participation by the United States in various councils that have been handling food questions, matters of shipping, and the like, is being gradually wound up as American officials are trending toward the opinion that there are proper subjects for the consideration of a league of nations, or at least, of preliminary organizations which may precede it. Some of those who have been giving the subject close study and have been following the conferences with Entente representatives say they would not be surprised if a real foundation of a league of nations were to be laid in co-operative arrangements between the United States and the Allies for handling these fundamental questions.

Bloody Fighting By Hun Factions

Liebknecht's Group Release Comrades from Prison — Women's and Soldiers' Council Gather Forces—Bolshevik are Defeated.

ZURICH, December 23. — Bloody street fighting at Essen between the forces of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council and the Spartacides, was reported in a despatch received here to-day. There were many casualties. The Spartacides apparently were defeated.

Rioting started when the leaders of a strike at the Bottorr mine were arrested by the agents of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council. The Spartacides obtained reinforcements and attacked the prison, releasing their comrades and imprisoning the Soviet representatives.

Shortly afterwards an armed mob marched up on the Moiller mine and attempted to destroy the plant. The Workmen's and Soldiers' forces, planting machine guns at strategic points, met the rioters with a deadly fire and dispersed them. Many fell.

Chaotic Conditions Exist in Bavaria

Three Parties Unite and Issue Ultimatum on Bavarian Government —State their Grievances.

(Special to Examiner.)

MUNICH, December 23. — So chaotic have conditions become during the past week or two that three of the various leading parties have combined, for the first time in years, to issue what amounts to an ultimatum to the Bavarian government. The Bavarian Peoples' Party, the German Peoples' Party, and the Munich Branch of the Liberal Party, have signed an appeal which says that — "Recent occurrences, especially those of the last few days, leave no doubt that we are facing danger from anardom of assembly exists no longer, and dom of asembly exists no longer, and the ballot is at stake."

Germany Received Wide Shock When It Heard of Wilson's Speech

(Special to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, December 23. — Germany received a rude shock when it heard of President Wilson's Speech in Paris favoring punishment for war-makers. The fact was made clear to-day that "Good Germans" fear the peace conference will confound them with the guilty.

The Germans have been getting ready to have their delegates at the peace conference receive Wilson's terms with enthusiasm, believing him the only man capable of saving the world from future wars. Hence the jar when he mentions punishment. Wilson's attitude was the biggest topic in Berlin to-day.

The German peace delegates, it appears, will object to any penalty for the Kaiser, which would make him a national hero. They don't want a "return from Elba."

All the war makers are now unpopular in Germany, with the exception of Field Marshal Von Hinderburg. General Ludendorff is the worst hated. The militarists are blamed for the present situation but the general feeling to-day appears to be "let bygones be bygones."

Sentiment is very bitter toward the Kaiser and the Crown Prince as an institute, but there is little personal feeling against them. A great many people seem to feel that the loss of their thrones was the safest punishment.

A War Service Gratuity Provided for Members of the Canadian Militia

One to three Months Pay for the Land Forces—Adjustment of Arrears.

SOME RESTRICTIONS

OTTAWA, Dec. 23. — An order in Council was on Saturday passed by the Cabinet Council authorizing the payment of a "war service gratuity," to be payable to the naval and land forces of Canada, in place of post-discharge pay. Under this enactment the amount to be paid is graduated up to six months' pay and allowances, exclusive of subsistence allowance or allowances in lieu of rations and quarters, according to the length and nature of service.

For the members of the land forces who have served at any time overseas, which means on the strength for pay and allowances of some recognized overseas establishment, and were on the strength of the land forces on active service on the date of the armistice, November 11, 1918, the gratuity is graded as follows:

For three years' service or over, 183 days' pay and allowances.

For two years' service and under three years, 153 days' pay and allowances.

For one year's service and under two years, 122 days' pay and allowances.

For less than one year, 92 days' pay and allowances.

One To Three Months' Pay.

For the members of the land forces who were on the strength on active service on the date of the armistice, and have not served overseas, on the strength for pay and allowances of some recognized overseas establishment, the gratuity is graded as follows:

For three years' service or over, 92 days' pay and allowances; for two years' service and under three years, 61 days' pay and allowances; for one year's service and under two years, 31 days' pay and allowances; under one year no gratuity is given.

A minimum of $100 in the case of men with dependents who were eligible to receive separation allowance, and $70 in the case of men without such dependents, is provided for as in the case of those who have served overseas.

As regards those who have not served at the front in an actual theatre of war and were not on the strength of the force on the 11th November last, no benefit is given under the order in Council. These cases are already provided for under the order in Council regarding post-discharge pay.

For members of the naval forces of Canada effectually the same provisions are made.

Payment of the gratuity will be made as follows: 31 days' pay and allowances on the date of discharge, and the remainder in alternate monthly payments of 30 and 31 days' pay and allowances.

Some Restrictions.

Certain restrictions are placed upon the granting of the gratuity. For instance, if a man is discharged with ignominy or for misconduct, the gratuity is not payable. Further, while the officer or man is undergoing treatment by, and it in receipt of full pay and allowances from, the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, the gratuity is withheld until such treatment and pay have ceased.

Any post-discharge pay paid under pervious orders in Council will be deducted from the amount of the war service gratuity.

It is also provided that where separation allowance was issuable during service, and the dependent is still eligible, the portion of the gratuity equal to separation allowance will be paid direct to the dependent.

Adjustment of Arrears.

Regarding the adjustment of arrears, where the whole or any part of post-discharge pay has already been paid under previous orders in

THE BIG NOISE PROMISES A WIDE OPEN CONFERENCE

Wilson Made Three Speeches the First Week He Was In Paris—Free Discussion.

By Robert J. Bender.
(United Press.)

PARIS, Dec. 23.—President Wilson, pursuing his policy of the freest discussion of peace covenents, will deal directly with the people of the Allied countries. Thus will millions participate in the preliminary conference and make their influence felt at the Versailles Congress.

To reach their vast audience the President will make public the speeches in England and Italy, it became known to-day, in addition to speaking through the medium of the press. He will pursue this course while conferring with the Allied statesmen.

That President Wilson is already getting the ear of the Allied peoples is indicated by the hundreds of notes he has received from all classes expressing sympathy with his policies and promising him support.

Three Speeches.

During his first week in Paris, the President made three speeches and gave an interview to the Press, all of which were intended for public consumption. He has given the heartiest approval to plans for him to speak direct to the people in industrial communities and elsewhere in England, and to a similar programme for his trip to Italy. While in England he will also confer with British statesmen.

The President believes such a course necessary to clarify the American position and make plain America's peace aims. He is confident that by this means he can show the people that the American programme will be developed so as to assure a just peace for all. This programme, he believes, will appeal particularly to the liberals and thinkers of Europe.

Perplexing Problem.

The situation of the small European nations is deeply perplexing. Many factions are seeking the President's ear, believing he can best serve their particular interests. The President will adhere to the principle of self-determination, pointing out that these factions should get together and determine their united aims.

British Notify Dutch Govt.

Will Invade Dutch Territory to Forward Supplies to British Army.

Special to The Examiner:

BRUSSELS, Dec. 23.—Great Britain was reported to-day to have informed Holland of its intention to forward supplies to the British army on the Rhine by way of the Scheldt river and Dutch Limburg.

An altercation between the Allies and Holland arose during the war over the Dutch granting permission for the Germans to move supplies through the Province of Limburg. Holland assured the Allies that only peace time materials, such as gravel, was being transported. Recent despatches reported that Belgium plans to transport troops and material from Allied countries by way of the Scheldt, the mouth of which is wholly within Dutch territory.

A PEACE CHRISTMAS

Glad Hand of Friendship Will be Extended to President Wilson.

GAIETY RELEASED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 27. — Commenting upon the visit of President Wilson to England the Daily Mail says:

"We shall give him of our best. It is with that desire that our people have learned with especial satisfaction that the fullest panoply of honour will be spread to welcome our notable guest. Mr. Wilson is not coming here for politics. His visit is for international consideration and is to visibly cement the two English speaking peoples, cradled in whose hands reposes the new-born peace of the world. We behold a Christmas of joy unexampled in the rugged history of our race. It is a peace Christmas, many of our soldiers are back again, and our tortured prisoners are coming home. Gaiety at last is released from the bonds of anxiety and privation, and glows like fire in our hearts. At this season of all, the President's visit is a heartening augury for the world at peace, since it founded the united purpose of British and American democracies."

Christmas For Former Kaiser

William Hohenzollern Will Deliver the Sermon.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Wm. Hohenzollern has arranged for himself a Christmas celebration after the traditional German style, as far as circumstances will permit, according to a despatch to the "Daily Express" from Amsterdam to-day. The arrangements by the Emperor's insistence, will include elaborate religious ceremonies on Christmas eve. The idea of using the village chapel for these, however, has proved impracticable for various reasons, one of them being fear of popular hostile demonstration.

The service accordingly will be held in the drawing room of Amerongen Castle. The ex-Emperor desired to have the court chaplain, Dr. Ernest Von Dryander, come from Berlin to preach the sermon at the Christmas eve ceremony, but the Berlin government, says the despatch, has refused permission for the chaplain to go to Holland. The service, consequently, will be conducted by a German missionary from Zeist, near Amerongen, but Herr Hohenzollern himself will deliver the sermon. Many friends of Count Von Bentinck, the former Emperor's host, have been asked to attend the service, the message adds, but have refused the invitation. The former ruler's audience, therefore, will consist of Count Von Bentinck and his family, the ex-Emperor's suite and servants of the castle. Christmas trees will be provided as usual, for the celebration. Herr Hohenzollern cut these down himself with the help of two men of the estate, in the Amerongen pine woods. The trees are now being decorated and loaded with gifts.

Balkan King Is Dethroned

Nicholas of Montenegro is Dethroned by Parliament—Country Will Unite With Serbia.

"FLUNG AWAY CROWN."

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 23.—The Union of Montenegro with Serbia has been officially proclaimed by the Montenegrin Parliament, a Belgrade despatch announced to-day.

In response to the denial of King Nicholas that he had been dethroned, the newspaper, "Samou Prava" publishes an official statement, declaring that the National Assembly, which met at Podgoritza, was elected by a majority of the people.

"The former King, by his flight from the country, has flung away his crown, and we have broken off all relations with him," the statement said.

Alleged Robbers Captured After Desperate Fight

Thomas Gorman Said He Was Born in Peterboro—Both Men Heavily Armed.

NOW IN JAIL

Woodstock, Dec. 23.—Following a fierce fight in the dark haymow of the barn belonging to Geo. W. Willson, a farmer residing about two miles west of this city on the Governor's road, Fred Donnelly, a man armed with a number of time fuses fitted with dynamite caps in his possession, was captured and taken into custody by County Constable Fred Hill and Chief A. T. Moore, about 10 o'clock Saturday.

The prisoner was concealed beneath the hay in the mow of the barn, and when accosted drew a big 38-calibre Ivers-Johnston revolver from a holster which he wore around his waist, but just as he was about to use it the constable and Chief seized and after a desperate fight overcame him and he is now in the local jail. He gives his home as Sherbrooke, Que. On his person, in addition to his weapon and ammunition, were more than $100 in large mills and change, a large flashlight, a big jacknife and other impliments.

A short time after his capture was made the police received word that another man was in the barn and this time the search revealed Thomas Gorman, who states he was born in Peterboro and has come here from Hamilton. He, too, had a big 38-revolver and a quantity of time fuses and dynamite caps along with $7,100 in Victory Bonds. He was sent to jail and in the meantime investigations are being made.

Nominations For Council

Will be Received To-night at the City Council Chamber—Interest Focussed on the Aldermen.

The chief interest in today's nominations centres in the aldermanic section, which has been deferred until to-night for the benefit of the workingmen who will introduce their four candidates duly approved by the Trades and Labour Council. The hour during which nominations will be received is from 7.30 until 8.30 o'clock, and there were rumours to-day that the long list of candidates was likely to be neither as heavy nor as lengthly as last week's outlook promised Gossip to the effect that the United City League's programme was not materializing up to specifications tended to ease the minds of some of the Aldermen who were beginning to be stampeded by the activity of the League. At that, there has been nothing definite from that quarter, and it may be that a surprise will be sprung when the nominations are closed. The Aldermen who are coming up for re-election are breathing more easily today than a week ago. It is expected that there will be a big gathering of the "suffering rate-payers" at the Council Chamber to-night.

Sensational Robbery in Montreal

Fifty Thousand Dollars Worth of Diamonds Stolen.

Canadian Press:

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — Diamonds valued at $50,000 were stolen from I. L. Michaelson and Sons, Eastern Townships Bank Building, corner of St. James street and Victoria Square between 10.30 Sunday night and 2 o'clock this morning, by three masked bandits, who overpowered the night watchman and blew the safe with two charges. The robbery is a sensational one.

About 10.30 o'clock last night, the watchman of the building, George Fletcher, was called to the door by the ringing of a bell. As soon as he opened it three men stepped up, handing him a suitcase. One remarked, "Give this to the woman who cleans up the place." As he said this others pressed inside and attacked the watchman. He was quickly overpowered, bound hand and foot and carried up the elevator to the eighth floor, where the Michaelson offices are located. Here he was tied in a chair obtained from the robbed office and left outside in the corridor while the three thieves were busy. The firm has been in business here for only a month and the offices had not been completely arranged.

Christmas Service at George St. Church

The Christmas service at the George St. Methodist Church last night was marked by a very large congregation and the spirit of the festivity expressed in hymn and prayer and sermon. Rev A. J. Thomas preached on Van Dyke's "The Sad Shepherd," making a deep impression on the congregation by his treatment of the Christmas theme. The choir was fully equal to its work in previous years in the anthem "Star of Bethlehem" by Adams, and under Mr. Renwick's direction intensified the sensible spirit of Christmas. The solo parts of "Salute the Happy Morn" were sung by Mrs. C. Graham, Miss Emma Wood and Miss Myrtle Succe

Miss Doris Rathbone has seldom been heard to better advantage than in her solo "The Gift" by Behrend, her voice revealing new and richer tonal qualities that were enhanced by the interpretation she gave to the hymn.

"O Day of Christ," By J. C. Bartlett was most effectively sung by Mrs. J. H. Renwick. Mrs. Foster's violin obligato was a fine acquisition to this solo.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, DECEMBER 23RD, 1918.

A NOTABLE EVENT.

If all the people in Peterborough who by their subscriptions made the event possible could have been present in the Armouries on Saturday for the Christmas treat staged for the benefit of the children of Peterborough's soldiers by the Great War Veterans, they would have found their reward in the sea of happy childish faces and the merry laughter and cheerful prattle of the little folks. The occasion provided a way for the people at home to show their appreciation of the work of our men overseas and thanks are due to Mr. G. N. Gordon, who originated the plan last year and on both occasions opened the subscription lists with a handsome cheque, to the Great War Veterans, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. who carried out the affair most successfully, and to the citizens who so generously provided the funds. That the united effort was worth while a glance at the hundreds of excited youngsters who crowded the Armouries and watched for Santa Claus to make his appearance, revealed clearly. May The Examiner be permitted to echo the hope of Mr. Gordon in his address to the little folks that next Christmas will see all the "daddies" home again and that it may be the happiest and most enjoyable Christmas in the lives of the children of our soldiers.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

The man of the hour in Canada is the returned soldier. The attitude of every citizen towards public affairs should be governed by jealousy of the returned soldier's rights.

Because these brown-clad men went out and put themselves between the country and the Hun, Canada was spared the worst horrors of war and civilization was saved for free and exalted growth.

The fruits of reconstruction now in sight took root in the labours and sufferings of the soldiers.

For months and years, they were absent from the customary economic life of their country, sacrificing their chance to grow in ability and in wealth.

They are truly of a superior type. They did not give all this up because they do not know the value of business interests. They do. If they are worse off, financially and economically, than when they went to fight, they realize the fact. If they do not get a good chance to recover their places, they will feel in full measure the bitterness of disillusionment.

Canada needs her returned soldiers as keen, optimistic and contented citizens, fit to play a large part in the extension of the nation for which every patriot hopes. Canada has never faced a fairer opportunity than comes with the return of many thousands of her citizens who have grown mightily in confidence and in strength while winning fame before the eyes of the whole world.

Elaborate welcomes, eloquent addresses, and stately ceremonies are all very well in their way, but it is the impression left with the soldier after the crowd has gone home that really counts. It is what he receives and finds helpful, day by day, as he begins to forget the horrors and glories overseas—that is what measures the goodwill of his fellow citizens.

He went away to fight for Canada cheerfully, with abundant faith in his country and his countrymen. Failure on their part to keep faith with him will becloud his whole experience.

Everybody in Canada owes the returned soldier something. His best interests must be considered, day by day.

Churches, societies, and such bodies must never forget him. They honour themselves in working for him.

Looking straight into the face of Canada stands a khaki-clad figure, sturdy or bent or maimed. The attitude is interrogative, possibly a bit puzzled or confused.

Here is the instrument employed to save civilization, flung across a thousand battlefields with unparalleled prodigality.

Here is the streak that flashed over the horizon in an aeroplane, the clod that was tossed into the air when shells exploded, the creeping thing that cut the wires in No man's Land at night.

Welcome home, God's good man! Caring for you is our first duty, our highest aim, our greatest pride. —Montreal Star.

A LEGACY AND A WARNING.

The situation in connection with the Hunter Street bridge is serious enough in itself, with all other considerations left on one side to impress upon the ratepayers of Peterborough the absolute necessity of placing the direction of civic affairs in this city next year in the hands of a board of aldermen who will have the business ability and acumen to handle such problems—if such a board can be induced to realize the need of their services. To-night will answer that question as far as the nominations are concerned and there is every reason to hope that the men who have the necessary qualifications have by this time appreciated the situation and are prepared to do what they can to ensure an efficient council for 1919.

This year's aldermanic board have presented the new council with a very doubtful legacy in the bridge question which will be one of the first problems with which next year's council will have to deal. The people have voted in favour of the expenditure of $245,000 on the construction of the bridge—the lowest tender received by the council was nearly one hundred thousand dollars in excess of the amount voted. So the dying council simply "passed the buck" to next year's board. There was nothing else that they could do. You can't build a $350,000 bridge with $245,000—there is no way of geting any more money without another by-law being voted on by the people.

A question involving such a large sum of money as the Hunter Street bridge situation makes necessary is one that will need the best brains, shrewdness and ability that can be provided. Surely the people of Peterborough have no desire to entrust the handling of such a problem to any body but men whose natural qualifications and training fit them for dealing with transactions of such a calibre.

The Examiner has endeavoured to drive home to the citizens the need of earnest thought and consideration in regard to the selection of next year's council—the difficulty in connection with the Hunter Street bridge should serve as a timely warning to emphasize what has already been repeatedly pointed out in these columns that the rapidly approaching municipal elections are the most important in Peterborough's history.

VETERAN IS NOMINATED.

F. C. Longden Will Run in St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 19.—There will be a contest for the Provincial bye election for the riding of St. Catharines. Forty-two members of the Independent Labour party decided this question last night and chose F. C. Longden, a returned soldier from the ranks and secretary of the local Branch of the I. L. P. A dozen of others were placed before the meeting including Frank Greenlaw and Mayor Wiley, but all declined, taking the stand that the present was no time for a contest. Ex-Reeve Charles Brush, of Granham Township, District Secretary of the Hydro-Radial Union, who was member of the I.L.P. in England before coming to this country, was willing to accept the nomination but was defeated on ballot being taken by 25 to 17. Longden's nomination was made unanimous.

JESSIE REMEMBERED.

And the Worst of It Was That She Insisted on Going Into Particulars.

Mrs. Goby had been in her new house a month when she received a call from Mrs. Toby. Mrs. Toby was accompanied by her five-year-old daughter, Jessie.

"What a beautiful house you have, Mrs. Goby!" said Mrs. Toby.

"Isn't it nice?"

"It is indeed," replied Mrs. Toby. "And, do you know, I intended calling on you a fortnight ago, but have been so busy."

"Oh, mamma," chimed in little Jessie, "you did come!"

"How dare you talk like that? Speak when you're spoken to", interrupted Mrs. Toby, coloring up.

Tears welled into the child's eyes and Mrs. Goby sympathetically said: "There, don't cry, little dear. You must have been mistaken."

"I wasn't," blurted out Jessie. "Mamma knocked ever so many times and then said to me: 'Come on. I suppose we shall have to go to the expense of getting tea in town.'"

The silence that followed was frigid. —London Telegram.

The Minister Was Puzzled.

At a marriage service performed some time ago in a little country church in Georgia, when the minister said in a solemn tone, "Will thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" instead of the woman answering for herself a gruff man's voice answered: "I will."

The minister looked up, very much perplexed, and paused. He repeated the sentence, and again the same gruff voice answered, "I will."

Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said:

"She is deaf, I am answering for her."—Lippincott's.

Big Howitzer for Ontario.

To the 116th Battalion of Ontario county belongs the honor of capturing the big howitzer gun which Sir William Hearst has accepted on behalf of the Ontario Government. The war trophy, which it is expected will reach Toronto shortly, will be given a place of honor in the Queen's Park in front of the Legislative Buildings.

The big gun fell into the clutches of the heroic Canadians in the battle of Amiens last August, in which the 5th platoon of "B" Company, led by Lieut. W. A. Orr, son of Dr. R. B. Orr, curator of the Provincial Museum at the Normal School, distinguished themselves in splendid style. The gun was captured by this company after a night of heavy fighting and rounding up of several hundred Hun prisoners.

The gun will grace the Queen's Park as a memorial to the late Col. Sam Sharpe, M.P., the fighting commander of the battalion.

One Letter Names.

O is a village of France, in the commune of Mortree, at a distance of fifteen kilometers from Argentan, itself at a distance of thirty-five kilometers from Alencon. This Norman hamlet has at last accounts twenty-three inhabitants and the proud memory of the extinct marquisate of O, which dates back to the crusades. The last marquis, superintendent of the finances of Henri III., lived a spendthrift and died a pauper. Another instance of single letter geography is Y, the arm of the sea which penetrates the Netherlands.

A Wonderful Parrot.

The world's record parrot is owned by Baron Alfred de Rothschild, and he paid for it a record sum. She sings with effect quite a number of songs in a voice like a banjo's twang. She speaks 200 words of German, can answer reasonable queries, smartly rebukes those who ask silly ones and is careful to remind her interlocutors that her full title is "Laura from Africa, please."

Breathe Well and Keep Well.

To breathe well helps to keep well. To live longer and better make it a habit to take some breathing exercise each day. Are you aware that ordinarily you use only one-tenth of your lung space? Is it any wonder that diseases of the respiratory tract are contracted so easily?

SOLITARY LIFE IN JAIL.

It Has Finally Wrecked the Mind of Jesse Pomeroy.

That Jesse Pomeroy, the solitary life prisoner at Charlestown prison, has at last broken mentally under the strain of his years of confinement, became evident during the recent visit of Governor Walsh to the institution.

When the governor, in his inspection stopped before the cell in Cherry Hill and the guard drew aside the iron shutter which has cut off Pomeroy from all communication with even the rest of his prison world, a strange thing occurred.

Pomeroy for the first time that he had been brought in contact with a chief executive since his imprisonment did not ask for a pardon or protest his innocence. He instead told the governor that he had a bank book he wanted to send his mother, but could not do so because of red tape.

Officers at the prison for some time have known that Jesse has considered himself immensely wealthy. The governor asked Pomeroy where the bank book was, and Pomeroy replied that it was in the prison office. He further said that he had written to the prison authorities about the bank book several times, but had received no satisfaction. The governor promised he would look after the bank book.

For thirty-six years Pomeroy has been kept in solitary confinement and many alienists have given opinions regarding what effect it would have upon his sanity. It is now believed that Pomeroy has weakened mentally under the strain.—Boston Post.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

Tests They Must Pass Before Uncle Sam Allows Them in His Army.

Nor is it an easy matter to secure the privileges of a war correspondent with the United States army in the field. First, the applicant must present proper credentials from the publication he represents with a photograph as well as an account of his career, stating the nature of the work he is expected to do at the front and certifying to his trustworthiness as a newspaper man and his personal fitness to accompany the army.

With this must go a certified check of $1,000, payable to the adjutant general of the army, which is to cover the expenses of equipment and maintenance. He must also give a bond of $2,000 to guarantee his living up to all of the rules of the army. If these are violated the $2,000 is to be payable to any charity which Secretary Garrison may name. The correspondent must also take the military oath of loyalty to the United States and agree to abide "in letter and in spirit" by all the regulations of the army.

Specific precautions are taken to keep out adventurers, and only men with bona fide credentials and actual newspaper careers are to be admitted to these privileges.—Oswald F. Schuette in Leslie's.

Building on the Field of Waterloo.

When the centenary of the battle of Waterloo is celebrated next year visitors to the famous field will find that it has largely lost its rural appearance, as it has become a favorite site for building of country villas. There are no fewer than fifty now on the field where Napoleon met his doom, and many of them are built on the very spots that were occupied by the combatants. The field is an ideal situation for country retreats. The completion of good motor roads from Nivelles and Charleroi has done much to stimulate villa building.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

MAKE SOME ONE HAPPY.

For God's sake make some one happy for ten minutes if for no longer a time.

A young woman bound on such a mission, what might she not accomplish? Oh, there are thousands of the manufacturers or sunshine! They are King's Daughters, whether inside or outside of that delightful organization. They do more good before they are twenty years of age than selfish women who live ninety, and they are so happy just because they make others happy. Compare such a young women who feels that she has such a mission with one who lives a round of vanities, card-case in hand, calling on people for whom she does not care, except for some social advantage, and insufferably bored when the call is returned, and trying to look young after she is old, and living a life of insincerity and hollowness and dramatization and show.

BOYS DON'T.

Don't cultivate a taste for liquor or tobacco. They do you no good. They are expensive, and until your tastes and stomach are perverted, they rebel them.

Don't go out of the hall between acts. It looks bad. If you wish to let people knoww that you are there, you have the manager announce it. It's better taste.

Don't forget that you are to run this great country some day—fill all the public offices, make all the laws, decide all judicial questions, manage all the business enterprises, and in a word, own and control this great world.

Don't let your temper take the bits between its teeth, my boy, and impart it what little remains of self-control. Bear constantly in mind the biblical injunction, that he who ruleth his own temper is greater than he who taketh a city—or words to that effect.

Don't spend your entire income in fine clothes. Good manners, good sense and good habits will bind your friends closer to you, make you think more of yourself, be respected more by others, and better received into society than any amount of fine clothes will that you can buy.

Don't consider it manly to be around with bowie knife and revolver; to carry a pipe and to swear. Keep well in the mind that this is not what constitute a man. No, boys, this will never gain for you the place that a true man may occupy. Not even the wearing of a big moustache makes the man. Uprightness in dealings and honourable convictions are what we admire in a man, and what constitutes manliness.

THROW IT AWAY.

Stand up, little kid, with your cigarette burned clean up to your profane lips. Do you know that the poison you are so eager to infuse into every inch of your youthful hide, may, before a hundreds years have rolled over your head, make you not only colour blind, but blind as a bat as well? Naw," you didn't. Well that is the next affliction we are threatened with. The Scientific American says so, and we have grown in the habit of relying upon that staunch sheet. In London, tobacco blindness has become quite prevalent, and instances are cropping out on our own side of the pond, too. Throw away your cigar and wait at least until you have a hundred and eighty pounds of sound avoirdupois to carry around before you begin to stuff your skin with nicotine poison. Then maybe it will take you the rest of your natural lifetime to get enough of the weed to put out your eyes and plant a malignant cancer on the root of your saucy little tongue. "Your grandfather smoked til he was eighty, did he, and chewed, too." Yes and that is the reason you should let it alone, at least until you are twenty-five. You were born with enough poison in your blood without beginning to stuff more down your throat before you are out of the nursery. Throw it away. Nobody expects babies to help pay the national debt.

The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughter long after her head is pillowed in the dust of death; and the fatherly kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons, who came to wear his mantle and to fill his places; while on the other hand, from an unhappy misgoverned and disordered home, go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable and perpetuate the sourness and sadness, the contentions, strifes and railings, which have made their own early lives so wretched and distorted.

Women should grow more devoted and men fonder after marriage if they have the slightest idea of being happy as wives and husbands. It is losing sight of this fundamental truth which leads to hundreds of divorces. Yet many a man will scold his wife who would never think of breathing a harsh word to his sweetheart, and many a wife will look glum and morose on her husband's return who had only smiles and words of cheer for him when he was her suitor.

Look over your list of friends and acquaintances and note their course. Did you not find on examination that those who to-day are men of influence and honour, were the youths who made the most of their valuable time, turning it to good account? And on the other hand do you not find those who stood at the corners with a cigar or piper in their mouths, went from bad to worse, from worse to ruin?

If you would know a man's true character, see him in his family.

HOW THE COMPANY EARNED ITS CHRISTMAS DINNER

A STORY OF FLANDERS, BY A.M.I.

The boys of the —th Canadian Battalion were in a despairing mood. It was the 23rd of December. Christmas was two days away, and the quartermaster had just announced that no special rations had arrived for Christmas, and that the fare for that day would be "hard tack," "bully" and "maconachie." What a menu for a Christmas spent in rest billets! The night previous they had left the front line trenches and had trudged back to billets in brigade reserve, some two miles beyond the front line, thinking of the big Christmas dinner they were to have. But alas! a daring German airman had dropped a bomb on their supply train, and the special rations had "gone west." Something had to be done.

A council of war was held amongst the boys of "B" Company. Every spare franc was put into a general fund and a deputation set off to a near-by farm, owned by a Belgian whose home, considering its proximity to the trenches, had been singularly fortunate in escaping bombardment. Their purpose was to buy every fowl in sight in readiness for Christmas day. Very soon they returned, wrathful and disconsolate. They had been given a warm reception by the farmer, who chased them off, calling them "thieving Canadiens." The night before the P—P—'s had raided his hen coop, and not a single bird was left. Another consultation was held, and little by little another plot was hatched. A visit was paid to the quartermaster and the medical sergeant, where hurried conversations were held, and by-and-by the boys took on a more cheerful air.

That night one of the company snipers, accompanied by his usual scout, could be seen slinking away from the billets, rifle in hand. Shealthily they passed the farmhouse, along a hedge, and into a little wood just beyond. In the next field a peaceful cow was taking a last nibble of grass before sinking down to rest. Up near the trenches the flares were lighting the darkness and there was a desultory crackle of rifle fire. Suddenly there was a crack louder than the rest, and the cow, without a sound, dropped to the ground.

Next morning, at the first streak of dawn an irate and expostulating farmer rushed into the camp and went straight to the colonel's hut, where the colonel was still snoring, having been late in getting to rest after a long discussion with the brigade staff officers. He was, therefore, in no mood to interview the angry Belgian.

"My cow—he been shot. De Soldat she sott him. Me want you pay. Me want you puneesh."

The colonel glared at him. "Shaw me the brute," he shouted. The farmer led the way, and, sure enough, there was the cow, lying dead in the field, with a bullet through its heart. A parade was called, but, of course, no one knew anything about the deed. The sniper was brought forward to examine the wound. He did so, and feeling around inside, he triumphantly produced the bullet, which, by the way, he had stealthily taken from his pocket before coming forward. "Why, it's a Fritzie bullet," exclaimed the colonel. "It must have been a stray shot that killed your cow." That ended the matter for a time.

The farmer next appeared at the quartermaster's hut, and appealed to that officer to buy his cow. "See the doctor," was his verdict, "and if he passes it as fit, I'll buy it." So far the plot had worked nicely.

After a few moment's conversation the farmer, accompanied by the medical sergeant, walked across to where the dead cow lay. Kneeling down the Red Cross man made a minute examination of the cow, then gave his verdict.

"Poisoned," he said, "the meat is no good. The gas from the bullet has poisoned it. It will have to be destroyed at once, for safety." There was a great dread of bad meat being sold by the Belgians, and this was a precaution taken with all carcasses suspected of disease. So a fatigue party was called, and the farmer trudged slowly back to his house, calling down curses upon those "verdant Boches" who had shot his cow. The fatigue party built a huge fire as if to burn the carcase. But before that was done the butcher appeared and with quick strokes of his great knife the choicest roasts were cut from the animal and stealhily carried to the company cookhouse. The skin and useless parts were consigned to the flames, and when the farmer returned, it was to weep over the sizzling remains of his beloved brindle.

But the next day a great feast was in progress in the billets of "B" Company. Luscious, steaming roasts were in each room. Vegetables had appeared, apparently from nowhere, and the boys voted their Christmas dinner the best ever. There were two guests of honour, the two men who, at that moment, the most popular in the Canadian corps—the quartermaster and the medical sergeant.

Women the World Over

In most of the towns and cities looted by the Germans, the women employed in secretarial positions with the Germans have proved to be the worst offenders in stealing.

England now has women engineers, radiographers, printers, glass blowers, opticians, assayers, coil and condenser builders and engravers.

Although it is only a little over three months old, the women's police reserve organization of New York city has a membership of over 5,000. The ranks are filled with women from all walks of life, speaking all languages and of undoubted loyalty.

A large junk firm at Modena, Pa., employs several women as metal sorters, while others are driving and firing locomotives or operating electric cranes.

Hog Island can boast of the only woman notary in any shipyard in the United States. She is Miss Nina Halvery, who is at present in the questionnaire department in the industrial relations department.

American lumberjacks working in England and France are being assisted by detachments of young women who use heavy two-handed saws as well as the men.

Over 20,000 women are now connected with the British Royal Flying corps who do everything in connection with an aeroplane except fly.

The attorney-general of Nebraska has handed down a decision which says that neither the law of God nor the law of man prevents women from wearing men's clothes when they are engaged in war work.

After an absence of fifty years, Mrs. Mattie Oyster, of Philadelphia, has gone back to the Frandford arsenal, where she is operating an automatic lathe. She is now past sixty-two years of age, and during the Centennial held in the Quaker City in 1876, she was one of the girls selected from the arsenal to demonstrate munition making machinery.

MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL ENDORSE IT

Well Known Clergymen From Many Large Communions Praise Tanlac.

Ministers from some of the greatest communions in the land have put Tanlac to the test and have come out in grateful statements endorsing the medicine for the good it has done them.

Rev. W. C. Norton, for years pastor of Wesley Memorial Church in Jacksonville, Florida, residing at Perry, Fla., says: "I suffered from indigestion for years, seldom slept well and had severe headaches. Since taking Tanlac I feel as well as I ever did, sleep soundly and can eat anything I want. Tanlac has restored my health."

Rev. A. H. Sykes, of Nashville, Tenn., says: "Mrs. Sykes suffered from stomach and kidney disorders and a nervous breakdown. Tanlac restored her health and she is gaining weight and strength rapidly."

Rev. E. G. Butler, Muskagee, Okla., says: "I had attacks of acute indigestion. Results from taking Tanlac have been most satisfactory. It is the best medicine I have ever tried."

Hunderds of other well known ministers have testified to the merits of Tanlac, among whom are: Rev. F. M. Winburn, San Antonio, Tex.; Rev. A. L. Tull, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. James H. New, Clarkston, Georgia; Rev. A. J. Vallery, Monroe, La; Rev. John M. Sims, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. W. T. Roby, Knoxville, Tenn.; and others too numerous to mention.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co Ltd. In [illegible] Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Prangle & Son.

TEACHING METHODS REQUIRE REVOLUTION.

In these days when so much emphasis is placed upon efficiency in taking stock of other lines of education, it is well for students and teachers of Harmony to test the result of their study with the practical questions: What can we do? In what way is this work related to actual music? What does it contribute to real music education: to the deepening or broadening of one's musical experience? How many hear more in a composition as a result of the study of harmony? How many memorize more easily ,or transpose more easily because of it? How many utilize their knowledge in interpretation? How many can improvise a simple accompaniment? How many can write an accompaniment excepting in heavy, four part writing with every tone harmonized? How many can write an accompaniment that actually expresses the text?

An honest reply to these questions forces the conclusion that our systems of study are not all that should be desired. The more that we consider the reasons for the meagre or entire lack of practical results, the more evident it becomes that the imperative need of the day is a complete revolution of our teaching methods.

SANTA CLAUS

Dear Editor:— I am eight years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Please tell me the truth; is there a Santa Claus?
"Virginia"

ANSWER:—"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary, would be the world if there was no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills th world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! you might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

"No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives for ever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay ten thousand times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

Vivid Account of Capture of Cambrai, by Peterboro Boy

Prisoners Come in in Streams—Tanks are Seen Moving Along the Horizon—The Action on the Canal du Nord.

THE SIGNAL GUN

Gunner Clarence Wartman of the Howitzer Battery, writes the following vivid account of the action on the Canal du Nord and how Cambrai was taken by the Canadians. The "trek" of the 1st Canadian Division from the Amiens to the Arras front is also described.

The letter was addressed to his mother, Mrs. Wortman, 275 John St., City.

Gunner Wortman enlisted with the Queen's hospital, Kingston and later joined the Dental corps and went to Carlo with the Queen's unit where he remained eight months. He subsequently returned to France from Egypt and after several months service in France returned to Candada and was commissioned. He reverted to go to france with the artillery unit to which he is now attached.

Dec. 3rd, 1918

Mother Dear:—Received your letter of Oct. 20 last night and was glad to find all was O.K. as far as you and Leonard are concerned. There is Great talk of the "Flu" going the rounds of Canada. You want to be careful and not get it. Glad you had such a fine time at Mrs. Bogarts. By now you will be up at Peterboro and nicely settled for the winter and by spring I will be home so things will be fine from now on. Just think, we will be together again and nothing will separate us again, not even a war. We will have a swell time together, the three of us.

I got the box alright but have not had time to write Mrs. Bogart, but will in the near future.

So you want to know what part our battery took in the capture of Cambrai. Well, we were there from the start to finish. I will give you a detailed description of our movements from Aug. 1st or there abouts.

NEAR ARRAS

We were at a village not far from Arrars at rest and preparing to go somewhere but we had not the least idea where. Rumors ran that we were going up to Belgium. The first division started and stopped halfway there. Two or three battalions reached the Belgian front, went into the line, pulled off a raid or two. Everybody thought we were in for another Paschaendale. Then orders came in to start for a rail head. Just about that time word came in that the division had stopped and were waiting for orders. That kept us guessing more than ever. We entrained in the evening started north so we thought of Paschaendale again. But when we climbed out in the morning Amiens was in sight.

IN ACTION

That day we moved up to the line and the next day put our guns in action with a good long range. Then it started to rain and continued for five days. The divisions began to arrive, but they moved only at night.

Three nights before the morning of the big "straffe" we started to draw up ammunition to a position about 1200 yards from Fritz's line.

HEAVY TRAFFIC

Everything was done at night and talk about traffic. Did you ever see an ammunition wagon? Its as long as a lumber wagon and has three teams to draw it, so figure out how long one is and then for a battery there are 18, then for a brigade there are 72 and for a division about 150. Think of them going into a dump loading up at night and it raining and dark and absolutely no lights not a cigarette anywhere on the road. For three days and nights we worked like ants. Then the evening of the 7th the guns went in. We worked till about 3 a.m. getting the guns in place and things fixed up. We laid down for an hour in the open in an orchard by the way; at 4a.m. we were called. It was a beautiful clear morning, as clear as a bell and fairy warm. It was not light enough to see any distance. We did the last few things and then stood by for the "zero hour."

TANKS IN ACTION

During the time we were working in the night the tanks passed about 100 yards away. You could see them in the sky line crawling along and making what we thought to be a terrible noise. You could hear a rumble for miles and miles back But it seems Fritz did not get wise

Before the ray had shown red in the sky, we were standing around all attention waiting for orders to start. I hadn't heard one of our guns go off since I got up; all seemed to be very peaceful. We waited, perhaps, three minutes. A big gun fired away back somewhere behind us. I was standing all ready to give the tricker the pull.

ACTION BEGINS

I was never told that was a signal to start but I let her go when my ears became normal after the noise of our guns going off which is perhaps one tenth of a second; there was such a noise of guns going off that I thought I would never hear again. We were away. For four hours we fired on an average of two a minute. After about an hour I was relieved and went up on the road near by.

PRISONERS IN BUNCHES

By that time the prisoners were coming down in bunches of 30 and 100; in fact there was one continual line of them.

One of the funniest sights I ever saw was a little Scotch Kiltie about four feet six high leading about one hundred prisoners and say, the way he strutted along was laughable he was as happy as one could possibly be. There were other sights, too, Many stretcher cases were being carried by four prisoners.

NO USE FOR CANUCKS

One poor Fritzy was shot through the jaw and I gave him a drink. At first he seemed grateful, but when he saw my Canadian badges, he showed his hatred in his looks. They have no use for we Canadians.

MOVING FORWARD

Five hours after "the zero hour" we started to move forward, and for three hours we did nothing but move forward. Then we stopped and waited for orders. The Canadians were relieved by the French and moved away towards Arras.

THE BATTLEFIELD

At that time the line ran about four miles from Arras, crossing the Arras-Cambrai road that distance from Arras. About half way between Arras and Cambrai the Canal du Nord runs right angles to the road. As we were the last to leave Amiens front we were the last to arrive in front of Arras. We started the same thing over again, taking ammunition, the last night the guns went into position.

MUCH EXCITEMENT

I did not expect to be on the guns that time, but the day before the "straffe" I was notified to get ready to go to the guns. I started about 6 p.m. to walk and on the way up had considerable excitement. I was going along the road, when just about 100 yards ahead a shell burst. Naturally, I went flat, but the big thing was to get past. I went up another fifty yeards and got into a shell hole. The next that burst was in about the same place, and just the second the pieces had gone past I started to run and I did run too. I was about 100 yards past the spot where the next burst and I never stopped until I had to for breath. I reached the battery O.K.

THE HUNS RETALIATE

About 10 p.m. I was standing just behind the battery or rather behind the gun pit, a hole dug in the ground about three feet deep, when whiz! bang! just about thirty feet ahead. I just naturally slid head first into the gun pit. For five minutes the shells came so fast that you couldn't count them. Luckily none lit in the gun pit, so nobody was hurt in our sub. We started to work again about 2 a.m. bang, we started for the big dugout a distance of about 100 yards.

GAS ATTACKS

I got about half way and in the meantime quite a few shells had meantime quite a few shells hadkKdm burst, but I was too interested in reaching the dugout to observe what sort it was, but it was suddenly found out that there was gas mixed up in it. I was so out of breath that I got a good wad of it before I got my gas mask on, and didn't do any more that night.

ARTILLERY IN ACTION

Again at the appointed hour we started the 'straffe" and five hours later we started forward. But the boys only reached the Canal du Nord when they were held up.

Then again the start again drawing ammunition and the guns up the night before. One night we were up with ammunition, four wagons were in at the position, while the rest were on the road waiting for us to come out. Fritz started. He dropped shells behind us for about five minutes. Then he shifted to about thirty yards ahead of us. I can tell you we moved. O'Reilly and I were on the same waggon, after we finished unloading it we didn't wait for the waggon, but started on the run, and we did, too otherwise there was no excitement at all.

FIRST BATTERY OVER CANAL

At the "zero hour" we started and five hours after we were on the move We claim to have been the first battery over the canal.

APPROACHES CAPTURED

Cambrai was not taken in that drive, but all the land up to that was taken. Our battery was in the hollow before Cambrai, but was firing over the city on roads behind. We made it so hot for him that he couldn't get material up to the city.

CAMBRAI TAKEN

Later we put up a "straffe" and Cambrai was taken. Very shortly after we moved up just at the outskirts of the city Naturally we went into the city. The infantry had gone through it but I only saw about four soldiers in the city.

There, have I told you enough, or do you want to know how we went through to Douai and Denain, on to Valenciennes and Mons? I will have that for another day.

I have about $20 in Paris at the present time, but up till now have had no word of any more as yet. I will need it all for leave.

Wil close now as it's late. Now don't worry, because it's all over and we three will be together very soon and then we will have a great time,

Your Loving Son
CLARENCE

To Double Rate of Post Discharge Pay

SINGLE MEN GET MINIMUM OF $63 MONTHLY AND MARRIED MEN $93 FOR SIX MONTHS.

OTTAWA, December 23. — The Government has passed an Order-in-Council, the effect of which is not only to double the period of post-discharge pay, but also to double the rate of such pay. All men discharged after November 11th are entitled to this.

By the new arrangement every private who is single will receive a minimum of $63 per month for six months after his discharge, payable monthly. The minimum to a married man will be $93. Officers will be paid in proportion to rank on the same basis.

The post pay will approximate over a hundred million dollars.

Germany Must Wait Till Others Are Fed

A Million Tons of Shipping Wrung From Enemy Without Pledge of Food.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Herbert C. Hoover, American Food Administrator, will soon come into possession of a million tons of German shipping which will be employed in revictualizing devastated portions of France, Serbia, Belgium and Roumania, now destitute of food. These ships were wrung from the Germans by the armistice commissioners without pledging that Germany would be supplied with food.

At present no ships will be sent to Germany, the first relief work of the allies being planned in neutral countries. In the meantime it is believed the Germans can subsist on food stored for the use of their army and hoarded by peasants.

A thorough investigation of the food resources of the central powers is being made, and only after the needs of the entente nations and neutrals are met will ships be diverted to enemy powers, should such action be found imperative.

A PROCLAMATION ISSUED BY THE FORMER KAISER

Certainly no man is safe who could even dream of using such words as these, which are from a proclamation of the Kaiser in 1914, addressed to his Army of the East:

The spirit of the Lord has descended upon me because I am the Emperor of Germany. I am the instrument of the Almighty. I am His sword, His agent. Woe and death to all those who oppose my will! Woe and death to those who do not believe in my mission! Woe and death to the cowards! Let them perish, all the enemies of the German people! God demands their destruction. God who, by his mouth, bids you do His will!

Now this man is skulking in Holland, finding his mission—which plainly is not the mission of God—quite other than he supposed.—Indianapolis News.

Christmas Treat a Splendid Success

Hundreds of Children Entertained at the Armouries Saturday—Santa Claus Dropped in During the Afternoon and There Were Four Christmas Trees Laden With Gifts.

The Christmas treat for soldiers' children in the armouries on Saturday afternoon conducted by the Great War Veterans' Association, in co-operation with the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A., and made possible by the splendid donations of many citizens, was an unqualified success. Hundreds of little folks, the children of men who are still overseas, of those who have been spared to come back, and of the heroes who will never return, gathered to take part in the festivities, and to wait for the arrival of Santa Claus. Many of the mothers also were present, and it is estimated that the attendance was well over the thousand mark.

The scene when the event was at its height was a memorable one. The armouries were splendidly decorated for the occasion. The long tables at which the fathers of many of the children present had partaken of their meals in the days when the 93rd Battalion was quartered in the armouries, were transformed with their white covers and decorations of miniature Christmas trees. From one end of each table to the other, streamers of gayly colored paper were suspended, from which hung Christmas bells and Chinese lanterns. Flags and bunting draped from the gallery and over the speakers' platform, added to the effect, while towards the west end of the armouries there was a brightly decorated bandstand, flanked on each side by a pair of big and heavily laden Christmas trees, with tables around the foot of each, piled high with toys and games.

The entertainment was opened by the singing of the National Anthem, led by the G.W.V.A band, afterwards by a number of brief, snappy addresses. President H. J. Staunton of the G. W. V. A., was in the chair, and the speakers were Mr. G. N. Gordon, who originated the Christmas treat plan a year ago, Rev. Father Phelan, Lieut.-Col. Mills, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Lieut. Colonel Johnston, Mrs. Jos. Mills, President of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G. W.V.A., and Adjutant Bunton, of the Salvation Army. Three hearty cheers were given for Mr. Gordon, led by the little folks.

Refreshments were the next order of the day, and for the following half hour the children paid undivided attention to the piles of cakes and buns and other delicacies that were set before them, and then were ready for the rest of the festivities.

The Great War Veterans' Band under the leadership of Mr. Walter Hughes, played a most enjoyable programme during the afternoon. The band is making splendid progress and its concert numbers on Saturday were splendidly played. Among the selections presented by the band were "Soldiers of the King," an enjoyable descriptive number, "A Motor Ride,' a pot pouri of popular songs, "Tipperaryland," the always enjoyable "Glow-worm," and "Darkies' Dreamland."

The Girl Guides of the Salvation Army contributed a well-executed flag drill.

Then came the distribution of gifts and the arrival of Santa Claus. The benevolent old fellow, looking "just like his picture," so one little chap said, made his appearance on schedule time to the huge delight of the small folks, who almost smothered him so closely did they crowd around. It was with difficulty that a semblance of order was arrived at, so that the gifts from the four trees could be distributed. For each child there was a big bag, containing an apple, an orange and candy, a Christmas stocking and a toy, a book, a doll or a game.

The big piles of these articles rapidly disappeared when Santa Claus and his assistants commenced their operations, and soon the trees and tables were denuded.

There was a splendid selection of gifts, and those who had the purchasing in charge are to be congratulated. The whole affair was a splendid success.

21st Battalion's Famous Goat

London Paper Tells About Well-Known Mascot of Eastern Ontario Battalion.

To former members of the 21st Battalion especially, this little story about the 21st's famous goat, the mascot of the Eastern Ontario battalion, will be of interest. It is taken from a London paper, the clipping having been loaned by Capt. Gordon Hall, who served in France with the 21st:

"When our battalion left Canada nearly four years ago, some one presented it with a white goat. In spite of the strict British regulations "Celestine" landed in England, and soon settled down in barracks, where her omnivorous appetite was a great help to the sanitary squad.

She has now been in France for three years and wears her chevrons painted on her horns. She has been stolen several times and in consequence the number of the battalion also is now carved in the same place. In the good old days when we were sometimes in rest billets she made herself at home with the various companies in turn. She has a nice taste for laundry, but can always tell the taste of the battalion's shirts. She is especially fond of staff officers' silk handkerchiefs.

In the canteen or village estaminet she is a welcome guest. She prefers vin blanc to the sour French beer and can take her ration of rum with the gusto of a sergeant-major. Her attitude towards the various ranks is a lesson in diplomacy. She loves to lie in the sun, but always rises when the colonel or major passes by. Towards the newly-joined she is tolerantly contemptuous, but she will work herself into a rage at a sight of a "Fritz" prisoner.

Her real pals are the "old originals" of the transport and pipe band. Once a new transport officer joined the battalion, and wishing to elminate all unnecessary baggage he sold "Celestine" for fifteen francs to a thrifty French farmer and presented the money to the transport for beer. It has caused the only mutiny in the history of the battalion. The men who were washing the waggons struck at once and demanded to be returned to the line. The C. O. ordered the transport officer to get back the goat, which he did at an advance of 200 per cent. on her selling cost.

That night Celestine visited the village estaminet and was presented with tobacco and a can of vin blanc.

Her beautiful white coat is kept in perfect condition by a man who cares for her like a baby. Before a route march she comes to him to have her hoofs trimmed for the rocky road.

The other day, while the transport was camped five miles behind the line, there was a sudden bombardment of H. V. shells. There were several casualties and among them her caretaker, who was badly wounded. As he was being carried out he turned to the bearers and faintly said, "Tell me, is Celestine safe?"

Proposition Not Discussed

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Secretary Lansing to-day officially denied that the American peace delegation had decided to advocate sinking the surrendered German warships.

"Is it true the American commission has decided to advocate sinking the German warships?" was the question put to him.

"No," he replied. "We haven't decided anything. The proposition has not even been discussed."

CHRISTMAS IN BERLIN

Christmas Cheer is Lacking in Germany.

BERLIN, Dec. 23.— (By Associated Press.)—The outlook for Berlin's first revolutionary Christmas appears to be anything but merry. The disposition of Berliners seems to be gloomy. The stigma of military defeat has been eclipsed momentarily by political uncertainty, food stringency and disturbed economic conditions. Never before, even during the war, have beggars and street vendors been met with in such numbers in Berlin. Professional beggars, crippled and invalid soldiers multiply. An odd holiday spectacle is an able-bodied soldier in uniform grinding out Christmas music from an organ. There will be little holiday travel, as through trains have been withdrawn. Trips which ordinarily took 12 hours, now take thirty. The newspapers are also lacking in Christmas cheer.

Local Man Disappeared

Overcoat Was Found on a Bridge Crossing the Otonabee.

An overcoat containing a bottle of medicine, upon which was the name of Mr. George A. Rutherford, 525 Bolivar street, an employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, was found in the middle of the bridge at Number 6 lock, of this city, on Friday night, at ten o'clock. Word was received soon after from Mr. Tully, a brother-in-law of Mr. Rutherford, to say that he was missing.

Men are now dragging and searching the river at the point where the coat was found.

Rutherford, who is a man over the half century mark, leaves a wife and family. He has of late been despondent, coupled with an attack of influenza, from which he had not yet recovered.

He had been residing for a short time at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. Haverley, at Downer's Corners, but complained Friday evening of being lonely, and said that he was going to his home in the city, which he never reached.

Chinamen Were Having a Quiet Little Sunday Game

The Law Disapproves of the National Pastime of the Flowery Republic.

Six Celestials, Charlie Cheu, of the City Cafe, You Kong, better known as Cecil, an employee of the Dominion Cafe, Harry Mark, of the Star Laundry, Sun Lung of the Simcoe Street Laundry, Honk Toong and Sun Wing of a Charlotte Street laundry, walked into the police court this morning and cheerfully pleaded not guilty to a charge of playing cards, and gambling on Sunday.

Last night at ten-thirty o'clock the police stationed themselves at the rear of the Star Laundry on Hunter street, and for over half an hour watched a very interesting game of cards that was in progress. Each of the players had a pile of quarters, dimes and nickels in front of him, while in the centre reposed the "pot."

Shortly after eleven o'clock, the policemen quietly entered the premises and arrested the players. Charlie Cheu endeavored to hide the pack of cards and tucked them underneath his vest behind his back, but a policeman soon had possession of the tell-tale cards. They were not arrested but allowed to go on promising to appear in the police court this morning. Tom Hum acted as the interpreter.

'Now Harry, be careful,' cautioned the Chief, when Harry Mark in the box said that they were not gambling, but that the money which the police had found on the table ($1.05) was given to another countryman, and that he had not taken it off the table when the police appeared.

"Policeman talking story," said Harry emphatically when told that the police man said that they saw piles of money in front of each of the player and a "pot" in the middle.

The magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs each, in all $12.60, which the Chinamen apparently heard with a bad grace.

Two military policemen happened to be walking by the Star laundry last evening and hearing an uproar in the store looked over the top of the curtain which drapes the front window and saw an interesting game of cards participated in by six Chinamen. Two policemen at the end of the street were notified and the raid followed.

Well Known Engineer Dies In Havelock

One of the most popular engineers on the C.P.R. died yesterday afternoon at 2.30, at his home in Havelock, in the person of Mr. Alex. Rose, better known as "Shiner." The deceased had been on the Port McNichol run for three years and had passed the quarter century mark in the service of the company. Mr. Rose, who was 60 years of age, had returned to his home in Havelock on Saturday and said he was feeling fine. His wife, going downstairs Sunday morning, found him lying in the kitchen unconscious. He died in the afternoon, never regaining consciousness. A stroke is thought to be the cause of death.

PASSING OF THE YULE LOG

It is to be regretted that so many of our oldest and prettiest superstitions are fast going out of usage. We, of course, attribute this in a great measure to the hustling, busy age in which we are living — an age which is intolerant of too many customs which gave our predecessors such pleasure. We call ourselves too sensible for superstitions, yet in our hearts we yearn for them and the magic they cast about the seasons we love to celebrate. Modernism isn't entirely at fault, however, in all cases. For instance, the passing of one of the most graceful and physically satisfying among the old English customs—that of burning the Yule log; for our Christmas season has changed imperceptibly but surely as regards blustery winds and hoary snowy vistas. One cannot plan to burn the log with any great amount of wild enthusiasm when one is apt to wake up to balmy breeze coming in one's window, and a loitering robin chirping "Merry Christmas." Nor is it easy to give to the hearth its former and rightful zest, when the doors and windows are wide open and the whistling wind so necessary to coziness is sadly missing. There is no getting around the fact that we are having more and more Christmases of the balmy variety, which is excellent for the Fuel Administration, but hard on the old-time holiday spirit. It is perhaps timely to briefly scan the interesting points in connection with the Yule log, and save them for dispensation to future generations.

According to historians, the Guul or Yule was originally a Pagan festival among the Saxons. When they became converted, they continued the custom of celebrating the day, as it fell also on the same day as the Nativity. When the Normans came to England the feast of Noel was adopted, Noel being the French Christmas. The idea of setting fire to a block of wood is explained by the fact that Noel is called the Feast of Lights, as it is the day on which the Light of Lights came into the world. And since logs were made before candles, they were used as a means of illumination as well as heat, thus starting a pretty custom. In some of the mining districts great blocks of coal were saved for weeks to burn on Christmas day.

Of course we are all familiar with the superstition that in burning a Yule log, it must not be entirely consumed, but the ends must be carefully saved to start the next year's log to burning brightly, and also serve as talismen against evil spirits and ill luck. In certain provinces the saying goes that pieces of charred log placed in the clefts of fruit trees will insure a bountiful yield the coming year. One of the prettiest thoughts on the Yule log is contained in the following stanza by Herrick:

"Kindle the Christmas brand, and then
Till sunne-set let it burn,
Which quencht, then lay it up agen,
Till Christmas next returne.
Part must be kept therewith to tend
The Christmas log next yeare;
And where 'tis safely kept, the fiend
Can do no mischiefe there."

ALLEGED MURDERER COMMITTED SUICIDE.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 22. — Within a foot of a guard who had been stationed outside his cell to thwart any attempt at suicide, Milo H. Piper, local insurance broker, charged with the murder of Miss Freda Weichman of Chicago, hanged himself in his cell last night.

Piper, it is said, removed his collar, twisted it as nearly into the shape of a rope as possible, and secured it around his neck. Then looping his belt through the collar he fastened it to the iron bars of the cell gate, and threw the weight of his body into the noose, ending his life.

For several days the accused man has been morose and refused to eat.

Who was nominated for the Board of Education.

MAYOR DUNCAN ELECTED

the wide difference between the estimated expenditure, approved by the people, and the figures set out in the tenders that were opened on Friday night. Mayor Duncan intimated that the Council would probably have to appeal to the people for more money. The sewage disposal plant had also reappeared as a public work that is being strenuously urged by the townships south of the city.

The movement to erect a memorial to Peterborough's soldiers who had given their lives in the war and to provide a club house for the returned men would also demand the Council's attention, Mayor Duncan continued. The Board of Education's plans would react upon the Council, it was expected. Mayor Duncan expressed the hope that some of the best aldermanic material the city could offer would be elected for next year's Council. He reminded the citizens of the visit of the Hon. Frank Carvell on January 8th and requested a widespread interest in this event. The Minister was coming to Peterborough to examine the conditions that affect the public works that have been promised this city. Hence, Mayor Duncan urged that the meeting Mr. Carvell would address should be largely attended. The Government might assume part of the cost of the Hunter street bridge.

One of the men present remarked that this item should have been attended to previously. Mayor Duncan replied that in 1917 Mayor Duffus had presented this appeal to the Department.

Mr. Moore Re-elected.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., acknowledged his re-election to the Utilities Commission by acclamation. In the fifteen years of his service he had been opposed only once.

ATLANTIC FRUIT CO. CLAIM AGAINST W. J. OKE WAS DISMISSED

At a special sitting of the County Court held by His Honour Judge Huycke to-day, judgment was given in the case of the Atlantic Fruit Company against Walter J. Oke, a wholesale fruit dealer of this city. The Atlantic Fruit Company, which is a New York Company, sued Mr. Oke for $273.52, being the balance due on a carload of bananas shipped from Maryland, Baltimore, in June of 1917, claiming that Mr. Oke had agreed to purchase the fruit f.o.b. at Baltimore, and that he was liable to pay for the fruit notwithstanding that the carload rotted to a large extent on the way, and before it reached Peterborough. Mr. Oke defended the claim on the ground that while he agreed to purchase a carload of bananas, the Atlantic Fruit Company could not claim against him unless the fruit was transported within the usual and reasonable time that it would take fruit to be transported in a fast refrigerator car from the seaboard, and as the fruit took a greater length of time to reach Peterborough from the point of shipment the Atlantic Fruit Company could not hold Mr. Oke liable for perishable consignment.

Judgment was accordingly delivered in favour of Mr. Oke, dismissing the Atlantic Fruit Company's claim, and is liable to pay Mr. Oke's costs besides its own.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, of the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, appeared for the Atlantic Fruit Company, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, of Gordon, Widdifield & O'Brien, appeared for Mr. Walter J. Oke.

Crown Attorney, G. W. Hatton, appeared for the prosecution, and G. N. Gordon, for the prisoner.

A Surprise Presentation

Capt. A. S. Morrison and Mr. Sidney Whatley Receive Case of Pipes.

An interesting event took place on Saturday afternoon, when Capt. A. S. Morrison and Mr. Sidney Whatley, of the Imperial Munition Board staff, were each presented with a very handsome case of pipes by the members of the inspection staff as a mark of the regard and esteem in which they are held. The presentation was a complete surprise to both recipients, and they have asked the Examiner to express their sincere thanks to the donors for the splendid gifts.

PRESENTATION TO MISS HAZEL DOWNER

On the evening of Dec. 19th inst., a number of the friends of Miss Hazel Downer, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnson and presented Miss Downer with a miscellaneous shower. During the evening Miss Downer was blind-folded and escorted to the parlour. Upon being released she found herself surrounded by the beautiful gifts for which she thanked each one in turn. Her brother, G. W. Downer, in behalf of his sister, in a very appropriate manner, thanked the guests of the evening, for their kindness and good wishes. A dainty lunch was then served and the social event was brought to a close.

WEDDING BELLS

WEBSTER—WICKER.

A very happy nuptial event occurred on Wednesday evening, December 11th, at the home of Mr. Edwin A. Wicker, Mark street, Peterboro, when his daughter Ethel was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Webster, of the township of Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. A. Whattam, of the Mark street Methodist church, in the presence of a large number of the friends and relatives of the contracting parties. Mr. Oscar Freeburn played the wedding march.

The matrimonial rite was performed under an arch of evergreens and Union Jacks. A sumptuous wedding supper was served and an enjoyable time spent by the guests after which the happy couple went to their new home. The many friends of this popular couple who have so auspiciously begun the married life, will be pleased to know their residence is to be near their former homes.

The bride, who was the recipient of many costly and useful presents, was charmingly attired in a Burgundy gown of Georgette crepe. They were married unattended. May their life be filled with many joys, is the wish of their large circle of friends. — Com.

Royal Bank of Canada Enjoys Remarkable Growth

During Period of Greatest Growth in History, Assets Increased Nearly One Hundred Millions and Now Amount to Over Four Hundred and Twenty-Seven Millions—Total Deposits, After Withdrawals for Victory Loans, Amounted to $332,591,000, Against $252,987,382 at the End of the Previous Year.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.— The Royal Bank of Canada reports to its shareholders a year of remarkable progress. The report appeared in yesterday's issue of the Examiner. For a number of years past the Royal has been going forward by deaps and bounds and on this account the growth and expansion it is able to report for the past twelve months is little short of phenomenal. This in turn reflects the success with which the very large organization of the Bank has been planned and carried out. Just how great has been the expansion may be realized at a glance at the figures now reached by the total assets, which amount to $427,512,982, a gain during the past twelve months of over ninety millions while in the last two years the increase has totalled over one hundred and seventy millions.

This year a relatively small proportion of the increase is accounted for by the absorption of the Northern Crown Bank and the greater part comes as a natural consequence to the organization the Royal has built up wherever it could be of assistance to the commercial interests of the country.

(With its deposits coming more generally from the savings of the Canadian people, the withdrawals for investment in the Canadian victory loans have undoubtedly been very large. Notwithstanding this development which particularly affects the deposit account at the end of the fiscal year on Nov. 30th, the deposits bearing interest have increased to a new high record of $197,348,439, as compared with $182,488,715, and at the same time deposits not bearing interest have jumped to $135,243,278, up from $70,498,667, an increase of approximately sixty-five millions.

At the same time the Bank has developed a large and profitable connection in Cuba, the British West Indies and Central America. Needless to say the building up of a competent organization in this field, where in some cases the staff is required to speak foreign languages, was no light task. In its foreign operations the Bank has never required to employ Canadian deposits, as the deposits obtained locally have more than sufficed to meet the requirements. The extension of its operations moreover have been of great benefit to Canadian trade.

With the very large assets at its disposal the management has evidently found it possible to give full assistance to the Government at a period when war requirements were especially large and, at the same time, has met the growing requirements of its commercial business. Of the total assets of $427,512,982, the amount maintained in liquid assets is $224,982,088, equal to 56.59 per cent. of the liabilities to the public. Included in the liquid assets are current coin and Dominion notes of $42,124,658, as compared with $34,364,275, a year ago and in addition the deposit in the Central Gold Reserve has been increased to $26,000,000 from $16,000,000. The larger assistance given to Canadian Governments and Municipalities is reflected by the Dominion and Provincial Government Securities of a value of $36,599,976, as compared with $22,322,197, and Canadian Municipal Securities and British, Foreign and Colonial Public securities of $29,620.85 up from $21,586,345. The larger amount of the business of the country being handled is equally marked, total current loans now standing at $183,748,392, as compared with $156,612,129.

The very much larger amount of business handled has naturally added materially to the earnings, and advantage has been taken of them to further strengthen the general position of the Bank.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts 134 cars, with 1,518 head of cattle, 118 calves, 3,047 hogs, and 707 sheep and lambs.

Trade was good at the market yesterday for choice heavy steers, for canners and cutters, and a good enquiry for stockers and feeders with quality. The medium class of butcher steers and heifers were a little slow and inclined to drag, prices barely holding steady. For the heavy steers prices were a shade firmer. There was quite an active run on the canners and cutters, and prices in this class were a little firmer.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs were steady to 25c. higher.

GRAIN MARKET

Corn was again the exception to a generally weak market for the coarse grains. Oats are on the down grade, and there is little in the situation at present to warrant any belief in higher prices. The cash trade in consequence is decidedly dull, with practically no business in sight this side the holidays. Barley is quoted another 5c. lower, and no business doing.

MRS. M. E. HOYLE HAS GAINED 30 POUNDS

I've Never Found Anything to Equal Tanlac, She Says—Troubles Overcome.

"If I could speak with everybody personally who has stomach trouble and rheumatism," said Mrs. M. E. Hoyle, of 1329 Pennsylvania avenue, Kansas City, Mo., "I would advise them to take Tanlac, for I have tried it myself, and have never found anything to equal it. I have suffered with rheumatism during the past ten years until I thought that I would go distracted. The pain would extend from my hips down to my ankles, the muscles and leaders felt like they were drawn, my knees were so stiff I could hardly bend over, and many a night the pain was so severe that I could hardly keep from crying. My appetite was very poor and my stomach was so out of order that what little I did eat made me miserable. I suffered terribly from indigestion, and would bloat up so badly from the gas on my stomach that I could scarcely breathe, and there was a dull aching pain in the pit of my stomach. My complexion was also very bad—sallow and yellow looking—and I just felt badly all the time.

"But Tanlac has been a wonderful blessing to me and no one could see the change that has taken place in me during the past few weeks and doubt it being a great medicine. All my rheumatic pain and stiffness is gone now, and you may know that I feel like a new person. My appetite is splendid and I am never bothered with indigestion or gas any more, no matter what I eat, and my color is fine. Not only have I been relieved of rheumatism and stomach trouble, but I have also gained thirty pounds in weight, besides. Now these are my reasons for thinking so well of Tanlac, and I will gladly tell anyone who cares to call on me what I have found out by experience about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by the Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHILPS

Brian, Tempted, Spends the Evening With Mollie King.

Life is a habit. Nothing more or less. Brian Hackett had formed the habit of considering himself of paramount importance. His pleasure, his comfort, his entertainment. So that he vowed to behave himself and eat at home, he felt as if he were a martyr like those of old. That there was no one to appreciate his sacrifice, to tell him how good he was, took all the zest from the action.

He wanted to be patted on the back, not figuratively, but literally. He wanted to hear the "well done" he felt he deserved. So, although he went home to the delicious dinner Ruth had ordered and Rachel prepared for him, it was ashes in his mouth. After he had finished, he smoked a cigar. That, too, did not taste right. Perhaps because Ruth had not lighted it for him.

Then he tried to read.

"Trash!" he muttered, as he turned the leaves of a late magazine. "How people expect a fellow to spend his time reading such stuff, I can't imagine."

Finally he decided he would take a walk. That his steps led to the drive, and that a Washington Square bus happened that moment to pass him was simply a coincident.

It would kill the time to ride down and back. Of course he would not get off the bus. It was a beautiful night and it would be hard to secure a seat.

Someway the cigar tasted all right now, and he puffed away contentedly. When the bus stopped at the end of the ruote, without any conscious object in view, almost without volition, he got down with the rest of the people.

"I wonder if Mollie is at home?" he said to himself, looking in the direction of her studio. Of course, had he intended to see her, he would have called from the house and found out if she were at home. Butno such thought had come to him. But now that he was so near it would be a pity not to run in and see her for just a few minutes.

"Hello, Brian!" Mollie herself opened the door. "Missis away again?" she asked with a comical look and accent.

"Yes, went this afternoon. Up state somewhere. Why?"

"Oh, when the cat's away the mouse will play. And look up another mouse to play with him."

"Don't fool yourself." Brian replied smiling at her nonsense. "I only came out for a ride. I am going right back. But I thought if you were in you might feel hurt if I were so near and didn't come in."

"You are pleased to be facetious tonight."

"I follow in your lead, fair lady."

So they chaffed and laughed with, and at, each other, Brian enjoying himself hugely. Once or twice during the long, short to him, hours he spent in the studio, he thought regretfully of Ruth. She was a good girl and he was hardly fair. Especially when he kissed Mollie. But who could help it? She looked so provokingly pretty with her big checked apron on, washing up the dishes she had made in preparing a welch rarebit for him.

He somehow wished Ruth would wear a checked apron and cook things for him at midnight. It would be terribly jolly. Then he straightway forgot Ruth existed, while Mollie entertained him with the gossip of the village and her own plans for the coming fall and winter.

It was after one o'clock when he rose to go.

"I shall have no shred of reputation left if you stay so late," she had said to him. "But it is good to have you."

"And it is good to some."

Brian really meant it. Mollie had given just the adulation for which his soul hungered. When he described his lonely dinner with only old Rachel in the house, she condoned with him as if he had no dinner at all instead of a delicious one. When he told of the lonely home to which he was doomed to go, she petted him and told him it was a shame that a domestic man should have married a woman who cared nothing for a home.

So that when Brian again mounted the bus he was in a beatific mood. The time had flown, he had been entertained, fussed over, praised and consoled. What more could man ask? Arrived at home, he found Ruth's telegram.

"If it wasn't so late I'd send her an answer," he yawned sleepily. "I'll do it in the morning," then went to bed to dream of Mollie in a checked apron making rarebits which cavorted all over the table and which he vainly tried to catch. While, in a hotel, Ruth tossed and tumbled, sleepless, wondering if he had received her wire and if he had spent the evening at home, or with Mollie King.

To-morrow—Brian and Mollie Are Unconscious That They Are Watched.

Bright's Disease.

Bright's disease is a silent, hardworking enemy, and the victim himself may not know that he has it until it has gone so far that he is incurable. It is easily detected by a test of the urine, and if it is caught in its beginning its destructive force can be held to a minimum throughout the natural life of the victim. When urinalysis shows an excess of uric acid and albumen the presence of Bright's disease is determined, but both the albumen and the uric acid may be decreased by the adoption of an intelligent diet, the selection and consumption of those foods that yield the least of these two elements. Such foods are grains, fresh and dried fruits and fresh vegetables. Meats should be let alone, because they favor the increase of uric acid, and there are some vegetables, like asparagus and mushrooms, that contain more uric acid than meat.

Troubles must come to all men but those who are always looking for them will have the largest share.

When moved to tell your troubles to the world remember how you felt the last time you had to do the listening.

Milk in Greece.

The principal sources of milk supply in Greece are sheep and goats. It is reported that the sheep on the island of Scopelo drop two and often four quits. The milk yield often reaches two o five pints per day, especially the first three months after lambing. There are about 3,000,000 goats in Greece the indigenous mountain breed gives but little milk, while Maltese goats give from three to five pints per day.

The Wedding Dress

By Florence Lillian Henderson

For the first time in ten years Martin Wade was taking a vacation. For the first time in his life he had the money to do it with, and plenty of it. So novel was the situation that the very opulence of his pride required a definite plan as to how he should get rid of it. Novelty, anticipation, a new experience in freedom from care gave to the experience the keenest zest and pleasure.

"The five thousand dollars my brother unexpectedly willed to me," ruminated Martin, "seems to me like an unending fortune."

He did not proceed to squander it. Martin did not know how. Years of economy, thrift, perfect contentment with the ordinary necessaries of life had trained him to be not only self-denying but conservative.

"I will buy a real good suit of clothes," decided Martin, and he looked immensely the better for it. "I had just vegetated all these years. I'll do a little waking up. Then I'll try and find some nice, lazy, quiet little business to go into."

He went out for a walk, to discover a button gone from his new coat. It put him in mind of Mrs. Wilton at once. His landlady had a few weeks previous directed his attention to Mrs. Wilton, a gentle, patient-faced old lady who had seen better days, and, with her unmarried daughter, Madge, was reduced to living in one room. Madge worked at a dressmaking establishment. Her mother had indicated to the landlady that she would be glad to take in light sewing and mending. So Martin had sent some of his belongings to Mrs. Wilton for repairs.

Then, one evening as he called for his bundle on the floor two flights up, the Wiltons were having tea. Martin must take a cup of tea, and he passed a most pleasant hour in the company of the widow and her daughter, the latter a thil, graceful girl whose sweet beauty was marred only by traces of overwork and the anxiety of getting along.

"I've come to trouble you about a wayward overcoat button," reported Martin, and Mrs. Wilton proceeded to sew it on. Martin glanced about the apartment, realizing a sense of order and coziness. His breath came quickly as a daring suggestion entered his mind.

"By the way, Mrs. Wilton," he stammered, "I—that is—I'm having a vacation."

"I hope you will enjoy it," said the widow brightly.

"I'm afraid I don't know how to," half laughed Martin in an embarrassed way. "I feel sort of lonesome, away from the office. Would you—that is, do you think you would enjoy going to the theater with me—you and Miss Wilton?"

They went. They made the trip in a taxi cab. There was a supper afterwards. Mr. Wade, you have given me the pleasantest evening of my life," said Mrs. Wilton when they reached home, and Madge looked her thanks with grateful eyes.

"They are fine people," communed Martin with himself. "Wish I had met them—that is, Miss Wilton—before I got so far along in life." He was not yet thirty, and tried to believe he was sedate and dull as an old man of sixty.

Martin roamed about all kinds of odd places to put in the time. One day he chanced to come upon a sale of unclaimed express packages in an auction room. A momentary investment fever led him to bid for a little wooden box and a long pasteboard one. When he got them home he opened the wooden box first. It contained a broken mechanism, apparently the invention of some poor genius, and the sight of it saddened Martin. Then surprise ensued, for opening the pasteboard box he brought to light a dainty silk wedding dress. As he swung the filmy robe about, it caught on a bureau handle, and tore half way down a seam.

"What am I ever going to do with it?" cogitated Martin. "What nonsense have I indulged in? Oh, well, I'll get it mended and put it away. Maybe some day—some day I may find someone to wear it."

"I shall have to leave mending such delicate stuff to Madge," said Mrs. Wilton, when Martin the next day took her the torn wedding dress and explained its possession as if it were a huge joke. He went up to see how the work was getting on the next evening. The door of the Wilton apartment was ajar. Mrs. Wilton had gone out, but Madge stood before the mirror arrayed in the dress. She burst upon his senses, a rare vision of beauty.

"Oh, how lovely!" cried Martin, impetuously, and Madge turned, blushing like a peony.

"I was trying it on to—to see if the mending showed," she explained confusedly.

"You must keep it, Miss Wilton," floundered Martin. "What use have I for it? It becomes you so, and some time—some time—"

And there Martin Wade took courage. "Miss Wilton—Madge," he said huskily, "I've got to say it. Keep it and wear it—for me. I'm going to ask you to marry me, for I love you." And the frank, plain confession was so sincere that Madge knew that she could trust this man of sterling worth with her happiness.

Not.

The Expectant Mother

"The Shadow of Coming Events" often darkens the days of the expectant mother.

Constipation, always a handicap to the health and happiness of every woman, becomes doubly dangerous to the woman who is preparing to fulfill her highest duty—maternity.

The expectant mother must nourish two. She must be able to get rid of a double waste. Failure to do so poisons herself and the child that she is to bring into the world.

Constipation means more than mere failure to have a regular thorough bowel evacuation. It means stagnation of waste matter in the bowels, production of irritant and poisonous matter, its absorption into the blood, and distribution all over the body.

It means aggravation of all these discomforts that attend the period of pregnancy. It contributes to the tragedies of child-birth. It prejudices the ability of the mother to nurse her child after it has been born.

And, it is dangerous to employ pills, castor oil, purgative mineral waters, salts, etc. that force the bowels to act.

But the Nujol Treatment for Constipation is not only harmless but in every way efficient.

Nujol helps Nature to re-establish natural, thorough, bowel evacuation, regular as clockwork.

Nujol is absolutely harmless.

Nujol is not absorbed. It cannot affect the child. It is easy and pleasant to take.

Best of all, Nujol not only overcomes constipation, but it hinders the formation of poisons in the bowels, absorbs and carries them out of the body, thus preventing complications.

Get Nujol from your druggist and take according to directions.

Warning: NUJOL is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Insist on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes.

Cooking With Cold.

That meat can be cooked by extreme cold as well as by extreme heat is the contention of a German investigator. He has taken the familiar phenomenon that extreme cold seems to the touch like extreme heat and applied it to meats. His tests have revealed the fact that a temperature of 60 degrees below zero, F., seems to do the best, and he contends that meat cooked in this way is equal to meat cooked with heat. He recommends, however, that the meat be kept in tightly sealed jars after being cooked with cold.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The rush of the day's work was nearly over in the telephone office. Jeanette Whipple, trunk operator, facing the clock, saw that in a little less than two hours her time would be up. She wondered if Richard was watching the clock as impatiently as she. Such a long, long time to six o'clock and the happy walk home.

She glanced over the local board. The local girls were always busy. Their hands flew as they connected line after line. The drops fell quicker than they could answer them. The chief operator (No. 25 officially) was working back of the board on the Hayes.

The monitor walked up and down, up and down, back of the girls, who hated her nearly as much as they did their chief. She had been 15 years in the business—and showed it. She was reported to have a soft spot in her heart for the young, curly-headed assistant chief operator at the desk.

The messenger boys called him the fellow with the "pretty blue hair." The girls called him "12½," being assistant to No. 25.

Jeanette laughed to herself as she thought of it. Then she turned down a jack to see if No. 270 was still talking to Ridgeton. Captain Henry's big voice boomed in her ear, and she caught the sentence:

"—tall and dark, about thirty years old, been foreman of the Electric company six years."

Mechanically she turned up the jack. Then as she realized what she had heard she listened again. Why, Richard was foreman of the Electric company. What could have happened?

"Oh, Lathrop'll die. There is no chance. Don't know just how it happened yet. Nash has always borne a good name, though there has been bad blood between him and Lathrop a long time, I hear. Have your men watch sharp. If he did go on that four o'clock I'll head it off at Saturne. It gets there about four-thirty. If he got off at Ridgeton, which I doubt, he can't have gone far yet. I think he will keep on toward the west. Got it all?—five feet eleven, dark, smooth face, well built, brown suit, black derby—all right. Good-by."

270 rang off.

Jeanette took the connection down and leaned back in her chair. The bulletins on the board swayed up and down with a horrible, sickening action. The noise of falling plugs grew faint. The hum of voices died into silence. The board seemed an immeasurable distance away.

Then slowly her brain cleared. She had no trouble in realizing now what it all meant. Richard Nash, her Richard Nash, had killed Lathrop.

His face came up before her, clear cut as a cameo, the wise, tender face, the frank, steady eyes. Why, every one had hated Lathrop but Richard. He had only laughed at him. It could not be true. Some one was playing a joke on her.

She looked swiftly down the long line of girls. All were working, still and sober. The monitor paced slowly, back and forth. No. 12½ was writing out trouble reports.

A drop fell. It was 270. She took it before the recording operator could reach it, and plugged in on the line. Her voice sounded strange to her as she spoke.

"Toll line."

"Give me police station. Saturne, Captain Briggs to the telephone. And right away quick, to central."

She made out the ticket slowly. Her fingers were stiff and cold. She felt numbed all over except her brain. That seemed on fire. She looked down at the small diamond on her left hand. Whether it were true or not, he was Richard—yes—and she loved him.

If Ridgeton had not been able to get a man down to the train in time to search it, after getting Captain Henry's message, there was a small chance for his escape—perhaps she could make it a bigger one, if he were really on that train, as she thought. Could she keep 270 from getting Saturne before the train passed there, a whole half hour yet?

New York was probably his goal. If she could keep the train from being searched before it reached New York, he might escape West, or across the water.

Was he thinking of their walk home at the end of the day, now, she wondered, remorse and fear fighting within him. Or had he had no time to think of her yet?

270 was calling again.

"Can't you get Saturne, Central? What is the matter?"

"Wire is busy. I will call you," she answered clearly. It was only quarter of five now.

She cast a furtive look at the monitor, who was coming toward her. She answered two other calls, and made quick connections. The monitor glanced at her board, then walked slowly away again. Time seemed to stand still, 4:57—4:58—.

270 called again.

Captain Henry's voice boded trouble for somebody.

"Why can't I have Saturne? I must have them before four-fifty."

Jeanette almost laughed. Her blood was up now. 270 must have— Captain Henry said so. 270 must not have —Jeanette Whipple said so. Which would win?

"Wire still busy. I will call you," she said.

Captain Henry fumed. Jeanette listened in silence. Then he slammed up his telephone. She watched the clock and waited. 4:55—she drew a long breath, and passed the call. In a few moments they were talking.

Captain Henry gave the same details that he had given to Ridgeton, gave them like a flash. Then having evidently learned wisdom he passed calls to Lakeville, New Burn and New York at the same time.

Jeanette had not thought he would do that. The train did not get into New York until nearly six o'clock. Dared she delay that call so long a time?

She took the calls slowly, making him repeat several times, until his voice was like a cannon roar with anger. Then she set her teeth, folded her arms and waited. Once she made a feint of receiving reports on the calls and after giving the bogus information courteously to Captain Henry recorded it on the back of the tickets.

5:00 N. C. (no circuit).

5:10 By. (busy).

The girl beside her was watching her curiously. How queer Jeanette Whipple was looking.

The fight was on. 270 called every other breath.

Jeanette tried to keep him good natured.

The intense strain was telling on her. She tried to hold herself still and calm that she might think clearly. She began to realize the terrible thing that had happened. The agony of it sank in slowly. Perhaps she would wake up suddenly and find that she had been dreaming.

But 270 was grim reality. He was calling again.

Then for over an hour she stubbornly fought every inch of the way. Captain Henry was a big man and a smart one, but he could not manage something he did not understand. He had been obliged to wait for busy wires before this. It was nothing new nor surprising. He never even dreamed that this peculiar combination of busy wires, with other technical terms that sounded perfectly proper, even familiar, was due to a slip of a girl, one-quarter his age, in the central telephone office just four blocks up the street.

The numbers danced before her tired eyes. Her face was hot with the excitement. But when six o'clock came she had just put up the connection between 270 and New York. She had won. She had done all she could to save the man she loved.

She stumbled out of her chair. She was so rigid she could scarcely move. She put on her hat and cloak with stiff fingers. The girls seemed to shun her, or was it her fancy? They must know it, too. Everybody must know it. Why, the world was full of it. Richard was a murderer, flying for his life, and yet, so strange and untrue it seemed that, even as she said it, she waited at the street door a minute for his familiar figure. Then she started home alone.

Oh, to know he was safe!

She caught her breath sharply and hurried on.

It had evidently been raining. The dark was coming early. The mist clung to her skirts and dampened her hair. The electric light flickered on little pools of wind-swept water in the road.

Susan met her at the door, her kind, sisterly face placid and smiling. Then she started.

"Why, Jeanette dear, what has happened?"

But Jeanette could not speak. Something was beating in her throat like a mad thing. She brushed past her and went in. Susan did not shut the door. Jeanette heard her saying: "Have you two been quarreling?"

Who was Susan talking to? A man's voice answered.

"It does look like it," he said. "She has been over a block ahead of me all the way, going like a race horse."

"Richard!"

She turned back to the door and tried to call his name, but it was only a gasp. Then he caught her.

"Sweetheart, has someone been frightening you? Why, Jeanette—Why, Jeanette!"

With a great effort she struggled out of the darkness that threatened to engulf her.

"The murder, Richard, you—"

He lifted her up into his arms and, carrying her in, sat down in the big, old-fashioned rocker with her.

"There, there, child. It's all right, Jeanette. Nash Farnsworth shot Lathrop, but he is not going to die, though they thought he was at first. Did you get it wrong? It was mixed at first, in the excitement. Did they tell you it was Richard Nash who did it? His first name being my last one, and description being rather alike, did make a little bother. He got away, I guess. I imagine he got that four o'clock train. Why, little girl, you could not think it was I who shot him, could you?"

And in the hush, while Susan got supper, and the light from the fire played on the walls, the rocking chair swayed gently with its burden, while she told him how she had played the part of Fate to a man she never saw.

After she was quite herself again he looked at her solemnly and shook his head.

"It's just as the poets and philosophers always tell us," he said. "A big door hangs on a little hinge. It takes a woman to fool a man, every time, and to save one, too, God bless her, even if it did not happen to be me."

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxims from the stomach liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than ouside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do

Steel Windmills.

Windmills are now recording some victories in the battle with gasoline engines that has been waged in recent years, a struggle which threatened the disappearance of the picturesque windmills of Holland. Steel windmills, with steel towers and steel sails, are displacing gasoline pumping engines in some parts of Holland, the gasoline engines having displaced the old wooden windmills. They are used entirely for pumping water in keeping the low lying fields well drained.

A Severe Loss.

As a nation the United States has suffered a severe loss in recent years. It has lost the phrase, "I cannot afford." When the housewife today finds an article she needs too expensive for her to purchase she does not say so. She hems and hedges, but does not come out with the frank and convincing statement, "I cannot afford." She thinks she cannot afford nowadays not to afford.—Chicago Tribune.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Pneumonia.

The cough of pneumonia, says Dr. E. F. Bowers in the New York Tribune, is not wise nor expedient to stop before it has done what it started to do—that is, to help eject from the lungs the billions of pneumococci and other germs that cause pneumonia and also the germ products that are filling the lung cells. Any attempt to stop this cough may result, first and foremost, in locking up the secretions and, next, in confusing the symptoms. Skilful, prompt action is necessary in this dangerous disease. There is no place here for the amateur and his "cures." In pneumonia it is necessary to do something, and do it quickly, or pneumonia will do it first. The main thing is to equalize the circulation, keep up the strength and, if unable to abort the disease, prepare the patient for the crisis. Don't try "cough remedies" in pneumonia unless it should be on yourself and you don't care much what happens to you.

UNDERDRAINAGE PAYS

Proven Methods of Draining Low Land, Swamps and Springs.

Mutual Respect and Confidence Are the Keynotes of Successful Co-operation — How These May Be Developed In Any Community.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

In general the conditions making drains necessary are those where the gravitational or free water is either on the surface of the land or so close to the surface as to interfere with the proper growth of plant roots. The instances where the water is lying on the land, such as in pond holes, sloughs, pockets, swamps, etcs., are very common in Ontario, and it is usually an easy matter for these conditions to be remedied. They may be remedied either by means of open ditches or a system of tile drains.

Where there is a large area of low-lying land which is uniformly wet, such as we have in the southwestern counties, namely, Kent, Essex and Lambton, tile drains augmented by open ditches are used, and sometimes when the wet land is the same or possibly lower than the lake level dikes are constructed and pumps installed to remove the water. Other instances where low-lying and flat lands require drainage are those which are occasionally flooded either during the spring freshets or during heavy rains. If no means has been provided for this water to be removed quickly the crops growing on this land will be killed out, and thus cause financial loss to the land owners.

In the case of underground springs we have a condition where the impervious layer of the subsoil has caused the underground water to be blocked and held to such an extent that it eventually comes to the surface. These can be prevented by having a tile drain put in a short distance above the springs so that the water may be cut off and conveyed to a proper outlet.

Another instance is that where irrigation is being carried on. In some of the irrigation districts the water is fairly saturated with alkali salts. When this water is used for irrigation it is spread over the land and eventually is evaporated from the surface of the soil or from the leaves of plants and trees by the sun, the alkali being left on the surface. This alkali accumulates until it becomes so strong as to prevent the growth of plants or trees.

To remove this alkali it is necessary to install a system of underdrains, then thoroughly flood the soil which is saturated with alkali, thus dissolving the alkali and allowing the water to pass off through the drains, thereby removing the alkali. After this has been removed it will be necessary to use a greater amount of water for irrigation of this soil, and after each irrigation as soon as the water has been evaporated to such an extent that the remaining water is almost saturated with alkali the free water remaining in the soil and containing this saturated solution of alkali must be allowed to run off through the drains.

Across many Ontario farms we see small creeks flowing at least part of the season. In most instances where this occurs the drain can be placed parallel to this creek, and except during the spring freshets or after very heavy rains the water will flow through this drain, thereby obviating the use of the creek. When this drain is installed the creek banks could be levelled, and instead of being a creek with ragged banks and weeds and small trees growing alongside, could be converted into a scoop ditch. This ditch could be of such a nature as to allow farm machinery to cross back and forth, and would take care of the occasional heavy flows of water.

In all conditions where the ground water comes within two and a half feet of the surface of the soil it is necessary for this to be removed in some manner so that plants may have proper root growth.—W. R. Scott, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Philosophy of Having a Good Time.

Take the "t" out of toil and you have oil. You can't take the hard work out of farming as easily as that, but a little run robs it of much of its drudgery. Good times are the oil in the toil of agriculture. That is what a great many sincere persons overlook who study economics more than human nature.

When we attempt to organize a farmers' association, what is done? Why right away a vast amount of talking is committed anent education and improvement. Both are good, of course, and the farmer, in common with all humanity, wants to improve — there's a difference between improving and being improved—but he's not always too sure that the association will effect the improvement.

To begin with, he is often not too well acquainted with his real neighbors—the men in the inside of the men he knows now show themselves only to kindred spirits. Then after a hard day's work he is prone to stay quietly at home in preference to driving several miles to discuss, under a smoky lamp, the old problems in much the same old way.

But there's one thing everyone wants—a good time. Everyone takes his recreation in some form — only there's nothing collective about it; each goes his own way at his own time. Really persuade the neighbors once that they can have a better time at the club meeting than they can at home, and they'll go without coaxing.

So that seems the logical starting point. A leader never finds it hard to get people to organize for pleasure—to have a good time.

And it leads to great things, too. As people become better acquainted mutual respect and confidence develop. That is the fundamental and first step to business co-operation.—Ontario Department of Agriculture.

POULTRY MANAGEMENT

To Make the Farm Flock Pay Best Only One Must Have Charge.

Electric Lighting Is a Great Convenience on the Farm—Wiring Costs About $160, While a Small Plant Should Not Exceed $500.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Successful poultry-keepers are found much more frequently among those who operate what is termed a "one-man plant" than elsewhere. This simply means that poultry require some one person's attention, or that personal attention is so important that it is usually not to be found efficient among the ordinary laborers.

Poultry know the time of day when it is customary to feed them, and, perhaps, equally as well all other daily tasks. They respond fairly well to the bond of sympathy of the feeder. If the feeder rushes into the pen and throws the feed around the poultry usually rush out of the way or out of the doors if they can get there. Fright reduces egg production. Particularly nervous hens, when badly frightened, sometimes cease laying for several days. The person caring for the poultry should be fond of them and take an interest in them. One's interest usually goes up or down with the production of the flock. To maintain keen interest when the production is low, or when the flock is out of condition, is the real test. If you hold on and study the flock, generally speaking, you will succeed.

A change of attendants, even when both are good at the work, nearly always means a decrease in production for some days. The careful feeder knows just about what this or that flock requires as to quantity of feed, etc., and further, he or she usually goes about the work on a definite plan so that in time the birds know just what to expect, not only as to time and quantity of feed given, but the movements of the attendants in the pen.

The writer ventures to assert that if the poultry on the farms of Ontario were, on each farm, given over to one person to look after, that there would be a very great increase in the success of the undertaking as well as a very large increase in the production; even as much as twenty-five per cent. in many instances.

No line of live stock responds more to careful attention than poultry. The boy or girl on the farm can learn much of how to feed and what to feed. They may learn something of the problems in breeding.

Successful poultry-keepers know that there is a time to hatch and rear, a time to cull, a time to sell, a time to clean and disinfect, as well as a time to feed.

Plenty of farmers are making money from poultry, but they know poultry does well only when given careful and systematic attention.—Prof. W. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Principles of Electric Lighting.

In the year 1800, Volta, a famous Italian physicist, discovered that if a plate of copper and one of zinc were placed in weak sulphuric acid, and connected by a wire above the acid, there was transmitted along the wire a certain amount of energy, which transmission we speak of as a current of electricity, comparing it to a current of water. As it requires pressure or head to make water flow, so it requires electric pressure to make electricity flow. The pressure of the simple cell described above is called a volt, in honor of its discoverer. A dynamo generating 32 volts would have a pressure equal to that of 32 simple cells.

Electric energy passing through fine wires will heat them white hot, hence electricity may be used for lighting. Current for this purpose usually has a pressure of 110 volts, when supplied by light and power companies, but private plants usually generate only about 32 volts. All current generated by dynamos is alternating when made, i.e., it flows in one direction for half a revolution of the dynamo and then in the opposite direction during the other half, but by fitting the dynamo with a commutator (which means changer) these waves of current may all be sent in the same direction along the distribution lines. It is then called direct current or D.C.

Now alternating current, or A.C., may be used for lighting, just as well as D.C. If the alternations are very rapid the light is perfectly steady, but if too slow the lights will fluctuate in brightness, and the light is hard on the eyes. Many light and power companies supply A.C.

However, A.C. cannot be used to charge storage cells and hence private plants which usually have storage batteries must be of the D.C. variety. This is also true of lighting systems for automobiles.

One-horse power will run 30 ordinary tungsten lamps, each giving from 23 to 24 candle-power, while if they are nitrogen filled each lamp will give about 45 c.p., hence it would take only about half as many to give the same light as before. As the ordinary farm probably would not require more than, say, four lights on an average of two hours per day, taking the whole year round, it is easily seen that the amount of power required is very small. The outlay for wiring the buildings varies a great deal with circumstances, but probably $100 would be a fair average.

Where one is too far from the distribution lines of any existing power plant he may install a small plant of his own. The original cost of these will run from $300 to $500, depending on size and type, and the interest on this amount would be the largest part of the cost of light for the farm, the cost of running the plant being only a few cents per day. —R. R. Graham, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Twelve Million Telephones.

It is reported that there are now in this country 12,000,000 telephones, or one for every two houses in the country. This does not mean that one-half of the residences in the country contain an instrument, since many business houses have a large number, but the figures are instructive and illuminating. Practically everybody who is anybody in the cities or towns and villages has a telephone, while those in the country districts are legion. The astonishing fact is that each of these phones is used on an average of six times a day. The total number of calls in a year runs up into the billions, and it is not appreciable by the human mind.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Headaches.

Headaches may come from tired eyes, strained nerves, fatigue or a disordered stomach, and in four cases out of five it is the latter. When the cause has been discovered the trouble must be removed. No temporary relief will serve when the headaches become constant visitors, but an immediate removal of the cause will leave no reason for a return visit.

Disordered stomach is most frequently the root of most headaches. A good laxative taken at once will help, and then a dose should be taken once a week to keep the system clear of fermentation. Purchase a box of senna leaves at any drug store for 5 or 10 cents and take a large pinch of these at night, followed by a glass of water. These are excellent to keep the system in a clear condition.

A simple diet should be followed while the head and stomach are weak, and rich foods should be avoided for some time after an attack of sick headache.

Many headaches come from strained eyes. The only thing to be done in such a case is to consult an oculist. If the eyes are only tired an eye wash of boracic acid will help them, but it is safest not to neglect these delicate organs.

Nervous headaches and headaches caused by fatigue should be treated by complete rest in bed for a day or longer if necessary.

Nominations for Council Drew Crowd of Electors

Twenty-five Candidates Were Proposed But the List Will Probably Dwindle to About Fifteen—All Pledged Themselves for a Greater Peterboro.

SUMMARY OF SPEECHES

Twenty-five candidates were nominated for the Council last night at a meeting in the Council Chamber that lacked nothing in numbers, interest in the proceedings and indications of an apparently genuine public spirit. The crowd of ratepayers packed the gallery and occupied every part of the room, even to the press bench. And outside in the hall there was a group that couldn't find even standing room within. Business men squeezed in with the men from the Labour Unions, whose presence was made possible by the changed hour for the nominations. That they welcomed this opportunity to take part in the preliminaries of electing a new Council was clearly manifested by their unusually large representation.

The cynic may have looked upon the whole affair as the annual effervescence of that casual interest in the city's business that bubbles up at Christmas and subsides on the morning after New Year's. Other citizens who retain hopes of some day gathering up the loose ends of public spirit and binding them into an organization such as some progressive cities have established, these citizens must have regarded with regret the absence of co-ordinated and clearly defined purpose that they must have observed beneath the surface of last night's atmosphere.

In the speeches that followed the close of the nominations there was a common expression of "working in the best interests of the city," and an evident desire to be useful aldermen, in the happy event of election. The candidates spoke in the order of their nomination, with Mayor Duncan presiding. Ald. Edgar led off with a review of the year's business. Among the topics he touched upon was the extension of the street railway on the Monaghan road. He denied that he had been personally interested in this new line, and detailed the negotiations of the Hydro-Electric Commission which finally resulted in action a few weeks ago. The Commission, he said, had been urged to improve the service on the Jackson Park line, and their officials had decided after investigating the traffic conditions, that the Charlotte street service should be extended south on the Monaghan road to Patterson street, thereby providing a new branch that would reach from Patterson street to Hunter street without a transfer at George street. This would prove an advantage to the Jackson Park patrons by eliminating one of the two transfers of which they had complained. It was this programme, Ald. Edgar explained, that was adopted when he urged the Commission a few weeks ago to give Peterborough and its needs more adequate attention than it had received.

Ald. Edgar also took credit for the fact that the question of the assessment of the Quaker Oats Company had been carried to Judge Huycke and eventually upheld. He had stood out for the presentation of the city's case by the City Solicitor, and the city had gained to the extent of a school tax of $16,000 a year.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin.

"In the four years in which I have been a member of the Council I have tried to be helpful," Ald. Dobbin said. During the last two years the Council had neither the ambition nor the opportunity to be anything but economical and moderate. He was chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, and he pointed out that harmony and good feelings prevailed at the Fire Hall, and felt that the city had an efficient brigade. He modestly referred to his share in the city's coal venture, stating that this department had been carried on as an insurance for the citizens against a scarcity such as that of last winter. The financial statement of the municipal fuel yard up to November 1st showed a small credit balance after all expenses had been met, including those of new coal sheds, bags and other working equipment. At the end of the coal year, he hoped the department would be able to make he good a showing.

Ald. Jones.

Ald. Jones said that the work of the year had been sufficiently reviewed. He had done what he thought best in the interests of the whole city, and if elected promised to continue in the same way.

The Germans Admit Defeat and Seek Speedy Peace

Prominent German Socialist is Convinced That Germany Was Wholly to Blame for the War and Inspired Austrian Note to Serbia.

By Frank J. Taylor.
(United Press.)

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—If the Allies expect to collect indemnities from Germany, they must conclude peace immediately, so the Germans can get down to work and earn money," Emil Bartha, prominent Socialist, declared in an interview with the United Press to-day.

Bartha said that while he was convinced Germany was wholly to blame for the war, "Germany must have peace immediately at any price," declared Bartha. "The Germans must admit defeat and pay anything to get peace and food so they can go to work and pay off their debts. Personally, I was convinced from the start that Germany was guilty of starting the war. I possess no documentary evidence, but I am certain Germany inspired the Austrian note to Serbia. We have demanded the production of secret documents of the militarists, but the most immediate problems are peace and demobilization. We realize the danger of demobilization as the result of Poland's attitude. We believe, however, that the Allies would take care of Poland if we were defenceless. Furthermore, if Germany were defenceless, the Allies would be able to reduce their armies of occupation and thus save millions of dollars a month to themselves and to us.

"It's to the Entente's interests to do this as well as ours, because it would be unwise for them to strangle their debtors.

"Germany needs supplies and credit from America and the Allies. We have no cotton, no leather, and very little other raw materials. Millions of our peoples are hungry. It is a dark hour for Germany."

Fear Polish Aspirations

The Trouble Between Poland and Germany—Seized Territory.

(Special to Examiner.)

BERLIN, December 24. — Chancellor Ebert fears the result of Polish aspirations in East Prussia, it was learned to-day. It was also ascertained that he believes that France will attempt to annex the left bank of the Rhine.

The trouble between Poland and Germany was the result of propaganda designed to show that the Germans were endeavoring to spread Bolshevist doctrines in Poland, Count Kessler, the German Minister, who was expelled from Warsaw, told the United Press to-day.

"It was unnecessary to break relations," Kessler said. "The trouble was entirely due to propaganda. We are more anti-Bolshevik even than the Poles. They hope to go to the peace conference with territory they have seized from Germany."

RESTORATION OF RUSSIA

Sensational Announcement Made in Section of British Press.

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, December 24. — Capping a growing wave of suspicion evidenced in the Liberal press during the past month, the "New Statesman" makes the sensational announcement in its current issue that the Bolsheviki, supported now by former opponents, are now effecting a real restoration of Russia and Russian order.

The 'New Statesman," far from being an organ of extreme Radicals, is regarded as a sober and serious production, with a large circulation among the Liberal intellectuals.

Ministers' Christmas Messages Re-echo Promise of Bethlehem 'Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men'

First Peace Christmas in Five Years Will Be Welcomed By Hundreds of Homes in Peterboro—Ministers of City Unite in Expression of Thanks—"The Birthday of the 'Prince of Peace' Has a Special Message for 1918, When Amid the Ruins of Fallen Civilization We Talk of Re-construction."

The great thing has happened for which nations strove, and the era of "peace on earth" is at hand:. Despite the anxieties of a troubled world it is possible to figure the possibilities of a new era, and meanwhile the Christmas season brings with it a light of higher hope and cheer to all well-wishers of the creed of brotherhood. The world in part has 'found itself' in the year now drawing to a close. It has advanced a long way on the high road toward momentous ideals.

Over seas there will be a Christmas such as thousands of Canadians never saw before. It will be a season of Christmas boxes, of home-looking thoughts, of proud memories, of strange tasks and of perplexities growing out of strange tasks. It will nevertheless be a Canadian Christmas wherever Canadians are. Trust Canadian boys for that. And it will carry the devout wish that another year may see Europe and all the world a happier place.

At home it will be a Christmas of new images which the fancy of youth and of age will invest with sentiments that must ever remain old. Santa Claus may travel in a biplane, but his message is the same old message—a message owned by no creed or sect, for Christmas belongs to all the world.

It cannot be doubted that the sentiment of thanksgiving, which began its expression on Thanksgiving Day, will come to its finest fruition at Christmas. To every individual the day must have its special meaning—a meaning that cannot always be openly joyous—but nationally the day must inevitably rise in the year 1918 as the crisis of the sentiments and emotions which have been molded by a momentous year.

The following ministers of the city have kindly responded to The Examiner's request for a Christmas message based on the most momentous event of the ages and its successful conclusion. Their sentiments find expression in the appended form:

REV. AMOS J. THOMAS, M.A., B.D.,
(George Street Methodist Church.)

Once more the Christmas bells are ringing. In recent years they sounded amid the din of war, but now with the world at peace they peal forth their joyous music. May the clash of arms never again be mingled with their melody.

These happy bells have a message for the home. They tell us of Him who came to earth as a little child. Since that glad day the Christmas cheer has gathered round the sacred circle. May brightness and love be at every fireside, and the Christ of Bethlehem be presnt with His blessing.

It is a note of hope the bells are pealing. Christ came to Bethlehem and Christ still comes. He is our Saviour and friend. He will help us in our struggles. He will sweeten our sorrows. He will give us victory over sin. May every heart be thrilled with the music of the Saviour's love.

so may the bells ring on.
The world needs their message.
Some day they will sound a strain of universal triumph.

"Then pealed the bells more loud and deep,
God is not dead, nor doth He sleep!
The wrong shall fail,
The right prevail,
With peace on earth, good-will to men!"

REV. J. R. WEBB,
Pastor of Murray St. Baptist Church.

"They are dead which sought the young child's life." Matt. ii-20.

It was so of Herod and ultimately it must be so of every power that is opposed to the principles represented by the baby of Bethlehem. From the days of Herod, to those of Wilhelm of Germany, all who seek the young child's life thereby sign their own death warrant. "He must increase" and "when the kings of the earth set themselves and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and His Anointed — He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh."

The shrieking guns of the nation that believed in force are now silent, and the blaze of her death-dealing devices is no more seen, but the voice of the angelic host is still heard declaring the Divine preference "Peace on Earth," and the Star of Bethlehem has not been extinguished by the inventions of men.

There was, according to the ancient Christmas story, one aged seer, who rejoicing with others said "thine eyes have seen thy-salvation" then he remembered something else and said unto Mary the Mother: "A sword shall pierce through thine own soul also." In the year Nineteen Hundred and Eighteen, our eyes have seen the Salvation of the Lord, but while joy bells are ringing and festive songs fill the earth because peace has come again, we must not forget the sword-pierced mothers of the world. Like Mary they keep much in their own hearts, but they rejoice that they were accounted worthy to bear sons who at so great a price should do something for the saving of the world.

At the season of this peace Christmas I covet the privilege of laying a wreath of flowers at the feet of the parents with the pierced hearts.

CANON J. C. DAVIDSON,
Rector St. John's Church.

In this unique Christmastide of 1918 Religious and National rejoicings are happily blended.

The Divine GIFT to the world is supplemented by the Divine Gift to the Nations. The Union Jack may well take its place beside the Banner of the Cross.

The happy re-union of families is this year intensified by the homecoming of long-absent soldiers, the advance-guard of our honoured Canadian Army.

Well, then, may we rejoice and be glad together! Yes "together" is the word for the Festival of Union human and Divine.

Let the Christmas circle be stretched out to include in some way the children and the childless, the glad, the sad, and the bad! Surely the joy of this bright season (in some measure and kind) is for us all as we all have a place at the Birth-day Feast of Him Who came to seek and to save all who need His help!

REV. ROBERT POGUE,
Pastor St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

We shall find it easier to enter into the Christmas spirit this year than last. Christmas is a time for laughter and good cheer, for kindness and charity, for family reunions and rejoicings. It was hard to enter into its real spirit with all the world at war; hard to hear the angels' song of "peace on earth, good will toward men" while cannon roared out their message of hate and death; hard to make merry while our brothers suffered and bled, and died on the blood sodden battlefields of Europe.

But at last the war has ended, the long weary years of suffering and bloodshed have passed, a measure of peace has come to the world, and goodwill is once more taking the place of hatred and cruelty.

The special gift of Christ to the world was the gift of peace. The world has sometimes refused the good gifts of heaven. Let us hope that it has profited by the stern and awful discipline of war, and that henceforth it may make room for Him who is the "Prince of Peace," and who was manifested amongst men that wars might cease unto the ends of the earth.

Let us one and all give ourselves at this glad Christmas season to the bringing nearer and nearer the time when every day of the year will be a Christmas day, in the sense that the Spirit of Christ will pervade all human relationships; when every day will be like the one which that great lover of his fellowmen, Charles Dickens, "always thought of as a good time, a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time, when men and women seem by one consent to open their shut up hearts freely to all the world."

Re-establish a Monarchy

Royalists Have Started a Campaign in Germany With This End in View.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—Royalists have started an active propaganda campaign to win the spirit of the German and Austrian people for the re-establishment of a monarchy, it became apparent to-day.

The movement centres in Bavaria regarded as the pivotal state of the Austro-German political situation. It is being conducted by the clerical groups who are at present devoting their strongest efforts to the rural populations.

The republicans are convinced that the formal establishment of a German republic and a presidential election—scheduled for the last of this month or the first of next—will effectually end the aspirations of the monarchists. As a result they are redoubling their efforts to combat the monarchial propagandists.

Bavaria, in addition to its territorial and economic importance, would bring into the German republic a large portion of German-Austria which would replace any territory lost through the aspirations of the French and the Poles. The German newspapers therefore, believing a strong central government absolutely essential to the life of the German republic, are vigorously opposing the republican saparatist movement in Bavaria, on the grounds that it would weaken the democratic movement and be playing into the hands of the royalists.

Newest Programme.

The plan for establishment of seven semi-republics in Germany and Austria, to be confederated like the United States, was being strongly advocated in Saxony. The newest programme in this campaign provided the following line up: Dresden as the capital of upper Saxony; Hanover as capital of lower Saxony; Coblens as capital of the Rhineland; Stuttgart as capital of Schweben, which would be called Neckarland; Munich as capital of Bavaria, which would be called Danubeland; Vienna as capital of German Austria, which would be called Alpland, and Berlin as capital of Oberland, which would include Brandenburg, Prussia, Posen and Silesia. Each republic would have a local president or governor who would be under the confederation's president in matters of national importance. Either Berlin or Dresden would be the national capital.

Electioneering in the balloting for delegates to the national assembly is proceeding. The army is taking an active part in this. General Von Goutard, commander of the Fourteenth Baden army corps, has issued a proclamation urging the army to vote against the Spartacides.

The National Transport Workers Federation has presented to all municipal and privately owned tramways a demand for a working day of 44 hours at the present weekly wages.

The compromise of a 44 hour week has been passed upon by the Engineering and Shipbuilding Union.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 24TH, 1918.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Mayor George Duncan is to be congratulated upon the fact that he has been returned, unopposed, to the chief magistrate's chair for a second term. In his first year as mayor His Worship has made few mistakes, and he has earned the thanks and respect of the citizens whom he served because he was always at their service. He has not spared himself in the city's interests, and has given freely of his time and energy in looking after the duties of his responsible position. In the many problems that are to come before the Council next year, Mayor Duncan should not only have the support of those who compose next year's aldermanic board, but of the citizens generally. His re-election by acclamation is proof that the people of Peterborough have found little fault with the manner in which he has performed his duties during the past year, but it should mean more than that—it should be significant of the desire of the citizens to assist His Worship in every way possible.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., is also returned without a contest, as a member of the Utilities Commission, and the city thus retains the services of a useful and capable civic official. Mr. Moore has been a member of the Utilities Commission and of the Water Commission for the past fifteen years, and during that time has only once been opposed at the polls. His record is one of which he may well be proud, and he may well be pardoned for feeling gratified that his fellow-citizens have recognized his services by once more returning him to office unchallenged by an opponent.

THE NOMINATIONS.

Except for the unusually large attendance, accounted for as much by the fact that the proceedings took place in the evening as by an increase in public interest in the event, the nominations for the City Council last night were to some extent at least a disappointment. It is true there was no lack of candidates. In all twenty-five were nominated, but a number of these are already out of the race and others will probably fail to qualify. There was, however, in the addresses that were given not much promise for the future. The aspirants for office left little with their hearers but the impression that the speakers saw ahead of them only the position that they wanted to fill and not the service they might be able to render. Such a diagnosis of what was said may not be fair to what was actually in the minds of those who spoke, but it really seemed as if the candidates who were heard failed to vision the nature of the task that is before them and the splendid opportunities there are for real service. The members of the old council defended or boasted of their record during the past year, but none of them said much about what lies ahead, while the new candidates for the most part steered clear of definite things and contented themselves with the usual indefinite promises of serving to the best of their ability. This was one disappointing feature about the proceedings; the addresses failed to reveal the grasp of affairs, the insight into the problems of the future that the ratepayers should be anxious to find among the men from whom next year's council is to be elected. Another disappointment was that quite a number of those nominated were not on hand to speak at all, so that there was no opportunity to form a judgment as to their policy for the future. And still another outstanding feature was the apparent failure of the candidates to realize that Peterborough as a city owes a duty to her returned soldiers and the men who are still to come back. Of the many speakers, only two or three even referred to the returned soldiers, and not one aspirant for office saw fit to point out that the duty of finding employment for all our ex-service men is not only a Dominion and a provincial government matter, but that there is a municipal responsibility as well. This neglect on the part of the majority of the aspirants to indicate an earnest interest in the problem which should be regarded as a paramount feature of next year's council work is not a reassuring sign. The duty that the city owes to its sons who went out to fight for the cause of liberty is a sacred responsibility that cannot be thrown aside—it must be kept always to the fore and because of that fact, the almost complete passing by of the question by the men who are seeking election is a most regrettable matter.

A PEACE CHRISTMAS.

The Christmas celebration in Peterborough, to-morrow, on the first peace Christmas day after over four years of terrible war, should be a memorable one. Never since the first Christmas has there been a time when mankind has had more reason to rejoice and be glad. The awful conflict, the shadow of which has hung over the world for many months, is over. Our victorious soldiers fresh from their triumphs, will soon be home with us again — many indeed have been enabled to rejoin the family group in time to take part in the festivities of to-morrow. Our just and righteous cause has triumphed—the tyrant whose machinations threatened the welfare and safety of the whole world is powerless and defeated. Even in the homes of those who are yet mourning the loss of a loved one as a result of the war, there is cause for gladness at this festive season, because coupled with the grief at the one who is gone, there is the satisfaction that the sacrifice was not made in vain, that in dying, the unreturning brave, laid down their lives in helping to bring victory to the cause of democracy and liberty.

Our thoughts will go out to-morrow in the midst of our rejoicing to our brave soldiers of the Canadian army corps who are keeping the watch on the Rhine, and who will spend Christmas in a hostile country, where the prowess of their arms has carried them, to the sick and wounded in the hospitals of France, England and Canada, and to those returning men who will pass the Christmas day on the Atlantic, while the brave ships that are carrying them are steaming towards the home land. We will not forget the men of the Siberian Expeditionary Force, who in frozen Russia are fighting beneath the Union Jack.

May next Christmas find all our men back with us again—may the world be a better place in which to live. May the doctrine of a square deal for every one have its realization before the next year's Christmas season comes around. In expressing these wishes The Examiner desires to express the fervent hope that to-morrow may be a most happy and joyous Christmas for its readers.

THAT SIBERIA EXPEDITION.

One of the reasons why the dispatching of a Canadian expeditionary force to Siberia is questionable policy is that almost all the four or five thousand men composing the force are drafted men who are going very much against their will. If it were a volunteer force there would be less objection to the enterprise. The Herald learns from private correspondence that the spirit of the men is almost mutinous. They were willing enough to go to Europe to fight in the great war; but now that the war is virtually over they feel it a cruel hardship to be dispatched to Siberia to fight in a cause which does not concern them—to fight a people with whom Canada is not at war. Especially is this feeling rife among the married men and those who have left good positions to put on the king's uniform.

We are informed that when they were invited to volunteer for service in Siberia more than eighty per cent. of the men refused to accept the invitation. It may be recalled that a few days ago there was published a dispatch from Vancouver to the effect that the troop ship which had sailed from that port bound for Vladivostok returned to port after being out for two days — returned "on account of bad weather." That explanation must have puzzled many readers. That a steamship should return to port because of stress of weather after having steamed several hundred miles on her journey was so unusual an occurrence that it compelled wonder. The official explanation of the interrupted voyage was unreliable. It is believed that the troopship returned because of something very like mutiny on board when attempts were made to compel the men to make fresh attestations.

The expedition is a mistake. Canadian troops ought not to be sent to Russia to participate in a civil war. They should not be sent out of this country save for the defence of Canada, as the Militia act provides. It could with reason be argued that our men were dispatched to France for the defence of Canada, because Canada was threatened by the menace of German world-domination. But nothing that is taking place in Russia threatens Canada. No more of our troops should be sent there, and those who are there should be recalled as soon as possible.—Hamilton Herald.

GIVE ONE GOOD PRACTICAL GIFT

Let the head of the house give his family a piano—and that one splendid gift will be more appreciated by all than the dozen or so small and comparatively useless things it replaces.

THE TWO VIEWPOINTS.

"I am going to find a job just as soon I can, and that six months' post-discharge pay will go into the bank I may be able to use it later on to go into business for myself."

"Six months post-discharge pay! Why, I won't have to go to work for half a year at least!"

There is considerable ground for reflection in these two paragraphs. The speaker in each case was a returned soldier, and their words indicate a widely different viewpoint, in considering the new war gratuity just announced by the Government. There may be for all ex-service men a moral to be found in these two speeches; which do they consider the wiser course? That indicated by soldier No. 1, who intends to conduct himself as if there were no allowance for him and by going to work immediately use his gratuity as a nest egg in the savings bank or soldier No. 2's policy of loafing until his six months' allowance is expended and then be forced to find employment?

Ald. Saunders was ill, and Ald. Worth was not present.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre reminded the workingmen that it was his resolution that moved the nomination hour from noon until after supper. He recalled that in the Finance committee he had felt that the city should stand by its agreement with the Quaker Oats Company, but after the more detailed discussion in Council he had concluded to support the motion that would let the Court of Revision's decision take its course to the County Judge for a decision.

Ald. W. H. Taylor, chairman of Finance committee, presented a report of the city's finances during the year.

Ald. M. McIntyre said he had done all in his power to provide for the beginning of the work on the Hunter street bridge this year. He dissented from Ald. Edgar's view of the McDonnel street sewer, stating that he had supported the request for it because he regarded Mount St. Joseph as different from a private citizen. The Sisters, he said, spent about $20,000 a year in the city and were giving their services for the education of children.

Speaking of the Quaker Oats question, he said that Ald. Edgar had first expressed the view that the company was able to pay the school tax.

"I was the first to state that the company had broken their agreement when the new bridge was proposed and that the assessment matter was not a question of whether the company could pay the tax or not. Ratepayers in Ashburnham have been pressing me to stand for election and if I do I will appeal for your votes."

Ald. Weir Not Running.

Ald. Weir announced that he would not be a candidate. In Council, he said, he had opposed the school assessment on the Quaker Oats Company because he felt that the city was not honest in repudiating the agreement it had made with the company for a fixed assessment. "We went to Chicago and did our best to get them here, and if we could get another industry with as great an output I believe we would make the same offer to them. I think we should respect our word."

The Labour Candidates.

The Labour candidates, Robert Morrison, Harry Gainey, Alex. Murray and James Garside made a good impression in their short speeches in which they made it clear that while they were running under the endorsation of the Trades Council, they intended to work for the welfare of the city as a whole. Mr. Murray, particularly, said he that would stand by the returned soldiers.

Mr. R. H. Harstone and Mr. Henry Hickey gave their reasons for declining their nominations.

Ex-Ald. Phelan a Candidate.

Ex-Ald. Phelan stated that he would remain in the contest and reminded the ratepayers of the experience he gained as a former member of the Council.

Ex-Ald. Stratton Non-committal.

Ex-Ald. Stratton did not commit himself. He replied to Ald. Edgar on the Quaker Oats assessment question and piled up two columns of figures, the one a formidable tabulation of the possible, probable and certain expenditures for next year, and the other a radiant prospect of industrial extensions and activity, public works and city undertakings for next year that more than offset the gloomy predictions of a million dollar addition to the debenture debt.

Mr. Hughson Johnston in the Field.

Mr. Hughson Johnston said that if elected he would be unfettered, representing no faction but the citizens as a whole. He facetiously remarked that he liked the appearance of the Council desks and had already picked out a comfortable chair for next year.

A few minutes before ten, the last aspirant for the aldermanic estate had been heard, and after the prosy reiterations the meeting ended with the National Anthem.

Ministers Christmas Messages

Christmas ought to be a day when there is universal recognition that there is something in life higher, nobler, sweeter than selfishness and avarice. It ought to be the one day in all the year that levels differences between classes and links mankind into a great, common brotherhood.

REV. B. GREATRIX
(Pastor of St. James' Church)

Christmas this year will be welcomed by thousands and tens of thousands of hearts and homes that have been living under a dread for the past four years of what might befall their loved ones who had gone forth at the peril of life and limb at the call of King and Country. An armistice has been signed which we trust shall fruit into peace that shall be just, righteous and lasting, never to be broken again by war's rude alarm. The dark shadow of possible defeat or a peace by compromise has disappeared—a peace by understanding that held within its folds all the material essential to another and a greater conflagration has been avoided by a complete victory—(that has removed the fear from our hearts and the dread from our lives) and should call forth our deep heartfelt thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God who has vouchsafed to crown our cause with rejoicing.

R. B. GROBB
(Rector of All Saint's Church)

Christmas has come back to us, after four dreary years it is here again with its spirit of joy and peace. These seemed like hollow mockeries in the days of the Great War, which cast its shadow even over this wonderful day and the eternal child-spirit for which it stands. But on the light of world peace it spreads again its magic spell.

The birthday of the "Prince of Peace" has a special message for 1918, when, amid the ruins of a fallen civilization, we talk of reconstruction. It is a challenge to rebuild upon the foundation which God himself laid in the little town of Bethlehem, when He came to dwell with men and sanctify every part of the world's life. Only insofar as the new structure is permeated with the divine life will it endure. It will not hold together of itself though it be founded on a peace conference of the wisest men and bound by a league of nations.

"Peace on Earth will be only transitory unless we accept the way of peace which God has provided and which is proclaimed anew each Christmas Day.

REV. F. E. MALOTT.
(Pastor of Trinity Church.)

The message of the first Christmas morning, repeated year after year for nineteen centuries, has a meaning this year it has not had for half a decade. John Milton in his "Hymn of the Nativity" assumes that there was peace in all the world when Jesus was born in Bethlehem. He says:

"No war nor battle sound
Was heard the world around,
The idle spear and shield were high uphung,
The hooked chariot stood unstained with hostile blood,
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng
And kings sat still with awful eye,
As if they surely knew their sovereign Lord was nigh."

We have no sure means of verifying the truth of his statement. We know that of no Christmas since has it been true. Not even to-day is it true, even though the great war has come to a close. But never since Christ came to earth as the Prince of Peace has the world been nearer the time of peace than it is to-day. Other periods of the world's history may have seemed more peaceful, but slumbering hate and armed truce were not peace. To-day war is discredited as never before. Perhaps the nation that is least in love with war to-day is the nation that started the great war. Of course, we must not be too optimistic about the war-weary nations of Europe. There can be no peace other than armed truce except among "men of good will."

The most hopeful sign of to-day is that there are more "men of good will" in the world, and more nations that are disposed to join the league for the preservation of peace than ever before. Surely this is a vindication of the Gospel of Peace! For this we can echo the angels' song this Christmas with deeper significance and rejoice in a Saviour who is also King, whose reign is already a reality to so many and whose birth into humanity is the pledge of the world's redemption.
ing Prince of Peace.

"THE SIGNAL FOR ADVANCE"
REV. W. H. WHITE
(Rector of St. Luke's Church)

"Most of us need no urging this year to the spending of a joyful and even a thankful Christmas. Joy, however, shall strike its roots deeper and bear more practical fruit than ever before.

"For many this Christmas can bring joy only of that deep and poignant sort which filled the heart of the Father when he consented to his Son's leaving heaven to redeem the world—joy in the expectation of the great use that men would make of his sacrifice.

World-peace now, as in the first century, is a matter for thanksgiving, not so much in itself as in providing unexampled opportunity for mankind to turn its steps into the way leading to inward and permanent peace. Towards that path the Child of Bethlehem always points. But the light of this first Christmas after the Great War reveals it more clearly than ever before as following parellel lines of Christian reunion and co-operation in Social Service."

REV. A. G. DONER,
(Pastor of Bethany Tabernacle.)
Most Momentous Christmas Since Christ was Given.

With the advent of anotner Yuletide, a new outburst of the natal song should flow from every awakened, enlightened soul.

Let the universe shout exultingly its grateful welcome to the Heralds of Peace as once more they cast into the bosom of men their chaplets of song, "Peace on earth to men of good-will."

Since that song first rang out under the mid-night stars of Judea's sky, ravishing the hearts of the Wise Men, a denizen of night has darkened the sky with lowering clouds of conscienceless autocracy, blood-thirsty anarchy and hellish militarism, innoculating the spirit of man with their Satanic virus, changing good-will to gall of hate, and peace and hope to tumult and hopelessness.

But God be praised, the Annunciation (though its wheels have seemed to drag with intolerable heaviness) must surely come. This is not the hour of the Prince of Peace. We have only reached a lull in the midst of storm, it is an hour of truce, of Temporary, Time-peace. While we rejoice in this brief respite, let men beware, lest they foolishly endeavor to wrest from the Muse of History her solemn warning—

"That in time of Peace and National Prosperity, men do most easily forget God," and as Ruskin declares, "I find, in brief, that all great nations learned their truth of word and strength of thought in war; that they are nourished in war and wasted by peace; taught by war and deceived by peace—in a word, that they were born in war and expired in peace."

This Christmas hour, more than any that have preceded, calls men back to God, united in heart and hand, not to make another war impossible; not to prepare for the world's Armageddon at the close of man's day, but for the bringing back of the Prince of Peace, the King of the whole earth, upon whose shoulders the government shall be, not by the advice of cabinets, nor the consent of the governed, but by His own innate will and determination to reign and rule in righteousness, that abiding and eternal peace may fill the earth as the waters cover the sea.

As our long-lost boys return from fields of blood and prison camps, let us characterize this Festal Season with a new impulse and fervour of prayer that Heaven may speedily end the exile of our absent Lord and King and fully avenge the tragedy of His Cross.

May our Christmas giving reach its climax in a fuller yielding of ourselves to Him who bought us with His own blood; and may every Christ-mass Festal Board own Him in exaltation as our glorious, com-the Prince of Peace.

REV. E. J. FEE
(Pastor of Free Methodist Church)

After over four years of dreadful strife the desire of Peace is universal. The world is sick of war. War is wicked. It is wickedness that causes it. Therefore Peace should be desired for its own sake. It is the essential condition of all social good. By a sacrifice of millions of brave men and cost of billions in money and the help of God. We rest secure from German tyranny and militarism. but at what a cost was Peace made possible.

At this season of the year, Christmas we are thinking of Jesus the "Prince of Peace," who by a sacrifice measureless in cost and significance, has provided a basis of reconciliation between God and men Jesus has made Peace through the "blood of His cross." The joy that thrilled millions when the word "Peace" was flashed over the wires proclaiming the end of the war, throwing them into a delirium of delight, is but an illustration of the rapture that fills the soul when Peace is made with God. God is reconciled, heaven bursts on the vision, and angels rejoice and is it any wonder there is shouting, leaping and praising God?

The conditions of Peace as laid down by the Allies were just surrender, restitution or making wrongs right and Germany had to accept them to have Peace. So with men to have peace with God. It means the same conditions submission to the will of God. If we have wronged our fellow men that must be put right. When men recognise these principles and act upon them we shall have a lasting Peace upon earth.

ADJUTANT W. BUNTIN.
(Officer in charge of the Local Salvation Army Corps.)

"And on earth, Peace." Luke 2:14. Christmas of 1918 will no doubt be celebrated with a greater degree of mirth and joyfulness than has been the case with the Christmases of the past four years, because we can sing the song of the angels in a bold prophetic strain, looking forward to the day when there shall be a settled peace throughout the world, for Christ is the soul's peace and so ultimately the world's peace—the hope of peace is in Him who is able to say to a sinful soul, "Go in peace, thy sins be forgiven thee."

The Lord of the world in man is the Lord of the world for man. How beautifully Milton describes the holy night of nativity and very appropriate also for the Christmas we are about to celebrate:

"No war nor battle sound
Was heard the world around;
The idle spear and shield were high uphung.
The hooked chariot stood unstained with hostile blood,
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng.
And kings sat still with awful eye,
As if they surely knew their Sovereign Lord was nigh;
But peaceful was the night on which the Prince of Light
His reign of peace upon the world began.
The winds with wonder whist, smoothly the waters kist,
Whispering new joy to the wild ocean who had quite forgot to rave,
While birds of calm sit brooding on the charmed wave."

The angels were right in proclaiming peace upon earth, because the whole world was to be set free by the most precious gift that God could give, and in this way, we as followers of our Lord, and subjects living under the flag of all flags, look to Calvary and see there the first Soldier who died not only for His friends but his enemies also, and demonstrated to them by His suffering that they might be free and have peace forever.

In this way our men and boys gave themselves not only to suffer for one nation, but for the freedom of the whole world, and to crush the spirit of militarism, and to promote a universal peace which aims to carry forward the Kingdom of Christ, for He Himself is the Prince of Peace. For this reason among many others let every heart rejoice at the holy Christmas season, and hear the angels sing their praises and prophecies in the sky.

Now let every living soul to whom the ways of the world seem rough and hard, and to whom the future looks dark and cheerless, rest awhile, and look up and listen, for in the still night air of this holy time, clear and sweet above all our sorrows, sounds the angelic psalm of the future, telling us of progress and of Peace.

WAS REMANDED FOR A WEEK

Police Court Docket was Light This Morning

Royce Thoff, a Macedonian from Havelock was the sole occupant of the dock at this morning's police court.

Thoff has been acting queerly of late. A few weeks ago he attempted to commit suicide at Smith Falls by jumping into the river His cousin forcibly prevented him. Another time he went out into the woods at 4.45 in the morning and after a long search was found in the thickest part of the forest by a C.P.R. constable at ten o'clock at night.

Thoff was remanded for a week by the magistrate and will eat his Christmas dinner in Castle Nesbitt.

Presentation to Miss E. Miller

A Recognition of Her Courtesy and Kindness by the Employees.

All the employees of the Auburn Woollen Company assembled in the wraping room of the mill this evening at 5:45, when a presentation of a beautiful gold wrist watch and diamond ring was made to the secretary of the company, Miss Ethel Miller.

The presentation was made by Mr. Fred Redpath, while the following address was read by Mr. Maurice O'Heron:

The Address.

Peterboro, Dec. 23, 1918.

Dear Miss Miller,—

In this festival season, which provides an opportunity for so many people to testify to thei resteem and liking for others, the employes of the Auburn Woollen Company have found a long awaited chance to demonstrate in a tangible form our appreciation of your never-failing courtesy and kindness towards all of us. In our long association with you we have had a splendid chance to appreciate your many good qualities—to realize that in every way possible you have been a friend to each of us. You have never failed to treat us courteously and kindly, and therefore we have taken advantage of the Christmas festivities to endeavour to show you how thoroughly you have won the liking and respect of the employees of the company.

We ask you to accept the accompanying gifts as concrete proof of our feelings towards you, and we trust that you will value them, not for their own worth, but because they symbolize the pleasant relationship between you and ourselves, and because they are accompanied by our heartiest good wishes.

May we be allowed to wish you the merriest of Christmasses and a New Year crowned with every blessing.

Special to The Examiner:

LISBON, Dec. 24.—Premier Barbosa has announced the formation of a new Portuguese ministry.

Five of the proposed candidates for the Board of Education have signified their intention of standing for election. They are Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. A. A. Fowler, Mr. John McKone, Mr. W. H. Pretty.

Mrs. Morris was the first candidate to qualify.

Hindenburg Will Retain His Position

(Canadian Press.)

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, December 24. — An agreement has been reached between the German government and the German general staff, by which Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General Groener, Chief Quartermaster General, retain their offices, according to the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin.

It is reported from Berlin that parleys between the majority Socialists and the Independent Socialists, regarding the elections to the assembly, have failed, and that the independents have decided to nominate candidates in districts.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 24. — Vice-Admiral Hipepr, commander-in-chief of the German high seas fleet, Vice-Admiral B. Chmann, commander of the Baltic fleet, and Captain Sinke, director of the dock yards at Kiel, have been dismissed, according to a telegram from Berlin. Hipper headed the German delegation which arranged the plans for the surrender of the German ships in the North Sea. Admiral Bachmann has been in command of the fleet for several years.

A Beautiful Pathophone Cabinet Design.

Admirable Example of the Early English Period Art on View at E. V. Warne's, Jeweller.

Perhaps the most handsomely designed phonograph that has ever been shown in Peterborough is at present on view at the jewelry store of E. V. Warne, 325 George street, the local dealer for the Pathephone. It is of an entirely different design from any instrument of the kind seen here, and is distinguished by its three panelled or triangular front. The carved work on each of the three-sided panellings is in the old English period design by masterpieces in the art, and is true in every line and decoration to the expressions of that period. Its chaste contours harmonize beautifully and reflect great credit on the Canadian cabinet makers who have been able to produce a piece of cabinet work which, for intricacy of design and craftsmanship could hardly be excelled. This type of Pathephone is made from old English oak, and it combines interior recesses for record rolls, library books, needles and other conveniences.

One of the largest of the Canadian Clubs selected this Pathe design as a gift for its president, along with 200 records; and others have gone to the homes of noted Canadian representative men, furnishing decorations of matchless beauty. Go and see it tonight or any time during the week.

The League of Nations

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Dec, 24.—The formation of a league of nations is even more important than the actual peace settlement, according to opinions expressed here to-day.

The impending arrival of President Wilson, together with the league of nations programme suggested by Viscount Grey, former Secretary of State for Foreign affairs, has given a fresh impetus to a discussion of the subject.

It was intimated by well-informed persons that the Allies already are beginning conversations regarding the league, but that no attempt will be made at actual modification of its laws until the principal terms of the peace treaty are disposed of.

Some students of international affairs suggested the following as a possible programme:

Discussion of the league will continue informally as at present.

The general peace terms will be formulated at the inter-Allied conference, making acceptance of the league of nations part of the demands to be made upon the Central Powers.

Humour and Pathos in "The Better 'Ole

Bill, Bert and Alf Typify Spirit of True British Soldier.

"The Three Musketeers"—otherwise Bert, Alf and Old Bill, are reincarnated in a film version of "The Better 'Ole," which will be the big picture in many movie houses for months to come. And if the cinema lacks, as always, the dialogue that the stage can give us, there is ample compensation in the setting, for we have veritble war episodes, including the passing of the new army through London streets glowing from the rain, a glimpse of English fields and homes of France. But the Old Bill and his kind, that devastation might have happened over here, is the message of the story.

That Capt. Bairnsfather's play, so successful produced in London and New York, offered really magnificent opportunities to the film producer had long been obvious, for there are many incidents which though they cannot appear on the stage, yet come within the scope of the film, and fill up the interstices of the story to the greater satisfaction of the onlooker. From the very start when a picture of the Three Musketeers of the olden time, in the picturesque panoply of their period, dissolved into the three soldiers of today—"Old Bill," "Bert" and "Alf" in the trenches, the missing details of the play are filled with a constructive skill which adds enormously to the true understanding of the story. The introduction of the "poet soldier" as a sort of explanatory "chorus" is one of the happiest touches and few could not feel their heart strings drawn tighter at the section of the film which showed how "the whisper of war" descended upon all British homes, from the lowliest to the highest in the land. The familiar incidents of the play and appear, amplified and emphasized. "The Better 'Ole" will be shown at the Grand, 2nd, 3rd and 4th of January.

ESTHONIAN FORCES ARE FALLING BACK

Bolshevik Force Back the Troops of the Baltic Republic—German Forces Fall Back on Riga.

Canadian Press:

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 24.—The Bolsheviki are making considerable progress with their penetration of Esthonian territory, the official statement of the Esthonian Republic shows. They have taken Dorpat, about twenty-five miles west of Lake Peipus, and have forced the Esthonians back of the Wesenberg front, north-west of Lake Peipus. German forces in this region are continuing to fall back upon Riga.

I wish to publicly thank Mr. Geo. W. Powell and Mr. C. E. Smith for doing me the honour of nominating me for the Council of the City of Peterborough for the year 1919, and to my friends and others, I wish a very happy Christmas and healthier and more prosperous New Year.

Respectfully yours,
HUGHSON JOHNSTONE.

How German Navy Gave Up Ghost

Wonderful Picture Coming to "The Grand" of Huns' Utter Humiliation.

For the last three days of this week the public of Peterborough will have the satisfaction of witnessing at The Grand Opera House the crowning hour of Germany's humiliation—the crowning shame of the most shameful people of whom this world holds record.

Every loyal man and woman in Peterborough, everyone of us with rich, generous British blood in our veins, will want to see these pictures. Nobody will want to minimize the share of any of our gallant allies in bringing the Hun navy to book, and it was fitting that France and the United States, which have both suffered from Germany's base kind of naval activities, should have been represented—as it will be seen from the pictures that they were—when the craven Hun fleet crept in like a whipped cur and surrendered. But we should be more (or less) than human if, when looking on these pictures at The Grand, our blood was not fired, and our hearts were not stirred, by the thought that it is due, in overwhelming preponderance, to the navy of our own empire that German naval ambitions have tcollapsed with the crash that the pictures bring before our eyes so vividly and well.

We need to see these pictures in order to realize how complete and hopeless is the collapse of all Germany's naval ambitions and pretentions. We realize, as we look on them, that Germany's sea power is gone forever—gone as completely as Napoleonic sea power after it had been smashed by Nelson at Trafalgar; gone as irretrievably as though the Hun fleet had been destroyed in the great action which Admirals Jellicoe and Beatty were always ready to offer it.

Of course the transcendent interest of these pictures lies in the historical importance of the great epoch-making events which they record. But there is also a tremendous spectacular impressiveness of a terrible and dreadful kind about them. It is impossible to look on the mighty British warships shown in them without the keenest sense of the ingenuity of man in devising instruments of warfare and death. As for the beauty, it is that of nature's own setting. It is the beauty of a calm but lazy November day at sea, with the water heaving with the motion of the currents, but the grey-green surface unbroken.

It is an unparalleled display of British sea power which these wonderful pictures unfold before our eyes. All the instruments of war, of the "shre shield" of the British navy, which contribute to the bringing to such humiliation the second greatest navy that the world has ever known, are seen to be "in at the death." It is the most gigantic Armada ever gathered together which is seen bringing in what a short time ago was acclaimed in Germany as the triumphant fleet which at Jutland had lowered Great Britain's naval prestige for ever. It is a strange, weird, fascinating sight. One notices that war conditions of navigation are observed almost as rigidly as though a powerful and dangerous foe was about to be encountered. The crews are at their battle stations, prepared for any event uality. The finest aggregation of battleships of any period strike awe into our breasts such as is almost uncanny. One almost fears to speak. One is content to visualize its mighty strength and grandeur—to visualize it and to thank heaven for it and for all it has meant to us and ours here in Canada these past four years of war."

Looks for a Steady Winter

L. S. Sargent, of Junction City, Kansas, has made his annual "goosebone" weather prophecy. It calls for a steady winter, unvaried by periods of milder weather, and the low temperature will last well into the spring. The breastbone of the goose is used in forecasting the weather, the amount and location of the dark colouring matter indicating the periods when wintry weather may be expected. Mr. Sargent has been keeping the goosebone weather record for more than thirty years, and claims for the goosebone a batting average of 1,000 as a weather forecaster.

PROTECT YOURSELF

Influenza is again obtaining a foothold in Peterborough and the surrounding country. People cannot be too cautious and careful in protecting themselves from this dreaded disease. The best preventative is to wash the mouth and gargle the throat every morning and night with PYROLL. Doctors, dentists and druggists recommend PYROLL as a preventative and no person should be without it.

I have endeavored to discharge the duties of the position with credit to myself and with endeavor to in all ways advance the interests of the City.

I shall for the ensuing year of office be increasingly alert and diligent in your service, appreciating as I do the very serious responsibilities that will devolve on your Council in carrying out the several propositions that will come before it.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN

ONE GOOD TERM DESERVES ANOTHER

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Having again been nominated for Alderman for the city for 1919, I again ask your support in favour of my re-election.

My record in the Council during the past year is before you, and I can safely leave it in your hands. If again elected I pledge myself to continue to give my close attention to the best interests of the city as a whole.

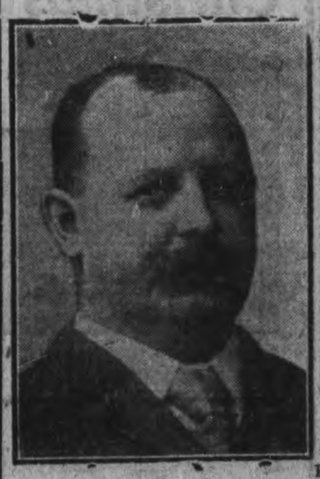
Please accept my best wishes for a bright and merry Christmas.

Yours faithfully,
R. N. JONES

BOARD of ALDERMEN

To the Municipal Electors Of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—



In compliance with the urgent request of numerous friends I have consented to stand for election as Alderman for the city for 1919.

Having the benefit of several years' experience in the City Council and occupied important positions such as Chairman of the Board of Works and other influential committees, I would endeavour, if elected, to give my best services in assisting to conduct our civic affairs in a prudent, economical, and business-like manner.

I, as well as every other intelligent ratepayer, fully realize the fact that the city is faced with large responsibilities during 1919. Anything I can do, therefore, to serve the electorate at this critical period will be cheerfully undertaken to the best of my ability.

Soliciting your support and influence, and hoping the very best men may be elected for the Board of Aldermen for 1919, permit me to wish one and all the compliments of the season.

Yours faithfully,
HARRY PHELAN

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

A. A. FOWLER

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having now served a two-year term on your Board of Education, receiving the highest vote on the occasion of my being selected for the honour, I again allow by name to come before you for re-election. My two years service, and particularly that of the last year when I was Chairman of the Property Committee, has given me the experience necessary to more intelligently attend to the important duties of the Board. Having accepted the honour of the ratepayers confidence, I gave the same care and attention to the affairs before the Board as I did to my own private business, and if again entrusted with the work will give the very best service of which I am capable. Knowing that greater School accommodation is becoming necessary especially in the South and West sections of the city, and in order to obtain all the knowledge possible, I visited, in company with Dr. Neal, and at our own expense, the Technical and Public Schools of London and Hamilton,

This Board will in the next two years, be obliged to dispose of considerable business, involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and my two years' experience on the Board, and long business training, should fit me especially for the duties at this crucial period.

I am an enthusiast along educational lines and want Peterborough to have the best Educational Advantages, and I consider that our equipment and Staff are of the high efficiency necessary to properly apply the magnificent System as outlined by the Provincial Authorities.

If elected it will always be my aim to guard the interest of the ratepayers and keep down expenses, endeavouring at all times to see that every dollar spent was properly applied. If my past Service, and future willingness are considered worthy of your support, you can show it on election day by endorsing my Candidature with your vote.

Yours faithfully,
A. A. FOWLER.

G. N. GORDON

Respectfully requests YOUR Vote for a further term on

Kavovosoff, both former Russian premiers, are among the prominent men who have arrived in Paris to assist the movement of the unification of Russia, and restoring order there, with entente aid. H. B. Rye Candidate For Reeveship of North Monaghan

Mr. Harold B. Rye is mixing the war paint for the North Monaghan elections in which he will contest the Reeveship with Mr. John McIntosh. The nominations will be received at May's school house on Monday, December 30th, and the elections one week later. Regarding his candidature Mr. Rye stated that he had been requested by ratepayers south of the city and as far west as Crawford's Grove to give Reeve McIntosh a battle, and after considering the prospects of the fray, Mr. Rye concluded that they looked inviting and satisfactory.

Mr. Andrew Kent is spoken of as candidate for the Council, and it has been reported that Mr. Robert Dobbin will oppose Deputy-Reeve Herb Forster. Although Monaghan has been quiet and apparently unpromising from the standpoint of election interest, the nominations may work up a little heat.

Christmas Tree At The Shelter

Public Invited to Help the Children Enjoy Christmas.

Ten little children at the Children's Shelter, deprived by fate from enjoying a family Christmas gathering, depend to-morrow upon the kind heartedness of those upon whom fortune has smiled more kindly than upon themselves. In perfect faith that the Santa Claus who comes to most children will not forget them, the little ones have written notes to him, asking for all manner of toys.

Lest these tots awake to find they have been forgotten while others have more gifts than they can enjoy, the public is asked to send any little remembrance to the Shelter or to the Examiner office or to notify Mr. Powell, the agent. The tree will be held at 7.30 this evening.

Preparing For Wilson

First Uncrowned Head to Pass Through Arch in State.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Immense preparations are being made for the reception of President Wilson here on Thursday. He will be the first uncrowned head of the government to pass through the Arch in State. Constitution Hill, whose trees preclude the erection of masts, will be lined with wounded soldiers and women of Navy and Army auxiliary services. The masts around Queen Victoria's memorial in front of Buckingham Palace will be draped alternatively with the star spangled banner and the Union Jack. Although the President's route through London is only two miles long, there will have to be some hurrying to get decorations completed. Several hundred persons are employed on the work, which continues at night and throughout the Christmas holiday. Some idea of the work involved can be obtained from figures of materials used. These include forty thousand feet of red cloth, many tons of moss and evergreens and about six miles of festoons and pennants.

Russia Will Receive No Food From the United States So Long as Reds Are in Control

Government Sends Ultimatum That Anarchy Must End Throughout Country Before Any Relief From Hunger Can Be Expected From the United States.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 26. — The American government upon authorization of a cable message from Herbert C. Hoover, who is working out food conditions in Europe, has given its ultimatum to the Bolshevik population of Russia. It amounts to this: — Establish order and receive food, continue anarchy and receive no food.

Finland has been chosen as the place where a concrete example of the policy of the United States will be established. Its location is such that the Russian people will be able to know what is going on. While they are dwelling in Bolshevism and starving, the Finns who started on the Bolshevistic route but repented, will be well supplied.

According to announcement made by the War Trade Board, the shipment of the following units of food to Finland has been authorized:—10,000 tons of cereals, 2,000 tons of pork products, 1,000 tons of industrial fats and 1,000 tons of sugar.

This action has been taken as a result of reports of greatly improved government conditions in Finland. This information comes from Mr. Hoover and allied commissions.

Finland has been going through a severe trying-out process. First absorbed by Russia, a fact that had much to do with the pro-German tendencies of Sweden, later taken by Germany and still later to under an outbreak of Bolsheviki enthusiasm, the country has once more established itself on a sound basis nationally as well as politically.

Treatment of Finland is expected not only to have its effect on Russia but will not go unnoted in Teutonic countries and in some of the neutral countries.

By its control of the vailable food products of the world the United States is in position to point to the advantages of the maintenance of order against the tendency toward anarchy.

Similar action has been taken by the War Trade Board relative to Sweden where a change in sentiment toward America has occurred. As an evidence of its friendship toward Sweden the United States has authorized the shipment of foods which will arrive before December 25, and will be a welcome Christmas present.

Supplies on the way to Sweden include:—

Coffee, 6,732,000 pounds; cocoa beans, 2,032,800 pounds; dried fruits, 2,000,000 pounds; sweetened condensed milk, 500 tons, and pork, 1,500 tons.

This shipment, it was made clear, is not out of any superabundance of supplies here, but is sharing with the Swedish populace commodities this nation itself well could use.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

Chairman's Address.

Mr. Thos. E. Sargent, secretary of the school, took the chair and called upon the school to sing Canada's National Anthem, the Maple Leaf, with the audience joining in the chorus.

The chairman's address followed, which was very interesting. Referring to the schools of the present day, he said they were very different from the one he had attended, when the beech switch was the main instrument of persuasion. Being convenient to the Burnham bush it was very handy to get them.

The Programme.

Items on the programme to about the number of twenty followed.

The guest of honour was Mr. Richard Lees, B.A., Public School Inspector of the County, who responded to an invitation to act as judge of the decorations, which were composed of historical and geographical drawings and compositions, art work and collections of wood, seeds and stamps.

In the course of the judge's remarks he said he would rather not say which were best. The work was so uniformly good that all should receive prizes. His suggestion was carried out and all the pupils received prizes from the teacher.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the programme to a close.

J. Lemay of Kingston.

A PESENTATION

The pupils of Miss Duff's room in the public school presented her with a flag for the school room and a box of stationary. The gift of the flag, the emblem of fair play and of freedom, was a most acceptable gift and one which was much appreciated by Miss Duff, who has made it her aim to instill the spirit of patriotism into the pupils' hearts and minds. Her success in that respect is manifested by the large number of former pupils who readily answered the call of King and Country in the great war.

Canada Will Take Stock

Committee Has Been Appointed For This Work.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 24. —Canada is to take stock of her war materials and a committee has been appointed to undertake the work. The end of the war has found the Dominion in possession of heavy quantities of cloth, harness, leather goods, boots and shoes, army foodstuffs and all the paraphernalia of war which are stocked in military storehouses everywhere in the Dominion. This is in addition to the vast quantities of materials in England and France.

An inventory is to be taken at once of stocks in Canada, and the question of disposing of the materials without undue disturbances of the markets will be considered. The commission comprises Hon. Messrs. Maclean, Ballantyne, Mewburn, Sir George Foster, Sir H. Laporte, of the War Purchasing Commission, and J. W. McConnell, of the War Trade Board.

Militarists Have Fled

(Special to Examiner.)

BERLIN, December 24. — The foremost exponents of German militarism on land and sea, are now definitely known to have followed the Kaiser into exile.

General Ludendorff, the former commander in chief of the German armies, is hiding in Sweden, it is revealed to-day.

Admiral Von Tirpitz, the father of the submarine "frightfulness," recently fled to Switzerland, where he is living in seclusion. The location of his residence is kept secret.

Several of Germany's principal espionage and propaganda agents also have left Germany. Captain Von Papen, a former military attache of the German embassy at Washington, is still serving with the army, and is supposed to be in Constantinople, although this could not be verified. Von Papen was implicated in the U-boat plot against Scandinavia and Holland.

Von Papen's co-worker, Capt. Boy-Ed, former naval attache at Washington, left the foreign office several months ago as a commander of a warship in the Baltic. He is believed to have retired to some island in that sea.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 24.—One hundred and fifty leaders of Bolshevik administrations in Vienna and Budapest have been arrested, according to despatches received here to-day. The arrests followed a series of parades through the streets.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian and Mollie Are Unconscious That They Are Watched.

CHAPTER LXXI.

The next morning, recalling that he had made an engagement to take Mollie to dinner that night, so filling in his evening, Brian wrote Ruth a short note as well as replying to her wire. Then he went about his office duties whistling gayly. His duty done, he was free to anticipate the coming of the evening.

There was a time when women had no choice. They were either wives, or, failing that, daughters. No rivalry between business and wifehood existed. Now Ruth, in a sense, had realized that rivalry from the time she had gone to work for Arthur Mandel—realized it with no slightest idea of surrendering either.

Wifehood and a career. Why not? She was young, strong, ambitious. She loved Brian, she would do all in her power to make him happy. She was intensely interested in her work, and would do everything possible to make it a success.

She fully intended to keep a cheery, sweet home for Brian. She would not allow her business even to creep into her talks with him. Yet she, wistfully longed to talk of it to him, to tell him of her plans. But she must force herself to do the things HE wanted to do, to talk of the things in which he was interested. Not only for his sake, but for the sake of her own happiness.

Whenever Ruth was away from Brian she felt that nothing in the world was worth very much without him, his approval. She was disturbed my doubts, and often by jealous thoughts. Yet never did she allow anything of this to affect her work. That must be done, and done to the best of her ability. It was in the evening when she sat alone in some lonely hotel room, that the doubts came; that the jealous thoughts made her unhappy.

Often she wondered if, had she been less keen for her own independence, she could have helped Brian to push himself more rapidly. Always she decided, no! if it wasn't in him, she could do no more than she had done. Yet always there was Brian—alone, and—Mollie King.

One moment Ruth would grow cold at the possibility of losing Brian's love, the next a wave of something very like defiance would rush over her.

But all this was when she and Brian were separated.

So now she wondered if he were missing her — wondered, and longed to know. While Brian, satisfied that she would have her wire from him before night, her letter the next morning, closed the office early and went to meet Mollie King.

They had decided to dine at one of the Village restaurants, a place patronized by strangers in the city as well as by the villagers themselves.

Strange, it should happen that on that very night Arthur Mandel had consented to join a party at that very restaurant for dinner. He cared nothing for such places, but they were out-of-town business acquaintances so he went along.

With the perversity of fate, they were given a table next to that already occupied by Brian and Mollie.

"I hope that good looking man, the one with the dark hair and eyes, will know us the next time he sees us," Mollie whispered to Brian. "Perhaps he knows you. He hasn't taken his eyes off of us since he sat down."

"It is more than likely he is trying to flirt with you." Brian's quick jealousy immediately aroused. Had he known that it was Ruth's employer who evinced such an interest he might have been more careful in his remark, which, judging from Mandel's expression, he had overheard.

"Let him try! that's all the good it will do. Now, Brian, tell me all about yourself," and soon, the next table and its occupants forgotten, Brian was telling Mollie King, the sympathetic, of his worries, and his hope of ultimate success.

Arthur Mandel caught much of what he said, as Brian's voice was of a penetrating quality, even when he spoke in a low tone. Then after a while, their dinner finished, they rose to go. As they passed the table where Mandel and his guests were seated, Brian said distinctly:

"We'll go there to-morrow night."

"So it's every night when she's away," Mandel thought as he watched them leave. "She's a pretty girl, but the man's a fool. Ruth is worth a dozen of her," he had lately taken to thinking of his employee as "Ruth," although he always addressed her punctiliously as "Mrs. Hackett."

During the remainder of his stay at the restaurant, he was the gayest one at the table. Surely things were happening that would eventually throw Ruth into his arms. He could afford to wait. She was worth serving seven years for, if necessary. And she had refused to take a couple of days' rest at the Springs because he, that young fool, would be lonely!

That night Arthur Mandel slept soundly. Happy in the thought that he would soon make up to Ruth for all the neglect Brian made her suffer.

To-morrow— Mollie Is Dangerously Sympathetic.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Disordered Digestion.

Dyspepsia, anaemia and neurasthenia follow as the logical results of disordered digestion and faulty nutrition.

This condition has given rise to the charge that Americans are a race of gluttons. It is alleged that they eat too much and that the remedy is a reduction in the amount of food taken. Some "experts" even go so far as to urge frequent and long continued periods of fasting. Says one popular science expert and physical culture trainer:

"The dyspeptic, anaemic, neurasthenic type of people, who are becoming so common, are, in my opinion, slowly starving to death. A reduction in the amount of food may give temporary relief from their symptoms by lessening the amount of poison generated from undigested food, but such a course does not strike at the real cause of the trouble, which is undernutrition. The remedy for this class of people is not less food, but more, provided they take sufficient exercise in the open air to bring about a more perfect assimilation of food. Plenty of physical exercise or work and fresh air will work wonders for them. Another important point is to rest at least half an hour after eating. Sufficient sleep is also absolutely necessary."

It Wouldn't Start.

They've got a new joke over at the automobile club. They spring it on every stranger that will bite, but they won't spring it any more because everybody will know it after it is printed here.

The stranger is led to ask, "Who is that man over in the corner?"

Then the other fellow says, "That's Blank, a new member. He's not very popular here."

"Why not?"

"Oh, he's always trying to start something."

"I see. Quarrelsome disposition, eh?"

"No, not at all. He owns a motor cycle."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CONFISCATE THE EDITION.

Newspaper Issues Often Suppressed by the Austrian Censors.

"By order of the royal press court this issue of your paper is hereby confiscated for printing news which the court considers should not be made public." A policeman, with a sword dangling at his side and holding in his hand an official document with an imposing seal on it, enters the managing editor's room and delivers the decree.

It is the famous Austrian press censorship and confiscation machine, called for short the "confiscation apparatus," at work. Down below the big presses are thundering along on the last few thousand copies of a big circulation. It is 3 o'clock in the morning—too late to "make over" by tearing out the offending article or news item, putting something else in its place and reprinting the entire edition.

From the numerous rooms which make up the editorial sanctum there rolls one "Donnerwetter!" and "Verdammt!" after another. The managing editor orders a small sheet, not much larger than a handbill, hastily printed, that will tell the subscribers why they will not receive their paper that morning.

This is a scene which has taken place frequently in Viennese newspaper offices lately. One afternoon recently the editions of five evening papers were confiscated. Probably no editors in the world can tell as many interesting stories of news that never reached their readers as the Viennese.

From an American viewpoint of a free press the Austrian press laws press censorship and "confiscation apparatus" is about the most absurd and antiquated institution in existence. Apparently it was created largely for the purpose of keeping the truth from the public.

In Austria books, pictures, illustrated catalogues, price lists, handbills, advertisements and advertising literature, newspapers, periodicals and publications which appear occasionally, signs and signboards, posters—in fact, everything that conveys meaning to the mind by means of type, pictures or symbols is subject to censorship. Until recently even private calling or "visiting" cards were subject to censorship. The printer had to lay a proof of a card before the "press court" before he could deliver the order.

Any district or superior court may constitute itself a "press court" to pass upon and order the confiscation of any newspaper in its jurisdiction.—Vienna Cor. New York Tribune.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

A Look at the Big Ditch From the Brink of the Culebra Cut.

I shall never forget my own first real look at the canal. It was at the end of a day, about 5 in the afternoon, and I had set out to walk from Empire to Culebra along the brink of the great Culebra cut. This section is perhaps the most dramatic in the whole work. When ships sail through here the passengers on the decks will look up almost 500 precipitous feet along the sliced red side of Gold hill to the crest of the continental divide.

The workmen were all out of the ditch now, and it was time to fire the big blasts. I waited in some trepidation, for the notion of an amount of dynamite that can be stated in tons being shot off at one time and in one place was rather appalling. And what happened was appalling, though not in just the way I expected. My eardrums have been more seriously assaulted on the Fourth of July by a four inch cannon cracker. The quality of the noise made by that blast is rather indescribable. It was immensely vast, a sort of titanic grunt. The great rocky ridges which formed the bottom of the trench heaved up bodily under a sudden cloud of brownish smoke. When it had blown away, those defiant rocky ridges were gone, and in their place was chaos.

Figures don't mean much—millions of cubic yards, and so on. But the great trench I was looking at did not look man made at all. The men who were straggling back into it looked like ants. The steam shovels, arrayed en echelon, seemed hardly bigger than big black beetles. And a belated dirt train crawling up the incline out of the cut might have been a caterpillar. It seemed impossible that their puny nibblings could have made that gap in the backbone of a continent. It looked rather like the doing of nature in one of her paroxysms. No, not quite like that. It looked like a crease from the finger nail of Almighty God.—Hess by Kitchell Webster in Everybody's.

Flattering.

Wag—I like your new play, old man.

Author—I'm glad of that. When did you see it?

Wag—Oh, I haven't seen it, but the title looks jolly on the busses.—London Opinion.

A glance at a cake of Gold Soap will show you that it is unusually large. Actual comparisons will show that it is bigger than any other cake of laundry soap at the same price. This big cake of Gold Soap is heavy, solid,—it wears away slowly and evenly, lasting longer than ordinary soap. It is made only from the choicest materials suitable for laundry use,—it goes farther than ordinary soap. A single trial will convince you that Gold Soap is the best and most economical yellow laundry soap that you can use.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Bonhomme's Compliments

By ALEC BRUCE

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was annoying in business hours, very annoying, yes. M'sieur Bonhomme could stand it no longer.

True, he did not do much business after five o'clock. But what had that to do with it? These young men did not mean business, no! Their time was their own. Bah, even Marie, his own beautiful, peachbloom Marie, had had enough. And enough is as good as a feast; her manner said so. Her tongue? More things than tongues can speak!

M'sieu rose suddenly from his ink-splattered desk and paced slowly up and down the dimly lighted aisle of his old furniture store.

"Yes, it will end, now—tonight!" he muttered. "I cannot stand it longer. These young men, young fools, I will pack them home, where they belong. My daughter is my daughter, not a plaything! Her time, my time, is valuable."

Before a dust-coated mirror in a tall mahogany wardrobe he paused a moment, shaking his fist at the full-featured reflection with its curling gray hair and subdued floridity of countenance.

"And you, m'sieur, must pack them home; you have been too long about it!"

His big brown eyes blazed ominously.

"Father!" A door opened in the clumsy tapestry frame screening the little living rooms behind, and a girl, tall and darkly handsome, a little past twenty, perhaps, with a humorous and clever expression, beamed on him out of liquid wells of blue. "Father," she repeated, "Mr. Moorson is coming. He—he—I think he is coming here again."

"Thank you, Marie, thank you," stammered M'sieur, his broad, clean-shaven face pinking distinctly. "Er—and if—if I am not seen, I suppose that I will not be in the way, my dear?"

"Oh, no, father, no!" she laughed, "but make yourself heard up in the gallery. Walk about a little, tumble something, yes. Then I can say, 'Hush, Mr. Moorson; someone is taking stock up there.' Ha ha!" She laughed a nervous little laugh.

"My dear," whispered her father impressively, "of course you know that I do not—er—desire to listen. The sweet things these young men say are not for ears like mine. Ah, I doubt not that I have heard them once or twice already, yes."

This time a low, musical laugh rippled through the long oblong hall, and echoed from the galleries above.

"Mon ami," she murmured archly, "the sweet things these young men say, now, are perhaps just a little different from the things young men said—oh, some twenty years ago, when the little mother heard you speak them, hey? And so, perhaps you might desire—"

"My dear," Bonhomme interrupted with a smile. "I hear footsteps! Never fear, I will walk about in the gallery, or I will cough maybe. But I am busy this afternoon, and I cannot leave the store for the convenience of these young—visitors, ahem! And it is possible that I might hear some leetle snatch—eh? Take care, take care, ma'amselle!"

Ting, ting.

"Ah, your visitor."

Ma'amselle hurried forward with a laugh.

Click! The big swing doors opened wide and a well-set-up, muscular young man met her with a smile that only half explained the meaning of his presence. "Your father is out, I suppose?" he whispered, glancing up the aisle.

M'sieur, fat and breathless, had taken advantage of the greetings to tiptoe up the spiral stairway. "Huh, your father is out?" he wheezed wrathfully. "Listen to faint heart and—" But he did not hear the fair lady's reply.

Bah! At gallery No. 1 he stopped for a moment and viewed with regret the many dust-covered tables near the door. If madame were only here! Hush! He could hear, but could not see his daughter and Mr. Moorson now.

They had seated themselves on a rose-colored divan on the aisle, behind a row of wardrobes. The young man chose the spot with much persuasion.

M'sieur heard him: "Huh, I will go higher up, young man, higher up, where I can get a bird's-eye view," he panted. Whew! Asthma and climbing do not agree, and gallery No. 2 was so high up. It contained the bedding, all the soft goods and M'sieur collapsed on a pile of cushions.

Oh, la, la! he was too high up to hear even a snatch of conversation, but he could see. And the young man was bending so close to Ma'amselle. His speech, his actions, betrayed the feverish anxiety of his mind, and Ma'amselle had turned her crimson face away. Suddenly Mr. Moorson seized her hand. She drew it away.

Mon Dieu! The psychological moment surely? M'sieur looked about for something to drop, something that would make a noise, but there was nothing big, nothing hard. He thought of a cough, but in his present state of breathlessness that also was impossible. A real spasm would take the place of the feigned, and M'sieur was a friend of discretion.

Hark! Loud footsteps sounded on the tiling outside. Mr. Moorson jumped to his feet. Ma'amselle also, and evidently at the young man's urgent solicitation, she threw open the mirrored door of the most convenient wardrobe and pushed him in.

"Ha!" M'sieur noted that wardrobe well—one, two, three, four, five—five! in the mahogany row. "Ah ha! I will go down again to gallery number one," he muttered, a vague disappointment discernible in his tones. "I did not hear one leetle word."

The swing doors bumped, and M'sieur popped his head over the polished rail of gallery number one just as another young man, a tall, bottle-shouldered blonde with a vibrant voice full of round, benignant notes, clasped ma'amselle's small white hand.

"Marie," he cried—M'sieur could hear every word—"I am so glad to see you; and you are alone? Ah, that is fortunate, for I have a secret to tell you tonight. Marie, I—I love you, dear. No, no; do not forbid me. I must tell you—"

"Sh—oh, Mr. Corson," she stammered, glancing swiftly upward, "I—I—please do not tell me any—any secrets tonight, please—I—"

"Marie, my Marie," he insisted, laying a large, bony hand on her small, trembling one, "one kiss, dear, just one," he pleaded, his strong arm stealing around her slender waist.

"No, no, Mr. Corson, no!"

Bang! The full-blown decorated globe of an antiquated lamp splintered on the gallery floor and glittered in frosty powder on a crimson mat.

"Who—who—was that?" demanded Mr. Corson, catching his breath and quickly withdrawing his arm. "What? you father bu-breaking stock—I—I thought that he was out!"

"Hush—hush!"

Again footsteps sounded on the tiling outside and M'sieur began to descend the spiral stairway behind.

Mr. Corson jumped to his feet: "Hide me, Marie, hide me! Someone's coming both ways. I—I would rather not be seen."

"Quick, then, in here!" she breathed, throwing open the door of a fine wardrobe just opposite the fifth mahogany piece. Click!

"Ha!" M'sieur saw Mr. Corson's coattails disappear. "One, two, three, four," he counted carefully, and as he passed up the aisle to meet the portly newcomer shaking hands with Ma'amselle at the door, he turned two keys, in the mahogany and mission rows, and dropped them in his pocket.

"Ha, Mister Barron, good afternoon, good afternoon! You are well, yes? And Mrs. Barron? Ah, that is good! Something—er—this afternoon, perhaps?"

Mr. Barron was M'sieur's best customer. Purchasing agent for a much larger furniture store, when his firm ran out of any particular piece desired at once, Bonhomme, if he could supply, always got the order.

"Ah, good afternoon, M'sieur, good afternoon!" responded Mr. Barron loudly. "Yes, sir, I want two wardrobes, in a hurry. Send them out in our wagon; it's at your door now. A mahogany one for—er—take a note of them! Ready?" He glanced at the notebook in his hand—"Mr. James Moorson, 21 Cookson avenue. You know the gentleman's son, I think. I've seen him here."

"Ha, ha!" M'sieur chuckled.

Mr. Barron looked curiously over his spectacles. "Eh? and one for Mr. Arthur Corson, 15 Marion terrace. Perhaps you know young Corson, also? Ha, ha!"

"Ha, ha!" echoed M'sieur.

"And I want both in model A, Bonhommie, remember. Ah, you have a row of each, I see. Well, don't fail me. Get 'em home at once. My men are at your service. Good day, I'm off. Busy as bees down our way."

"Good day, sir, good day," smilingly M'sieur bowed his patron out, and signalled the men to come in. They were big strong fellows both of them. But when the wardrobes were loaded and roped, they came back to the store.

"Yes?" queried Bonhomme with arching brows.

"A drink of water, if you please, sir?"

"Certainly," mumbled M'sieur, turning his face away. "Oh, Marie, som' water! som' water, up front here! Ah, and the keys, I forgot the keys," he muttered when the men followed ma'amselle away, "and these men can deliver them with the goods, yes."

He hurried to his desk and drew out two business cards. "With Bonhomme's compliments," he wrote on each, and placed them with the little gilded keys in their respective envelopes.

One of the men tucked the packets carefully away in his pockets. "Yes, sir," he promised, "I'll see that the right parties gets 'em. You bet I will, sir."

"Oh, father," pouted ma'amselle when the door closed, "these young men, oh, these young men, they are such troubles. Oh, I do not want them, and they are here, yet. What shall I do?"

"Ha, ha, ha! non, non, my dear," laughed M'sieur, "they are not here! You make one beeg mistake. These young men will not trouble you again. They have gone home to their fathers—with the compliments of Bonhomme, yes! Ha, ha!"

"Here, how is this?" demanded the conductor, savagely. "You have thirteen children, and they are all trying to travel on half rate tickets."

The man and woman addressed looked at each other, and a flush that suggested them to be guilty of trying to swindle the railroad came to their cheeks. But they made no response.

"How old is that girl back there?" continued the conductor, pulling his tawny mustache.

"She will be twelve the 2d of November," replied the woman, figuring it out on her finger ends.

"And how old is that boy, next her?"

"If he lives till the 27th of November he will be twelve, too," answered the man sharply.

"Ha, just as I expected!" gloated the conductor. "Now how can you explain the proximity of their birthdays?" and he waited for the confession.

"That's easy enough," ventured the woman frankly.

"It is, is it?"

"Yes. There is no law I know of that prevents cousins being born the same month."

CONCERNING RESTAURANTS.

Places Where You Can Get Everything Except Nourishment.

A restaurant is a place where you pay $4 for 15 cents' worth of food, accompanied by about $2 worth of light labor, light china and light music, which you have heard before. After leaving your hat with a Wall street syndicate, you pay all the way from 10 cents to a quarter for the privilege of getting it back and wearing it once more. The difference between a man and woman indeed today is quite simple. A woman pays $50 all at once for her hat, while a man pays $5 for his and fifty-five more in tip installments for storage at restaurants while he is vainly trying to obtain enough nourishment to sustain life between times.

The object of all restaurants is to furnish you with everything you want except nourishment. This is carefully extracted from all food before it reaches you.

Every restaurant nowadays has attached to it a homeless hotel and a drugless drugstore, also a newspaper stand where you can buy a paper for not over twice what you can get it for across the street, and a box office dispensary where you can get theater tickets for almost any night you don't want them at the same rates. Every restaurant also has a wine cellar which is filled with native cobwebs, European labels and California grape juice. —Life.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Paspebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

Mr. J. A. Findlay, of Norwood, Replies to Mr. Elliott's Letter

Writer Points Out Roads in Peterboro County Which, He Says, Are Scarcely Fit to be Called Public Highways.

Sir,—A very small portion of the letter by Mr. Elliott in the Examiner recently is worthy of a reply but this question is entirely too big to permit of politics, personal misrepresentations or any other side issues being used with a view to blocking the agitation or general desire for road improvement.

The question of good roads is one that most be considered from the viewpoint of "the greatest good to the greatest number, and the best means of opening the country to development."

I stated previously that pathmasters have not been given a fair chance; who would think of trying to farm now as they did years ago without machinery? Then why expect anybody to make roads to meet present requirements without modern machinery?

As for East Peterboro roads being "high" on the list, let us consider for example ,the main roads through Norwood. The one from Trent River is very bad, sections of it scarcely fit to be called a public highway. Norwood to Crowe's Landing is abominable; just 13 miles, but it takes one hour and a quarter to motor it or about four hours to drive with an ordinary farm team. This summer one of Peterboro's prominent men (formerly Mayor) said "deliver me from ever having to drive that road again until it IS a road." During September and October Peterboro dealers hauled hundreds of cords of wood over the northern portion, and the cost was double what it would have been over good roads, but the hardship is that the CONSUMERS in Peterboro city have to pay at least $1.50 a cord extra to cover the extra cost of hauling over [illegible] ROADS, besides the high cost of getting men, provisions, etc., to the camps, over such roads. This is equally true in regard to other commodities.

Then we have the two roads to Peterboro, one bad and the other worse. Norwood to Hastings is fair, but badly in need of repairs in sections. The same road south of Hastings in Northumberland County, is hard and smooth; a pleasure to drive on it and one that has given very reasonable service, because it is looked after regularly throughout the year.

Bad Sections.

Norwood to Havelock is quite bad in sections, and what a contrast to the same road east when Hastings County is reached. Motorists in Hastings or in Prince Edward Counties can drive 25 miles an hour with greater comfort and safety than 15 in this district. Motor cars and trucks are here to stay and if road improvement is not undertaken at once and encouragement given to tourists, motorists, financiers, prospectors, etc., it will be a distinct hindrance to the development of the country.

This is not fault-finding in any sense, for I realize that during the war our whole energies have been devoted to "peace with victory" but now that victory is achieved, the time for action in road construction along modern, approved lines has surely arrived.

It is not a question of paying 80c to get 20c of auto fees returned, but in preference to the COUNTY assuming the WHOLE COST of new roads, culverts, bridges, etc., the PROVINCE established a fund for ASSISTING to the extent of 20, 40 or 60% according to the road, for construction and yearly maintenance. Shall we stand aside while other counties USE THIS FUND? Is it good policy to continue obsolete methods in preference to modern, tested and approved systems? Peterboro County, with its natural requisites for good roads, should LEAD instead of lagging behind. Who would think of saying that men without family should not contribute to our high and public schools? Similarly, Canadians generally are too broad minded to use such an argument, that because a county road (which is for the benefit of the entire county) does not pass a man's door that he should not contribute.

Eighteen counties have adopted the good roads system and the representative for East Peterboro tells us this system of co-operation is becoming more popular every year, and that millions will be held in reserve for road construction after the war. Shall we let the opportunity pass knowing that every dollar raised by the county is expended in and by the county, together with thousands from the Province?

If there is one item more than anything else that will improve rural districts, increase the value of farm lands and bring inland sections more to the front, it is first class roads. The Department of Trade and Commerce purpose spending thousands of dollars on Canadian moving pictures, lantern slides, etc., to advertise Canada, and through the Canadian Trade Commissioners undertake a most extensive propaganda which will make Canada and Canadian industries known throughout the world. Of what use would this be if we are hesitating and slow, unprepared for development? The needs of Canada and Europe guarantee prosperity if we live up to our opportunities and responsibilities. It is well that other counties are adopting progressive methods regardless of what Peterboro county may do.

It is gratifying to note that meetings are soon to be held in this district to take up the question fully, and I feel sure that the problem will be faced earnestly, unitedly and with determination to make East Peterboro roads not "just as good" but first class, or in other words "the very best."

BASEBALL DIPLOMACY.

How Connie Mack Arouses Confidence in His Players.

In the American Magazine Eddie Collins of the Philadelphia Athletics tells how Manager Connie Mack inspires his players with confidence in themselves:

"There comes to me an incident when he built McInnes' confidence wonderfully when Stuffy was still doing bench duty. In a game against Chicago a critical situation was looming up. In the eighth inning the score was 5 to 4 against us. After two were out Barry signaled and Lapp came to bat. By this time Mack was beginning to fidget and squirm uneasily in his seat, something he always does when the crisis of a game seems about to break. I heard Harry Davis, who was then captain, say:

"'Connie! Are you going to let —— bat?'

"Davis had mentioned the pitcher, a notoriously weak hitter. I saw McInnes watching Mack out of the corner of his eye. The youngster trembled eagerly, hoping for a chance to go to bat in the pinch, and I think Mack saw him too, for he said to Davis rather loudly:

"'You know very well who is going to hit if Lapp gets on. There's only one man I'd put up—eh?'

"Davis inclined his head toward McInnes, and Mack nodded. McInnes saw all this, as Mack meant he should. Subsequently Lapp smashed out a two base hit, putting Barry on third, and McInnes, told to go to bat, rushed out from the dugout swelling with confidence. He had heard Mack as much as say there was 'no other man on the team he would trust in this pinch' but me. McInnes at that moment possessed overwhelming self confidence. A moment later he drove out the hit that won the game. Mack's little bit of diplomacy had met with success."

Tale of a Tail of a Stuffed Horse.

The stuffed representation of Napoleon's famous charger, Vizier, having worn out its third tail since its master's death, has recently been supplied with a fourth flowing appendage for the benefit of visitors to Paris. Vizier, except for its tail, is the "authentic" war horse ridden by Napoleon. After the animal's death the skin was stuffed and placed among the Napoleonic collection in the Invalides museum, and it became one of the objects which attract most of the attention of visitors. Of the three tails that have already disappeared at the hands of sightseers, despite the vigilance of the guardians, it is believed that at least two are in America in small detachments.

New One-cent Coin.

The Minister of Finance is considering the design for a new one-cent copper coin. The present one-cent piece while of excellent design is of so large size as to make it inconvenient to carry more than two or three in the pocket. The new coin will be slightly larger and slightly thicker than a ten-cent piece so as to be readily distinguishable to the touch. It will take some time to have the die made and the coins issued for circulation.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM PERMANENTLY CURED
NEW BRUNSWICK LADY GIVES FULL PARTICULARS OF HER RECOVERY.
There are many types of rheumatism, but none worse than inflammatory.
It was this kind that almost killed Mrs. Edward Warman, of Kent Jct., N. B.
Every known remedy she tried, different doctors gave their advice, but the disease increased.
Weak and despairing she was at her wits' end when the remarkable cure of Thomas Cullen was published. This gentleman was cured of rheumatism by "Ferrozone." Consequently Mrs. Warman used the same remedy. Here is her statement:
"For five years I have been rheumatic. I tried various forms of relief without success. The disease increased, settled in my joints and muscles; these swelled, caused excruciating pain and kept me from sleeping. My limbs and arms stiffened, my shoulders were lame and prevented me from working. Week by week I was losing strength and despaired of finding a cure. It was a happy day I heard of Ferrozone. Every day that I took Ferrozone I felt better; it eased my painful joints, gave me energy and a feeling of new life. Ferrozone cured my rheumatism, cured it so that an ache has ever returned. Even the damp weather no longer affects me."
Ferrozone has power to destroy Uric Acid, neutralize and enrich the blood, and therefore does cure the worst cases. Mrs. Warman's statement proves this.
By removing the cause of the disease and building up a reserve of energy, Ferrozone is certain to cure. Sufferer, isn't it about time to stop experimenting? Ferrozone is a CURE—order to-day, 50c per box, or six for $2.50; sold by all dealers or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Flirts With Sudden Death.

James Drysdale, driver for a Lethbridge fruit firm, was delivering bananas a few days ago when what he thought to be a ripe banana dropped down his neck. He reached and retrieved a yellow-and-green snake three feet long, which he held in his hand while he examined it thoroughly. It was a copperhead, whose bite is instant death. That the snake was numb with cold was probably his salvation.

Street Fighting Between the Soldiers and Sailors Took Place in Berlin

Machine Gun Fire Featured the Proceedings—One Hundred Persons Killed.

FIGHTING CONTINUES

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Nearly one hundred persons were killed in the street fighting between sailors and soldiers, which began in Berlin on Tuesday morning, according to latest reports from Germany's capital. Republican Guards tried several times to take the Royal stables and headquarters of the revolting sailors, but were repulsed. A large number of soldiers belonging to the Berlin Guard joined the sailors, the Vorwaerts reports, and a few of the Republican Guards followed their example. When these reports were sent a large number of armed civilians were continuing to fight the sailors, not only at the Royal stables, but in Koenigstrasse. This street with all its houses, is reported in the hands of sailors, who are supported by Spartacans. They demand that Premier Ebert and Secretary Haase resign and be replaced by George Ledebour and Karl Liebknecht.

Dr. Liebknecht, the advices add, went to the Chancellor's palace and had a long conference with ministers, the result of which was unknown. Further fighting was anticipated, it was added, as the Spartacans and the sailors are said to have decided to attempt to force the Guards to return to Potsdam. The latter were stationed in Unter Den Linden and on Werderschen Platz.

Seized Red Castle.

According to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen, a force of 600 sailors on Monday formed a guard and seized the red castle, one of the former Royal palaces. They blocked the main streets and entered public buildings and arrested Herr Wels, the military commander of Berlin, Herr Fischer, his adjutant, and Dr. Bongard. The Republican Guard, with machine guns and artillery, bombarded the castle. Holes were made in the walls, the porches were destroyed and all windows smashed. The balcony from which former Emperor William once made his speeches, in which he declared, "I know no parties," was partly smashed. The Guard eventually occupied the castle, but the sailors were still holding another large building at the time the despatch was filed. The square in front of the castle was littered with stones and missiles.

Marines Killed.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Dec. 16.—Details of the clash between the sailors and Government troops in Berlin on the night of December 23 and 24 are given in a Berlin despatch received by way of Berne. Efforts were made in vain to induce the marines to leave Berlin, and especially the castle, where they have established themselves from the beginning of the revolution. They were informed that they would not receive their pay if they did not leave the castle. The marines eventually occupied military headquarters. After sending a delegation to the military commander of Berlin demanding that eighty thousand marks be paid to them. At the same time a detachment of marines attacked the soldiers occupying university buildings. In an exchange of machine gun fire three marines were killed and four wounded. Later a delegation was sent to the Chancellor's palace to discuss the situation with Chancellor Ebert, Richard Barth, secretary of Independent Social Democratic party, and Herr Lansberg, Socialist member of the Reichstag. The marines put three men under arrest, but after along discussion they released them. The Berlin commander also was arrested and an amount of money alleged to be due the marines was seized.

Has Been Released.

Herr Wels, military commander of Berlin, who was arrested Monday by revolting sailors during fighting, in which many sailors and Republican Guards were killed and wounded, was released shortly before noon to-day. He spent the night in the basement of the former Royal stables.

Some of the more hot-headed sailors were in favour of immediate execution of Wels, but cooler heads opposed this plan. The military commander, however, was not spared humiliation, and some sailors proposed that he be locked up in a small chamber with the dead bodies of sailors and other victims of Monday's fighting. That he escaped violence and possible death was due to intercession of Socialist leaders with sailors. Fifty sailors, it is reported, are still concealed in the Red palace.

Mutinous sailors, who had been holding out in the Red palace at Berlin, have hoisted the white flag and have been allowed to leave under guard. Government troops, the message adds, now occupy the palace and Royal stables.

Wants to Save Kaiser

Von Bernstorff Eager to Escape Russian Situation Runs Created.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—"All the belligerents have accepted President Wilson's fourteen points, and the only question to be discussed is their interpretation," said Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the United States, in giving his opinion on what Germany's attitude would be at the Peace Conference, according to the Geneva correspondent of The Matin.

"Germany," declared the Count, "will keep to the President's programme, which grants each people of an ethnical group the right to dispose of itself." Asked if he thought the President's programme would furnish the basis for a lasting peace, Count von Bernstorff shrugged his shoulders.

"This is the only one which can be proposed at present," he added, "and the attempt must be made to apply it. At any rate we shall support it."

Would Get From Under.

When he was asked by the correspondent what attitude Germany would adopt toward the East, he replied:

"All the questions concerning the new States which have sprung up on the Russian frontier are the affair of the allies. Let them disentangle things as best they can. We wash our hands of Russia. We are content to safeguard as far as possible persons who started Germany in sulting at the same time the will of the populations."

Wants Wilhelm Saved.

Asked about the White Book which Carl Kautsky is said to be preparing in Berlin, Count van Bernstorff said:

'I don't think the book will reveal the individual responsibilities of the persons who started Germanyy in 1914. It will rather show the collective faults of the regime.

"I do not favour handing over the Kaiser to the allies. A Sovereign is not responsible for the policy of his Government."

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT CATHOLIC CHURCHES

holy day in the Catholic churches commemorating the nativity of Christ. At St. Peters Cathedral, Pontifical High Mass was sung by his Lordship Bishop O'Brien at 5.30 a.m., with full choir and special music for the feast. The pontifical benediction was given at the close of the mass which was immediately followed by a low mass at which practically every member of the congregation received communion There were other masses during the morning and vespers at night At the other churches the services were at the same hours and were also marked by special music and sermon bearing upon the great feast of Christmas

The music at St. Peter's Cathedral was exceptionally good and in keeping with the spirit of the church in celebrating the anniversary of the birth of the Saviour of Mankind. The choir, which has attained a high standard of efficiency under the capable management of Mr. Minnicolo, and the untiring energy of the organist, Miss Doherty, has seldom been heard to better advantage than in the rendition of Loesch Mass in F, which was sung at the two high masses yesterday. Solos were effectively sung by Misses A. Simons. G. Clancy, F. Leahy and Messrs. Hill, Minnicolo, Picard and Hanrahan.

The Adeste Fidelis ('O Come All Ye Faithful') by V. Navello, was sung by full choir at the Offertory, with solos taken by Miss Clancy and Messrs. Picard and Hanrahan.

At the second mass the Pastorale, from the oratorio, Pour Noel, by Lambillotte, was sung with expression by a mixed quartette, the four voices blending harmoniously. Those comprising the quartette were G. Clancy, N. Simons and Messrs. Minnicolo and Hanrahan. Mrs. Halpin sang 'O Holy Night,' by Adams, in her usual capable manner, and Mr. Ed. Hanrahan also sang, "In Old Judea" with full choir in the chorus.

Miss Doherty also played several voluntaries in her usual finished style.

Christmas at the Protestant Home

Interesting Programme Was Provided—Address by Canon Davidson.

Directly one got within the portals of the Protestant Home on Christmas eve, one felt the true, genuinely and kindly spirit of this season manifest. Everything was bright and cheerful, the faces expressed happy expectation, for everyone knew that no one would be forgotten when the gaily decorated and heavily weighted tree came to be dismantled. The members of the Board, one and all, and also Miss Lancaster, the bright and capable superintendent, spared neither thought or effort in the endeavour to make it a truly happy Christmas for all. Mr. John Allan was in charge of the programme, which started by all singing that grand old Christmas hymn, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," for everyone thanks God for "Peace on Earth," and for the end of the awful conflict which has saddened all hearts, and echoes the longing for "Good will towards men" to prevail over all the world.

The programme was contributed to by Capt. and Mrs. Maurice Park, Miss Maysie Armstrong, Miss Garrow, Miss Muriel Harvey, Mr. Douglas Carlisle, and consisted of songs, duets and readings, which were highly appreciated and for which hearty thanks were tendered.

Gave An Address.

Canon Davidson gave a very bright address, telling of how we were one big human family, and that at Christmas time those family feelings were intensified, everyone wanted everyone else to be happy, and were interested in one another, for after all our interests, our sorrows and joys were intermingled, and what affected one portion of the great human family concerned the other. So all joined in celebration of this Christmas, the happiest one for four years, and thanked God for it. He concluded by wishing all the compliments of the season, and thanked those who had taken part in the programme.

Mr. Allan called for thanks to Miss Lancaster for all she had done to make the gathering a success.

God Save the King was then sung, after which all the gifts were taken from the huge tree and distributed to the happy recipients. No one was overlooked from the youngest to the oldest; all participated. The poor old tree was the only lonely-looking object to be seen when it had been denuded of all its pretty and interesting parcels. So ended a happy Christmas afternoon.

THE WEATHER

When the prospects did not look good for sleighing on Christmas day, heavy snow came down at the last minute and saved the situation. Christmas day of this year was very similar to that of last year—snow falling on both days, and the temperture being practically the same. Some very cold weather followed Christmas day of last year, the thermometer being down to 27 degrees below zero on several days and the remaining days were almost as severe. This morning was quite sharp, being but 4 degrees above zero.—W.P.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND PARTY GIVEN ROYAL RECEPTION

Visitors Were Accorded All the Honours Given Royalty.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 26.— President and Mrs. Wilson are in Buckingham Palace this afternoon after a journey from Calais to London, during which they were accorded all honours ever given Royalty. Never has Royal progress, except those of great national ceremonies, excited such interest here as the first State visit of an American President. The drive of short procession from the station to the Palace was made through streets lined by Guards regiments in khaki. Fresh flags hung ovehead and covered the buildings, while windows, balconies, sidewalks and open spaces were filled with people, many of whom wore American colours. It was a great spectacle. First came the Sovereign's escort of troops from the Household Cavalry, with helmets and steel cuirasses. Then came carriages with King George and President Wilson and Queen Mary and Mrs. Wilson and Princess Mary. These were followed by three others. Although the trip was a short one, it lay through a most interesting section of London. Probably the most interesting part of the spectacle for the President was the people, who were crowded everywhere to greet him. The day being a holiday, working men and women had a chance to turn out with their small children. They made most of their opportunity, and to no stratum of British humanity could the President have made a stronger appeal. While the formal features of the event were well staged and managed, the human factor presented the most interest. The interior of the grimy old station, where King George welcomed Mr. Wilson, was carpeted with red, and the walls and roofs were hidden behind masses of flags.

REPLY TO ADDRESS.

DOVER, December 26.— In reply to the address of welcme from the people of Dover, President Wilson said: "We have come through many serious trials together and, therefore, can regard each other in a new light as comrades and associates because nothing brings men together like common understanding, and common purpose. It is therefore with deep emotion and particular gratification that I find myself here afforded an opportunity of matching my mind with the minds of those who with like intention are proposing to do the best they can, and that can be done, in the great settlement of this struggle."

As soon as the party entered Buckingham Palace crowds outside, including several hundred wounded soldiers in the Palace yard began cheering. Then came shouts of "we want Wilson, we want Wilson." In response the President and Mrs. Wilson, together with King George and Queen Mary, soon appeared on the second floor balcony. Their appearance was the signal for renewed cheering, and the crowd, especially the wounded men began calling for a speech. "I do not want to make a speech," said the President. "But I do want to tell you how much I honour you men who have been wounded in this fight for freedom, and to thank you all for the welcome you have so generously given me." As soon as the President's speech was concluded the party re-entered the palace.

Troop Ship Quarantined

Northland Has Scarlet Fever and Smallpox Aboard at Halifax.

Canadian Press:

HALIFAX, Dec. 26.— Up to a late hour this morning, no word had been received from Ottawa with reference to the Northland, which is smallpox quarantined with upwards of one thousand returning troops. The ship is still lying in the harbour awaiting a decision as to whether or not she is to dock.

The steamer Northland arrived today with 1,056 passengers, of whom 77 are civilians and the others returning soldiers. It was expected that the steamer would dock at ten o'clock this morning, but it developed when the health officer went aboard that there was one case of smallpox and one of scarlet fever among the passengers. This made it impossible to allow the ship to be docked or disembarkation to take place, and the steamer remained at anchor in the stream. The two sick men were removed to the quarantine station at Lawlor's Island and the facts were communicated to Ottawa, leaving it to the authorities there to decide whether the ship should be allowed to dock to-morrow or go into quarantine for a period of 14 days. It was considered likely that the former course would be pursued and the disembarkation staff were directed to report at the pier at nine o'clock on the assumption that she would dock.

ADDRESSED THE TROOPS

Eight Thousand American Troops Reviewed by President Wilson —A Plan for Peace.

SETTLEMENT EASY

By Webb Miller.
(United Press.)

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Dec. 26. —(By Courier to Nancy).—A vast sea of tin hats, wave on wave, swept before President Wilson yesterday as he reviewed eight thousand American troops at Langres.

He told the soldiers they would get the kind of peace they fought for.

The 8,000 who marched for the President across a muddy field, were representative of many divisions. It was a dramatic moment, one of the most dramatic in history, when the President of the United States stood before the American boys who had come so far from home to fight and win, and congratulated them on their victory.

"People's Peace."

The President addressed the troops as "my fellow countrymen." He declared that America had a chartered plan for peace and that all nations concerned had accepted that chart, making process of settlement comparatively simple.

"And," he said, "everybody concerned knows that it must be a people's peace, and that nothing must be done in settlement of issues of the war which is not as handsome as the great achievements of the armies of the United States and the Allies."

After wishing the troops a happy New Year, saying it was hard to bid them merry Christmas so far from home, the President dined with the officers of the Twenty-sixth Division. All present wore decorations. Then there was a long motor trip in the rain, with occasional flurries of snow and flickers of sunshine.

Wilson visited the soldiers' billets. He was cheered all along the route by inhabitants. The party halted once when an old French woman appeared carrying flowers for Mrs. Wilson.

Christmas Tree At The Shelter

Real Live Santa Claus Distributed the Gifts.

Although the night was very stormy on Christmas Eve, still it did not stop the Christmas Eve entertainment at the Shelter. May people were unable to attend but the children were there and enjoyed themselves. A real live Santa Claus distributed the gifts to the children. Mrs. Walter Evans and Mrs. Brayley were in charge of the arrangements in the absence of the president of the Aux was delightfully decorated and the iliary, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs. The tree Shelter with a myriad of lights was very home-like. At eight o'clock the children marched in to see the tree and hear the programme. Miss Laura McFarlane presided at the piano and Mrs. J. H. Renwick sang three times to the delight of all who were present. Miss Muriel Harvey recited twice to the children.

The children also sang a few pieces.

After a recitation by Miss Nannie Rolls and another by Miss Zetta Windover, both being well rendered. Santa Claus came in a side door and then things began to move. Mr. Joseph Wearing, the Secretary, gave a short address on the value of Christmas.

Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill, past Secretary took the chair in the absence of Mr. A. E. Peck, the president.

The Board was greatly pleased at the generous response from the public for the Christmas treat.

The arrangement for the reception of the guests and the hundred other details were well looked after by Mrs. Reid the Superintendent, who deserves great credit for the efficient way she handled everything

Yesterday Was Substitute Christmas in Germany

Berlin Was Hungry and There Were No Big Dinners—People Are Thankful Peace Has Finally Come—Holiday Crowds Were Half Gay But Not Lively.

(By Frank J. Taylor.)
(United Press Service.)

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—Yesterday was "Ersatz Christmas" in Germany.

Everything in Germany is Ersatz now. Ersatz, the German word for substitute, has come to be the most used word in the Teutonic language, and it was applied to Christ's birthday by a wan, thin girl the correspondent saw in Unter Den Linden. She was standing in front of a shop with her small brother. Their noses were pressed flat against a window, behind which gleamed a gaudy Christmas tree, hung with frosted cakes and coloured candles.

"Sister, do you think we will get candies and cakes this Christmas?" the boy asked.

"Of course not," was the reply. "This is Ersatz Christmas."

Berlin was hungry yesterday. There were no candies and no presents with the exception of trinkets. There were no big dinners, but yet there were no starving. People are thankful peace has finally come.

Scenes in the Stores.

Merchants everywhere have "Ersatz" articles for sale. Caterers and candy-makers displayed high-priced, gaily-coloured sweetmeats which were not sweet at all and had a most unsatisfying effect on the purchaser.

The streets were a mass of people. The crowds were half gay, but not lively. Men, women and children, their faces peaked, their eyes hollow and with no sparkle, walked through the streets. Soldiers presented a sharp contrast to civilians. They have been living well and are fat and bright.

Crowds in theatres, opera houses and cafes endeavoured to put some spirit into Christmas, but the joy was not spontaneous. I noticed hundreds of well-dressed persons staring at edibles displayed in windows.

Will Return to Civil Life

Majority of Officers in the American Army Will Forsake Army Life.

(By Webb Miller.)
(United Press Service.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, Dec. 26.—The distribution among officers of questionaires asking whether they desired to remain in the army or return to civil life, has set thousands of them to wondering what they will do when there is no longer use for them in the army.

A canvas among the men who have led the doughboys, artillerymen, flyers, and all other branches of the service, disclosed that the great majority have filled in their blanks with a desire to return at once to civil life. At least fifty per cent. of these, it was discovered, will return to their homes, ready to tackle some new pursuit. They regard the war as the turning point in their lives, offering them an opportunity to start anew.

Presentation to Mr. Arthur Brooke

Mr. Arthur Brooke, overseer of the carding department, Auburn Woollen Company, received a pleasant surprise when he was presented by the cardroom employees with a fine case of carvers.

The Address.

Miss Eva Crowe read the address, which was as follows:

Dear Mr. Brooke: We have come to the close of another year and t this joyous season find a fitting time to remember all your many kindnesses in the past, and our pleasant times together, and to express our gratitude for your continued confidence in us.

We would ask you to accept this gift, bearing with it all our best wishes for a "Joyous Christmas," and may the New Year be but the beginning of long years of happiness, health and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of the employees of the Card Room, Christmas, 1918.

Mr. Brooke made a suitable reply.

Banking Returns For the Month

LARGE WITHDRAWALS ON VICTORY LOAN ACCOUNTS.

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, December 26. — One hundred and forty three million dollars was paid by Canadians last month on their Victory Loan subscriptions. Savings deposits in Canadian banks were reduced by this amount, according to the bank returns for November reported by the Finance Department to-day.

Even after the payment of this amount on bonds there were savings deposits of $939,329,271 on the books of the banks. The demand deposits were thirty millions more than previous month and one hundred and thirty more than the corresponding month last year. The current loan in Canada was $1,082,709,655, or about $13,000,000 more than in the same month last year.

The statement on the whole shows a highly satisfactory financial situation in Canada.

Contract For Nine Millions

Will Continue Contract on the Welland Canal.

(Special to Examiner.)

OTTAWA, December 26. — The contract for section three of the Welland canal, in the vicinity of Thorold, one of the most expensive sections of the undertaking, has been renewed and the world will be continued at an early date. The contract was formerly let to O'Brien, Doheny, Quinlan and Robertson, but was allowed to lapse because of the war. Senator O'Brien has now dropped out of the firm, for the purposes at least of the contract, and the contract has been renewed to the other members of the contracting company. The estimated cost is in the neighborhood of nine million dollars.

THE CITY'S FINANCES.

The figures quoted by Ald. Taylor, chairman of the Finance committee of the City Council in his address at the public meeting which followed the nominations on Monday night, once more made clear to the ratepayers that a surprisingly large proportion of the civic expenditure is beyond the control of the aldermanic board. The important fact should not be lost sight of, and the aspirant for office, whose chief plea for the support of the electorate is his avowed intention of keeping down the tax rate, should be pinned down to something more definite than a general statement. He might reasonably be asked to explain how he proposed to set to work, in view of the fact that approximately 60 per cent. of the money spent by the Council is uncontrolled by that body.

Ald. Taylor showed that during the past year the percentage of the total sum appropriated for different services was as follows: Police Department, 3.2 per cent.; Public Library, 1 per cent.; Queen Mary Hospital, .8 per cent.; Collegiate Institute (debentures included) 7 per cent.; Public school, including debentures, 19.1 per cent.; patriotic grants, debentures, 1.7 per cent.; city general debentures, 5.9 per cent.; city's share local improvement debentures, 7 per cent.; frontage rate, local improvement debentures, 7 per cent.; Provincial war tax, 2.7 per cent., and administration of justice, 1.5 per cent.

All of these expenditures are, it should be understood, beyond the administration of the Council, so that the economist who proposes to pare down the tax rate has only forty per cent. of the total expenditure to operate on.

THE CANDIDATES.

The preliminaries are over—it is no longer a question of discussing what candidates should be brought out for the City Council for next year, but of selecting the best ten aldermen that can be secured from the fifteen nominees who have qualified for the aldermanic race. The field of selection is not as large as was expected or as would seem desirable in the best interests of the city. Ten of those who were nominated on Monday night failed to qualify, and among them were several who would have been a source of strength to next year's Council. It is a matter of regret that such men as Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, whose splendid training in Chamber of Commerce work in the cities 'across the line, would have been invaluable, or Mr. E. F. Mason who in past years, served the city splendidly as a member of the Council, could not see their way clear to accept the nominations that were tendered them.

The field has narrowed down to fifteen men. Of these six were members of this year's Council, and three others, Messrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., Harry Phelan and A. H. Stratton, have had previous aldermanic experience, so that only six of the aspirants for office are citizens without previous municipal service. That Mr. J. J. Turner, who is the energetic president of the Board of Trade, has consented to become a candidate, will be gratifying to the citizens generally, not only because he is a successful business man and has had a good record in the Council, but because his election to next year's board would do much to develop an entente cordiale between the Board of Trade and the City Council. These two bodies have not co-operated in the past as much as they should have, and the closer relationship that should follow the election of the Board of Trade president to the City Council would be of benefit to the city generally. The four Labour candidates, Messrs. Harry Gainey, Alex. Murray, Robert Morrison and James Garside, are among the six candidates who have not been members of any previous Council. The other two new aspirants are Messrs. James Hamilton, of the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company, and Mr. Hughson Johnston, both of whom are well known to the public.

Four of this year's Council are missing from the race, Ald. Malcolm McIntyre, Ald. Weir, Ald. Langford and Ald Worth. The six aldermen who are candidates again are Ald. Dobbin, Ald. A. A. McIntyre, Ald. Taylor, Ald. Saunders, Ald. Edgar and Jones.

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

The social evening under the auspices of the Nurses' Supervision Committee of the Peterboro Health Association, at the Empress Hotel, is heartily commended to the attention of the public, with the hope that the attendance will be as large as the splendid cause to which the fund will be devoted, merits. There is no local organization that has been doing more helpful or necessary work than the Health Association. There is certainly none that has had as little advertising. The Association depends upon a grant from the City Council, subscriptions from a number of public spirited citizens, and upon the annual "At Home," for funds to carry on its mission in the city. The proceeds of to-morrow night's function will be devoted to the very necessary work of supplying nourishment to patients whose families are not able to supply the milk, eggs and other things that are needed. Many a patient has been helped in this way by the Health Association, and the organization hopes to be in a better shape next year to enlarge the scope of its work. A large attendance to-morrow evening will be of great assistance in this aim.

ADMIRAL BEATTY'S FAREWELL.

The fighting Admiral of the British fleet, Sir David Beatty, will have to write his own story of the war. After his farewell talk to Admiral Rodman and the officers of the American flagship New York, Sir David cannot plead a lack of familiarity with the art of saying the right thing in the best English. If Mr. Kipling and Mr. Conrad and Mr. Masefield had put their heads together to compose the speech that the British Admiral should make when he said good-bye to his American comrades, those masters of the vernacular could not have matched Sir David's sailor valedictory.

It had the spirit of Nelson's reply when he was praised for his victory in the battle of the Nile: "I had the happiness to command a band of brothers." In Sir David's speech was the savor of the sea; the brine must have been on his lips and the north wind in his lungs when he spoke so feelingly to his companions of many a night vigil and call to quarters. It was on the forecastle that he faced them, grouped about him, a historic movement. His heart was in each word, and every word rang with sincerity. What was said, always to the point, and just enough, with a rare sweetness and delicacy, Americans proud of their navy cannot read without emotion, and its effect upon the listening officers will be a memory through life with them.

There was not one of them who did not feel with Sir David Beatty a sense of disappointment that the Germans had not come out to test the battle spirit of the British and American fleets. They agreed with him that "it was a pitiful day to see those great ships coming in like sheep being herded by dogs to their fold without an effort on anybody's part." Like the fighting British Admiral, they could not understand it. It was not the traditional ways of the sailors of the two navies, who had fought some fierce bouts together. We fancy that no Captain who ever walked a quarterdeck could have paid a more delightful tribute to admired comrades than this:

I want you to take back a message to the Atlantic Fleet that you have left a very warm place in the hearts of the Grand Fleet which cannot be filled until you come back or send another squadron to represent you.

It was not easy for Admiral Beatty to say good-bye to the home-returning American officers. Consider this moving sentiment: "I hope that in the "sunshine which Admiral Rodman "tells me always shines there you "will not forget your 'Comrades of "the Mist' and your pleasant asso-"ciations of the North Sea." And then the handclasps, whose warmth and firmness expressed a good deal more than esteem for Great Britain's Admiral with the Irish tongue and the Irish genius for friendship! It had been a joy to serve under a commander who in his daring and skill, his fairness and chivalry, reflected the ideals of the men who had been trained to serve their country at Annapolis. There has been no herald of good-will between American and England more winning than Sir David Beatty, and the measure of his manhood leaves no room for doubt that he is sincere and loyal.—New York Times.

Voice of The People

THE CALL OF DESTINY.

Sir, — It is now a realized fact that an epoch in the history of Peterboro has taken place in the nomination of four labour candidates for the Municipal Council, endorsed by the local Trades and Labour Council under whose control these candidates will be helped and directed as to the wishes of the workers and the good of the city as a whole. Therefore, it will not be a one-man affair, but a Labour platform, which I believe they will stand for.

While Labour is likely to make mistakes, her glory will be in rising above those mistakes. Labour is to be realized as human power; the one essential motive power for the prosperity of the world.

The Canadian troops have been fighting the battles for Democracy and the emancipation of the worker, on the fields of Flanders, and in other parts of the world. Therefore their interests are our interests; they have made the way clear. We must not let the great achievement slow up in civil life. The matter now lies entirely with the workingmen themselves. It is with some difficulty that Labour managed to "quality," financially support them now, it will be easier next time.

The system on which the Labour candidates are running makes every workingman a councillor, for if any man has a suggestion he will only have to take it to his union meeting, and direct the Labour representatives to take the matter up with their fellow Aldermen. So the responsibility for progress rests with yourselves, for the good management of the city's affairs so far as it lies in the power of the Labour party; and remember that possession of ability demands a duty of service.

It will not be just what the Labour candidates know; it will be what all the organized workers know centred in their four representatives. Labour stands for unity of purpose, a greater and more prosperous Peterboro.

The workingman's time has come to show his metal, and a plump vote for Labour. You will still have enough votes for the other fellow. Labour does not discriminate in creed or colour, but is Labour first, last, and the betterment of the whole race.

Labour must not miss this opportunity of electing workingmen upon the City Council, and so show our appreciation of the work of the boys in khaki who made it possible; for their interests are our interests.

T. TOOMS.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I would wish that you, in your editorial comment on the happenings of the nominations meeting had stated, what you obviously knew, that Mayor Duncan had limited the speaking time of the several candidates to five minutes each. It is true that Ald. Edgar took twenty-five minutes, but he insisted on a hearing, and his general review of his stewardship was interesting to the meeting. I confined myself to the very briefest possible comment on the two or three things I mentioned. This in deference to the time limit. Others who spoke observed the rule very well indeed.

May I ask you to permit me to state that I should have been glad to say, and this in reply to your remark that very little was said by any candidate in the matter of recognition of the claims of the returned men for a roof over his official head and a joint meeting place. No doubt the theme was in mind. But again time did not wait. Possibly what I will ask you to print here may open the matter up to discussion and it may be that other plans and propositions may evolve.

We have two propositions. A home for the returned man and a memorial in respect to those who have fallen. Take the latter first.

I conceive that it is not part of the duty of the men returned or returning from service to be asked to erect or to contribute to erect a memorial to those who have given up their lives on the battle fields. That is, I respectfully put forward, wholly for the citizens, for those who remained at home.

Why should we be in haste to take this work in hand. I have stood under and strolled about what is the most famous national monument in the United States, that shall commemorating the battle of Bunker Hill. Yet that column was not erected until seventy-two years after the battle was fought.

Again, and probably, the most conspicuous national monument in Canada is that put up on the escarpment below the Falls of Niagara in memory to General Brock. It was not built until General Brock had been thirty-two years in his honoured grave. The beautiful memorial creation in honour of Samuel de Champlain, famous in the dawn of Canada, was not placed where it is until nearly three hundred years after his deeds had become a matter of history. We have both precedent and practice that we should make haste slowly. Public opinion can crystalize and reach common ground as to form, place and cost and afterwards we can erect and recognize.

But to the other. Let us ask ourselves:

Have these men earned what they want? They have.

Are we in debt to them for what they have done? Surely we are.

And if in debt, will we proceed to pay something of that debt? We ought to.

Then, how and when.

One of the men returned, speaking of this matter, said that they wanted a building that would accommodate 2,000 soldiers at times. As a citizen, I demurred, because of cost and especially of future upkeep. There is not, to my knowledge, between Montreal and Toronto, such a building for housing purposes, outside of purely military requirements. I inquired if such a building, for instance, as the West Ward school would do. Fine, he said. And was surprised to find that that important building accommodated about 400 children. And they sit together much closer than the soldiers will sit in occupancy. But what we do in part or in whole,, we should do it now.

If elected to the next Council, I will propose that the sum of ten thousand dollars be placed in the estimates for the year, to be raised on the tax papers. No borrowing. That a committee of citizens and soldiers will get together and plan out what such a sum will do. For this is to be remembered, that when a considerable sum of money is to be paid, it is more often than not paid in instalments. Such money should make these men comfortable in a business home and meeting place well furnished. The cost of upkeep to be determined.

And that, if a larger sum than indicated be asked for and found judicious to be supplied, that a money by-law be submitted to the property owners further on. No doubt some further local legislation will be required on account of the bridge Such a by-law can be submitted at the same time.

I think from my acquaintance with the views of the several candidates and from views expressed by citizens, that the proposition as outlined would receive the support of all. It is moderate, within our means and will accomplish much. For the time being at any rate.

Respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made, and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Items of Interest From Hastings

HASTINGS, December 24th. — The weather has taken a decided change and is now much colder with heavy snow flurries.

The schools are closed for the Christmas vacation.

Miss Conley is spending the holiday with friends in Toronto.

Our esteemed principal, Mr. Ostrander, has resigned his position, and has accepted one in Deseronto, whither he will remove with his family to begin his duties at the beginning of the New Year. At the close of the school he was presented with an address and a club bag in recognition of his faithful services. Mr. Ostrander was visibly affected, but replied in suitable terms.

The citizens in general regret very much to lose so desirable a citizen. His position will be filled by Mr. Prentiss, who will commence duties in January.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church held their regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. B. F. Doxsee, when important business was discussed and disposed of, after which luncheon was served by the hostess.

Pte. W. Langley and son Fred, have returned from active service overseas and are receiving the congratulations of their friends on their safe return.

An interesting event was solemnized in the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday evening, when Miss Minnie McConnal, became the bride of Mr. Harry Lobb. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Isaac Snell, the bride's pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Lobb have a host of friends who join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

Nurse McGuire of Campbellford, was in town on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Smith motored to Peterboro on Thursday.

Mr. Harold Beavis of Lindsay spent a few days during the week at his home here.

Miss Helen Baker of Peterboro, is spending a holiday at the home of her brother, Mr. Malcolm Baker.

Miss Gertie Hall of Toronto, is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hill.

Miss Olive Humphries spent a few days recently with friends in Peterboro.

Mrs. Nelson Beavis has returned from an extended visit to Lakefield.

Some new cases of "flu" are reported, several members of one family being down with it.

Miss Mae Huycke is visiting with friends in Peterboro.

Mrs. Leslie Gould has returned from Toronto and is spending the Christmas season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Huycke.

Mr. Wilfred Knight of Lindsay, is holidaying with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Knight.

Mr. Whitley of Toronto, was in town during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Stillman of Norwood, called on Saturday.

POSTMEN'S CHRISTMAS A LONG DAY'S WORK

Christmas for the postmen was the busiest day of the year. They reported for duty at four o'clock in the morning, waded into mountains of mail, started distributing about ten or eleven o'clock, snatched dinner down town and in some cases were not finished until seven o'clock at night. For them it could scarcely be called an ideal "holiday," and to add to their difficulties the snow was loose and unpacked when they started on their routes. Of course there was considerable compensation in the gratuities of citizens who always remember the "Posties," and from several reports they fared about as well as usual.

ONE GOOD TERM DESERVES ANOTHER

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Having again been nominated for Alderman for the city for 1919, I again ask your support in favour of my re-election.

My record in the Council during the past year is before you, and I can safely leave it in your hands. If again elected I pledge myself to continue to give my close attention to the best interests of the city as a whole.

Please accept my best wishes for a bright and merry Christmas.

Yours faithfully,

BOARD of ALDERMEN

To the Municipal Electors Of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

In compliance with the urgent request of numerous friends I have consented to stand for election as Alderman for the city for 1919.

Having the benefit of several years' experience in the City Council and occupied important positions such as Chairman of the Board of Works and other influential committees, I would endeavour, if elected, to give my best services in assisting to conduct our civic affairs in a prudent, economical, and business-like manner.

I, as well as every other intelligent ratepayer, fully realize the fact that the city is faced with large responsibilities during 1919. Anything I can do, therefore, to serve the electorate at this critical period will be cheerfully undertaken to the best of my ability.

Soliciting your support and influence, and hoping the very best men may be elected for the Board of Aldermen for 1919, permit me to wish one and all the compliments of the season.

Yours faithfully,

HARRY PHELAN

SUPPLEMENT REGULATIONS

New Pension Provisions Come Into Force January 1—Special Provisions.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.— New pensions regulations come into force on New Year's Day. They will follow, in the main, recommendations made by the special committee of the House of Commons, whose findings were published some months ago. But these recommendations have been supplemented in three important particulars:

1. The coming into force of the regulations is fixed for January 1, 1919.
2. All existing cases may be reviewed by the Board of Pension Commissioners in the light of the present regulations.
3. Special provision is made for cases of exceptional hardship.

BOARD of ALDERMEN

Ald. A. A. McINTYRE

As a candidate for re-election to the City Council for 1919 I respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The coming year will be marked by a number of outstanding questions of grave importance that will have to be dealt with my the incoming Council. These include the proposed overhead bridge on Hunter street, the sewage disposal plant, the two-platoon system for the firemen, and also the question of a suitable war memorial and better and more adequate attention to the many problems connected with the soldiers who are already home and those who will return in the future.

This year the electors will have to mark their ballots for at least four aldermen and not more than ten. I hope to be favoured with one of these votes and if elected will give the same impartial and undivided attention to civic affairs that has characterized by efforts in the past. If you vote for less than four aldermen the ballot will be counted as a spoiled ballot, and if you vote for more than ten the same conditions will apply.

Yours for a greater and more prosperous and progressive city.

German Industrial Leader Sees Country Ruin For Years

Predicted Germany Would Lose the War, But Was Scoffed at by the People—Prospect Very Gloomy to Him.

COLONIES LOST, TOO

LONDON, December, 24. — H. T. Greenwall, the Daily Express correspondent, has interviewed in Berlin Dr. Rathenau, head of the German General Electrical Company, one of the largest employers of labor in Germany. He said:

"Germany is ruined for generations to come. It is the greatest calamity that has happened in any country for 2,000 years. We are ruined politically, industrially and economically. All our people here do not yet know the truth. I told the German people that they would lose the war, but everybody scoffed at me.

"We have a population of nearly 70,000,000. Half of them can live on what grows on our soil or is found below it. The other half lives on the industries for which all materials have to be bought and paid for by what they sell.

"Now our colonies are going; and Alsace-Lorraine, too, with all the ores and the greater part of the potash production. There is danger too of losing other parts of our country, the Danish and so-called Polish districts, which in reality are German.

"Then comes the question of indemnities. If the indemnities are high, the interest and repayments will take our savings and we will have nothing with which to expand our industries. Black ruin will face us, and there will be a great tide of emigration, probably to South America and the Far East, and certainly to Russia. It will be most dreadful, and the result will be the Balkanization of Europe.

"The disappearance of Germany from a position of importance will be the most dangerous fact in history. Sooner or later the Eastern powers will press on the Western civilization."

Turning to the food question, Dr. Rathenau said:

"Germany has been hungry for three years, but is not yet starving. Everybody who sees Germany will say that she is not starving now and that is perfectly true. But if you talk of provisions to be found in Germany you must say truthfully that they will be exhausted in two months; and if you wait until then to send food, it will be too late, because 70,000,000 people cannot be fed as easily as say 7,000,000 Belgians. Ships are the greatest factor in feeding Germany.

"If the Allies do not send food within two months, what will happen?" the correspondent asked.

"Riots and sickness," was the reply.

Dr. Rathenau said that he had seen the damage done in Belgium and Northern France and his estimate of the indemnity payable for this was £1,000,000,000.

"That sum would, if anything, be excessive," he added. "It would be a war indemnity."

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 26. — Street fighting took place Monday and Tuesday in Berlin, despatches reaching here to-day declared. Sailors laid siege to the Foreign Office and the Government buildings in that vicinity. Several persons were killed in Unter Den Linden. Further disturbances are feared.

As Candidate for Alderman

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having had your confidence for the past five years as a member of your City Council, I again ask your approval.

I have, in looking after your interests, tried to be useful, helpful and practical. Such details as have been entrusted to my care have been attended to efficiently and carefully.

There has been little opportunity in the past four war years for what is termed "progressive enterprise" for the city. If the coming term affords such you will not find me lacking in furthering that which is best for both your interest and that of the municipality. I can only ask you to take my past record as an assurance for the future.

I believe that thoroughness of attention to detail in our city administration is the only sure way to success. All else is but a flash in the pan. We must grow as we grow. Careful management, reasonable economy, faithful service are the basis of your municipal progress. I will, if elected, work earnestly for all.

Very respectfully,

F. H. DOBBIN

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

A. A. FOWLER

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having now served a two-year term on your Board of Education, receiving the highest vote on the occasion of my being selected for the honour, I again allow by name to come before you for re-election... My two years service, and particularly that of the last year when I was Chairman of the Property Committee, has given me the experience necessary to more intelligently attend to the important duties of the Board. Having accepted the honour of the ratepayers confidence, I gave the same care and attention to the affairs before the Board as I did to my own private business, and if again entrusted with the work will give the very best service of which I am capable. Knowing that greater School accommodation is becoming necessary especially in the South and West sections of the city, and in order to obtain all the knowledge possible, I visited, in company with Dr. Neal, and at our own expense, the Technical and Public Schools of London and Hamilton.

This Board will in the next two years, be obliged to dispose of considerable business, involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and my two years' experience on the Board, and long business training, should fit me especially for the duties at this crucial period.

I am an enthusiast along educational lines and want Peterborough to have the best Educational Advantages, and I consider that our equipment and Staff are of the high efficiency necessary to properly apply the magnificent System as outlined by the Provincial Authorities.

If elected it will always be my aim to guard the interest of the ratepayers and keep down expenses, endeavouring at all times to see that every dollar spent was properly applied. If my past Service, and future willingness are considered worthy of your support, you can show it on election day by endorsing my Candidature with your vote.

Yours faithfully,

A. A. FOWLER.

For Board of Education

MRS. KATE MORRIS

TO THE ELECTORS:—

The Board of Education in this city, up to the present time, has consisted of men only. Cities as small as Orillia and as large as Toronto, have had women school trustees for Some time—and their usefulness has been recognized by the men with whom they work and by the citizens whom they represent.

Sixty-five women teachers are employed in the schools in Peterborough, influencing more than 2,500 children every school day in the year.

Since the care and development of the children of the city depends so largely on women, in the home and in the school, is it not reasonable to think that the woman's point of view should be valuable on the School Board.

It is with the hope of being of some service in a work that surely requires the co-operation of men and women, that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS.
(Mrs. W. R. Morris)

Board Of Education

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have been again honoured with the nomination for member of the School Board for the City, and respectfully ask your support if you think my work in the past warrants it, and that my experience is of value to the Board in dealing with the very important matters that are coming up for consideration during the next two years.

With best wishes for the New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ALD. W. H. TAYLOR'S REVIEW OF THE CITY'S FINANCES DURING THE YEAR

Statement at Nomination Meeting Showing Debenture Issues and Percentage of Expenditures Controlled by the Council—Deals With Other Questions.

In the list of candidates nominated for the Council on Monday night the name of Ald. W. H. Taylor, chairman of the Finance Committee, was inadvertently omitted. In his address at the nominations meeting he reviewed the expenditures of the Council during the year as follows:

This year the Council estimated the expenditures of the City at $506,510.-41. In this sum I have included the Provincial War Tax, which is really levied by the Provincial Legislature but which we have to collect and hand over to the Government. In order to give an idea what proportion of the expenditure is for different purposes I have a statement of the percentage of the total sum which was appropriated for different services, as follows:—

Uncontrolled by the Council.

Police Department	3.2%
Public Library	1.0
Queen Mary Hospital	0.8
Collegiate Institute, including debentures	7.0
Public Schools, including debentures	19.1
Separate Schools	2.9
Patriotic Grants Debentures	1.7
City General Debentures	5.9
City's Share Local Improvement Debentures	7.0
Frontage Rates Local Improvement Debentures	7.0
Provincial War Tax	2.7
Administration of Justice	1.5
	59.8%

Expended by the Council.

Assessments and Taxes	1.0%
Charity	1.2
Fire Department	4.9
Light	2.9
Municipal Government	1.5
Streets and Bridges, including oiling streets and snow removal	6.9
Special Grants	1.2
Hydrants and Water	1.8
Miscellaneous (including loss on taxes, etc.)	3.4
Protestant Home, including debentures	0.5
House of Providence	0.1
Garbage Collection	2.0
	27.4%
Patriotic Grants made this year	12.8
	100.0%

This statement shows what proportion of each dollar is expended for the different purposes.

During this year debentures to the amount of $51,200.00 were issued. Of this sum $13,200.00 was for waterworks purposes, the interest and sinking fund for which are provided by the Utilities Commission out of the waterworks revenue; $10,000.00 was for fire department equipment; $3,000.00 for sidewalks constructed as local improvements, and $25,000.00 to renew part of a block of consolidated debentures which fell due and which did not increase the debt. Debentures to the amount of $5,262.44 were paid off, and the increase in the debenture debt this year amounted to $20,937.56, the smallest increase in a number of years.

As to the future, it is always difficult if not dangerous to predict. But we certainly have reason to expect that we will not have to make a grant to the Patriotic Fund next year, and if we are not called upon for further patriotic grants that will relieve us of an appropriation that this year required a rate of 4.82 mills. We hope, too, that the Provincial Government will not require the war tax, which will make a further reduction of one mill. The assessment for next year will be, for ordinary municipal purposes, about one million dollars more than this year. On the other hand we will probably have to provide for interest and sinking fund for debentures to pay for the high-level bridge on Hunter street and for sewage disposal works. If the bridge debentures can be sold at the rate provided for in the By-law, and if the sewage disposal works cost $100,000.00, at which figure the cost has been roughly estimated, these two works will require a rate of about 2.20 mills. There is also the question of the two-platoon system for the fire department, which, if adopted, will add to the expense. But even if these have all to be provided for, and we get the relief we expect from the patriotic and war tax rates, the Council will be able to reduce the tax-rate, and I hope reduce it substantially. We will need, however, continued careful management and a cautious and careful oversight of all the expenditures.

If you give me a renewal of your confidence I shall continue to serve the City to the best of my ability, and to endeavour to have the affairs of the City economically administered.

WINNERS AT THE GEORGE STREET ALLEYS

The following were the winners of the prizes at the George street alleys. In ten pins, Alex. Stewart, with scores of 214, 236, 209, won the turkey for high total for three consecutive games, and W. In B class in ten pins, P. Dallin with 203 for singles, was high, D. Sharpe with 195, second, and G. Stephens with 189 was third. A. C. Miller, with 157, 216 and 198, in five pins, was high man.

Firemen's New Uniforms and Coats Accepted by Committee

Were Inspected on Christmas Eve and Approved by Both Aldermen and Firemen—Mr. Anderson Made the Uniforms.

BRIGADE LOOKED SMART

A Christmas Eve ceremony that was as pleasing to the Committee as to the members of the Fire Brigade, was the formal inspection of the new uniforms and overcoats at the Fire Hall. The only regret was that Chief Grange who is confined to his home with an attack of the prevelant "flu" was not on the floor to view the force in their new attire.

Sixteen brand new uniforms on sixteen stalwart men made a fine impression. Mr. Anderson, the contractor for the supply of clothing has done a good work, and fitted up as they were the force looked fine. The Committe passed the contract as satisfactory.

Then sixteen overcoats were brought out and donned. Talk of a respectable appearance. You had it then. Made of fine Canadian Frize, well lined, neatly cut and trimmed, the coats were worthy of a worthy brigade. Of nice length and sprinkled at appropriate points with the conventional brass buttons. When the force turns out on the street it will put the police in the shade of spiff appearance. To complete the outfit, and that it should lack nothing to do the thing complete each man had treated himself to a new uniform cap. Solomon in all his glory was not so arrayed, assuming that Solomon had to go about in the rigors of a Canadian winter. The overcoats were supplied by Mr. F. Jenne, who, in bestowing sartorial advice on others, bestowed some on the brigade. The contract was passed as satisfactorily executed.

These things are paid out of this year's appropriation and this is mentioned that the public may not assume that this year is plunging next year into debt.

BERT LYTELL

"UNEXPECTED PLACES"

A METRO PRESENTATION

Bert Lytell Appears in Adventure Play at the Grand Theatre.

A decidedly thrilling and entertaining feature will be the attraction at the Grand Theatre to-day, in which the popular actor, Bert Lytell, is seen as the star. This is the Metro production, "Unexpected Places," which was written by Lieut. Frank R. Adams, and published in the Blue Book Magazine.

The story is that of a "live wire" young New York journalist who, in a most unexpected manner, finds himself mistaken for an Englishman, Lord Varden. German spies are on the trail of the nobleman and when the young American, Dick Holloway, played by Bert Lytell, finds himself the possessor of the Englishman's title he also finds that he has inherited the Germans. Many exciting adventures are thrust upon Dick, but when a beautiful young girl claims him for her cousin he finds that he is fully compensated for all the dangers that he has undergone. The story is full of real thrills and quick action and the cast which surrounds Mr. Lytell was picked by Director E. Mason Hopper for the ability which each one will fully demonstrate in the play. Beautiful Rheat Mitchell plays the leading feminine role of Ruth Penfield and others in important parts are Colin Kenney as Lord Varden, Louis Morrison, Edythe Chapman, John Burton, Rosemary Theby, Stanton Heck, and Jay Dwiggins.

Presentations at Worth Plant

Manifestation of Good Feeling Between Employers and Employees.

On Christmas eve, Mr. Dyson Worth, Mr. J. W. Worth and Mr. Edgar Worth were each presented with handsome umbrellas by the men employees of the Bonner-Worth factory. In the presentation of the Christmas gifts, which was done informally in the general office, the employees thanked the Messrs. Worth for the many kindnesses and consideration shown them during the year. Mr. Dyson Worth was further presented with a box of cigars.

Presented Club Bag.

Following the above presentation, the girls of the factory assembled in Mr. J. W. Worth's office and presented him with a handsome club bag, wishing him the compliments of the season and thanking him for his kindness to them during the year. To this Mr. Worth made a suitable reply, expressing his appreciation of the co-operation which exists between the members of the firm and the employees. He said that while the war had ceased he fully expected to keep the present number employed indefinitely.

Description of French Camps By Sergt. Mahoney

Peterboro Boy With the American Army Gives Some Idea of American Camps—Sailed From Hoboken.

The following letter was received by Mr. D. Mahoney of this city from his son, Sergt. Jos. P. Mahoney, of the American engineers. Sergt. Mahoney tells something of camp life in France and is a good word picture of the French city of Brest as seen from on board ship:

Sunday, Nov. 24, 1918.
Camp Mencon,
Vannes, France.

Dear Dad,— This is "Dad's Day" with the American soldiers in France. To-day every soldier is supposed to write one letter home to his father. The censorship has also been lifted so we can now tell all about ourselves.

No Submarines.

So, Dad, I will try and tell you all I can remember.

We left Hoboken on Sept. 15 and arrived at Brest, France, on Sept. 28. We had a fine voyage. We did not see any submarines at all. I was on one of the look-out watches for one shift and I did not see any signs of subs.

When we left New York we had a full moon, which was dangerous, but the last night going through the danger zone it was pitch dark, the sea was very rough and it was raining heavy. That was the night I was on watch. The submarines could not work in such weather, so we arrived safely the next morning. It sure was a fine sight to see land again and to know we were in France.

Brest in the Distance.

Brest looked beautiful in the mist of the early morn. The pure white houses, old castles and churches, made a fine scene through the green grape vines and hedges. The town is situated on the side of a hill.

We landed in the afternoon and marched about three miles to camp. We stayed there one week. The old part of this camp was built by Napoleon and is surrounded by a high wall.

Through Nancy.

From Brest we went to 'Gievers.' At this camp we were classified and sent to the different places where we were needed. I stayed there one week and left there in charge of thirteen men to report to Camp Mencon for duty. We had a fine trip, passing through Tours, Nancy and some other French cities.

Promoted Sergeant.

When I arrived here I was placed as sergeant in charge of the pumps and lighting plants. I got along very well. About two weeks ago this part of the work was given over to the Engineers and the lieutenant who was over me, and myself were placed on detached service with the Engineers. We have charge of the construction and repair work. I have charge of the carpenters and at present we are busy building barracks for the French civilians who will soon be working here. I like my work fine and I am learning a lot of useful knowledge.

War is Over.

Well, Dad, the old war is over at last, and I am sure glad. Some of the soldiers will soon be going home. I expect we will have to stay until the French take over this camp. I may be sent to some other place then or they may allow me to go home. I hope the French take this camp very soon. I have a fine room to sleep in. I have a cot bed, stove, desk, shelves, etc. A young fellow is along with me. We have the room decorated with holly and pictures.

Wishing you all a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year, I remain,

Your loving son,
JOS. P. MAHONEY.

PRAISES SALVATION ARMY.

F. A. McKenzie, Noted War Correspondent, Tells of Their Work Among the Boys.

TORONTO, December 24. — The "Gospel of the Frying Pan" is the term applied by F. A. McKenzie, the noted war correspondent, who is on a lecturing tour in Canada, to one feature of the Salvation Army's work in France. Mr. McKenzie has high praise for the army, and in an interview, says: "I have had opportunity, both in France and in England, but more especially in France, of seeing something of the admirable work done by the Salvation Army for our troops. In this work of helping the fighting men, tending the sick and wounded, and comforting the sorrowing and the desolate, the Salvation Army has borne an honorable, and distinguished, and in many ways a unique part.

Part of the Chorus in Harvey Orr's Musical Show, "Miss Blue Eyes," at the Grand on New Year's Day.

The musical score of "Miss Blue Eyes," which is the big holiday attraction at the Grand on New Years' Day, matinee and night, was composed by Silvio Hein and Edward Paulton, who were responsible for the N. Y. recent success of "Flo-Flo."

With a bevy of beautiful girls singing and dancing such numbers as "Nobody Can Take My Heart from You," "A Sort of Subtle Feeling," and "Blue Eyes," are fast becoming strong favorites on the music stands.

Mr. Harvey D. Orr is bringing his original cast of 40 people here, and "Miss Blue Eyes" should prove one of the big hits of the season in Peterboro. The advance plan of tickets opens Monday a.m. at the Box Office.

Puts O.K. on Bill of Fare

The Downcast Dyspeptic Takes Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Eating and His Stomach Is Now a Twelve-Cylinder Racer.

The old-time grouch is now a Sunny Jim. Instead of feeling dull, stupid, irritable and dizzy after eating, he takes a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet and is bright, active, good natured and full of "pep." He puts his O. K. on the entire bill of fare; everything is good from the soup to the pie and cheese and sets snug and comfortable.

Once you learn the remarkable action of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in digesting food, preventing and overcoming gassiness, heartburn, sour risings, lump in your throat, gagging and the other distresses of indigestion you will eat what you want at any time without the slightest distress. MRS. JAMES MAHONEY.

The many friends and acquaintances of Mrs. James Mahoney will learn with deepest regret of her death, which took place at her home in Douro, on Tuesday, Dec. 24th.

Although the late Mrs. Mahoney had been ill for some time, her death came as a shock to many. A kind and genial disposition made her a favourite with all her associates.

Besides her sorrowing husband, she leaves to mourn her loss three daughters, Mrs. Frederick Walsh of Douro, Mrs. James Foley of Indian River, and Miss Florence at home; three sons, Philip of St. Louis, Mich., Frank of California, and Jeremiah at home.

Three brothers also survive her, Daniel and John of Peterborough, and Michael of Bad Axe, Michigan.

JOHN ROWLAND.

Mr. John Rowland, after a prolonged illness, peacefully passed away at his home, in the Township of Manvers, Bethany, on December 6th, at the age of 61 years.

For years he worked at his trade as a mason, and in many parts of this country there are evidences of his painstaking industry and thorough work. In recent years he has farmed with the assistance of his family, about a mile out of the village of Bethany. His Christian life was not exhibited by a loud profession but by a quiet, peaceful trust in Jesus Christ as his Saviour.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held on Tuesday, December 10th, where an appropriate service was conducted at his residence by the pastor, Rev. W. T. Wickett, and his remains were interred in the family plot, Pontypool, beside those of his devoted wife, who predeceased him some few months ago. He leaves to mourn the loss of a kind father, four sons and one daughter.

A Sensation Has Been Created By a Picture in Toronto

"The Better 'Ole" Has Proven a Bigger Drawing Card Than Any Other Film Ever Presented There—In Peterboro January 2nd, 3rd and 4th, at The Grand.

There is Real Entertainment in the Bairnsfather Play—It is Everyday Life in the Trenches as Lived by Old Bill, Bert and Alf.

"The Romance of Old Bill," as related in the film of "The Better 'Ole," is a stirring story containing a strong vein of homor and a message to all who see it. Old Bill is played by Charles Rock, in whose experienced hands Bairnsfather's character is admirably presented. The striking charm about these master studies is that they are so thoroughly unstudied. The characters reek—that is a sound word to use about the trenches—of truth. We see Old Bill, that philosopher of the trenches; Alf and Bert, those life studies in khaki, the comedy of the uniform. Khaki and cashinations is the motto for "The Better 'Ole." It is better than any play. Only a percentage of people have seen the legitimate version. The screen version begins with a prologue in which we vision Rouget de Lisle singing the "Marseillaise," we see the Three Muskateers of Dumas, "one for three, three for one." These dissolve into our modern trio of warriors—Old Bill, Alf and Bert. We see them in their dug-out, making merry in billets behind the lines, then off to Blighty, and their welcome home. "The Better 'Ole" comes to Canada direct from England, and is now running at the Allen Theatre. The London Evening News says of it, "'The Better 'Ole' is meeting with enormous approbation wherever shown. It gives real entertainment."

Germany to Send Army of 800,000 Men Into Poland

First Definite Step Taken Toward Continuation of German Oppression —Urgent Calls Are Sent for Assistance.

Paris, Dec 26.—The pouring of German troops and also arms ammunition and machine guns for German colonists to use in those parts of Poland ruled since the partition by Germany is now followed by an order issued by the German military command providing for the quartering of an army of 800,000 men in the territory in question with means of provisioning the same. This was announced to me to-day by the Polish National Committee here following the receipt of reports from Poland containing an urgent plea for action by the allies to prevent the carrying out of these orders, which mean a new invasion by a large German army.

The addition to the German military forces now in the Polish territory in Posen, Silesia and West Prussia of a large army will be equivalent to taking the first definite steps toward the continuation of the German oppression of Poland and also efforts to hold Polish territory by the Germans. Fear for the safety of life and property of the people of these parts of Poland at the hands of the German army is expressed by the Polish leaders both here and in Poland.

An Attempt at Systematic Ruin

These steps, because of the breaking of relations between the Polish provision Government and Berlin, are interpreted by the Poles as indicating an attempt at the systematic ruin and destruction of both people and property. According to the Polish leaders they are now making efforts to induce the allies to thwart the German plans immediately and to protect the threatened polish people in the territory mentioned.

The removal from Polish territory by Germans of numerous articles needed for daily use continues ruthlessly and is causing destitution among the people. Many complaints have been received from these terriforces. Medicines and sanitary materials have also been removed, causing much suffering.

German Colonists Armed

German colonists, agents and officials are furnished with arms which are forbidden to the remainder of the population. The Polish People's Council in Posen and also in other places is urging immediate allied action to save millions of Polish people from horrors equal to those suffered by their countrymen during the war in the devastated sections.

In adidtion to the fear caused by the German army, plans, reports have been received here from Poles living in the vicinity of Lemberg regarding the activity of the Ukranians assisted by Germans. There has also been reported to be harmoniously working and prevention of a conspiracy between Ukranians and some Jews unfriendly to the Poles to attack the Polish population Jews friendly to the Poles made the discovery after which the leaders were apprehended. Five Ukranians and five Jews are reported to have been held.

A strong group among the Jews is reportde to be harmoniously working with the Poles in helping to preserve order and also to combat Bolshevik propaganda in the vicinity of Lemberg. Efforts to spread Bolshevism continue in various districts but without success.

LAKEFIELD TOWN HALL WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Returned Soldiers Were Entertained in the Building Last Evening —Loss Will Be Heavy.

Lakefield, Dec. 27.—The Lakefield Town Hall, Fire Hall, Public Library and gaol and the contents of each were totally destroyed by fire this morning at 4.30 o'clock.

The last occupants of the buildings were the Anglican Young People's Association, who entertained the returned soldiers of the village. The young people broke up the entertainment at about 12 o'clock and returned home, after making certain the fire in the stove, over which they had made coffee, was in proper order to leave.

Heard Flames

At 4.30 the caretaker heard the roar of flames and gave the alarm. In no time the whole village living about the hall had turned out and futile efforts were made to save some of the contents of the building.

The Loss

The loss, which includes the fire apparatus, books of the library, the Lakefield band instruments and municipal books will amount to several thousand dollars The buildings which were of solid brick were well built and worth a considerable sum

The Cause

The cause of the fire is as yet unknown. The caretaker declares that it could not have been due to either the furnace or stove, as both were in good order. The only possible explanation is that a cigarette may have been carelessly dropped by some one.

The buildings which were situated at the junction of the main street and the road from Peterboro were two storey, brick with wooden front.

E. M. Elliott's Reply to Mr. Finlay On Question of Road Policy

Dear Editor: Mr. Finlay once more comes to the rescue of the County of Peterboro in its road dilemma.

He says that there is a very small part of my former letter worth answering; yet from a short text he displays ability beyond the comprehension of his readers in drawing pictures in words of great ideals longingly desired by himself. He also prophesies the government spending thousands of dollars in moving pictures and lantern slides reproducing wealthy "motorists, financiers, and prospectors, etc.," sliding down the proposed county roads in their three ton autos at 25 miles an hour. No doubt amongst such lantern slides there will be wealthy motorists, financiers, prospectors, etc., going one way on the Crowe's Landing road from Norwood, and Mr. Finlay's auto trucks coming other way with raw material to make broom handles, at a speed of 25 miles per hour.

He complains of it taking one hour and a quarter now; also that two dealers had such a rough time on their wheels hauling wood over such road that it cost the people of the cities of Ontario $1.50 per cord more.

Wood is handled in the winter season by horses and sleighs and the only reason for such drawing on wheels last fall was the shortage of coal and the scarcity of help to get coal and wood on to the cars and boats (the only way it ever comes into the cities) save at war times.

$20,000 auto fees of all auto owners of the city and county of Peterboro expended on the main county roads, means something, and legislation can provide for the same as it does now, taxing the farmers 60 per cent., and 80 per cent., to get it.

Quebec is expending $10,000,000 on substantial farmers' roads (not 16 ton pavements); also auto fees are used for farmers' internal main roads.

Let Ontario do the same, and the counties having access to their own auto fees, under a system, could then with the 40 per cent. and 20 per cent. from the government, under direction of the counties, approved of by the government, construct and maintain such internal main roads, under the supervision of a competent superintendent.

In order to make, say, the road from Norwood to Crowe's Landing eligible for 25 miles an hour, you would have to expend at least $1500 per mile to construct it, which means $19,500, or $11,700 from the whole county and $7,800 of auto fees back from the government.

If all the farmers of the county of Peterboro pay over $11,800 to build the road from Norwood to Crowe's Landing, will Mr. Finlay guarantee the broom handles 25 per cent. cheaper to the people of the cities of Ontario.

Or will he again go into the wheel business so that his competition (as all competition without combine does) lower the price of wheels to those dealers drawing wood in Dummer so that they can supply the cities of Ontario with wood at $1.50 per cord cheaper.

The old saying in advising others: "Do not do as I do, but do as I say," but in any case fix up the road to Crowe's Landing or summer resort.

All are in favor of better roads and the County of Peterboro will be, and is now, in a position to enter any scheme that is in a manner of equality to all, and not a burden to farmers for the pleasure of wealthy motorists, financiers and prospectors.

The auto owners of the cities and towns are all desirous of having their auto fees expended on the main roads of the county where they do all of their country driving. Then why not have it; then also have the government assistance under an organized system?

We will get the proper terms yet, only have sand enough to ask, and persist until we do get it.

If Mr. Finlay would use his eloquence as earnestly along those lines as he pleads for the Crowe's Landing Road, great results might follow.

Yours respectfully,
ED. M. ELLIOTT.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

A. A. FOWLER

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having now served a two-year term on your Board of Education, receiving the highest vote on the occasion of my being selected for the honour, I again allow by name to come before you for re-election. My two years service, and particularly that of the last year when I was Chairman of the Property Committee, has given me the experience necessary to more intelligently attend to the important duties of the Board. Having accepted the honour of the ratepayers confidence, I gave the same care and attention to the affairs before the Board as I did to my own private business, and if again entrusted with the work will give the very best service of which I am capable. Knowing that greater School accommodation is becoming necessary especially in the South and West sections of the city, and in order to obtain all the knowledge possible, I visited, in company with Dr. Neal, and at our own expense, the Technical and Public Schools of London and Hamilton.

This Board will in the next two years, be obliged to dispose of considerable business, involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and my two years' experience on the Board, and long business training, should fit me especially for the duties at this crucial period.

I am an enthusiast along educational lines and want Peterborough to have the best Educational Advantages, and I consider that our equipment and Staff are of the high efficiency necessary to properly apply the magnificent System as outlined by the Provincial Authorities.

If elected it will always be my aim to guard the interest of the ratepayers and keep down expenses, endeavouring at all times to see that every dollar spent was properly applied. If my past Service, and future willingness are considered worthy of your support, you can show it on election day by endorsing my Candidature with your vote.

Yours faithfully,
A. A. FOWLER.

Mollie Is Dangerously Sympathetic

CHAPTER LXXII.

Brian really did not feel as injured as he had before, when Ruth had left him to attend to business for the firm. But, led on by Mollie's sympathetic questioning, he made it appear to her that he was thoroughly miserable and misunderstood. And Mollie, innocent of intent to wrong Ruth,—because she thought Ruth cared nothing for Brian, else she would not be so indifferent,—made Brian think of how much more comfortable it would have made things had Ruth been more like Mollie.

He did not go so far even in his thoughts as to wish he had married Mollie instead of Ruth, but he was dangerously near such a position. "It was so jolly to talk to Mollie. She always understood a fellow," he thought as he talked away, saying more than he really meant, as men so often do under the same, or similar, circumstances.

Mollie had reached over and laid her soft, warm hand over his when he told how dreadfully lonely it was to go home and sit alone all the evening after grinding in the office all day.

"It takes all the spunk out of a man," he had said. And Mollie had sagely agreed.

Perhaps, had Mollie known that Brian had done better since his marriage than before (but, even at that, was too indolent to do his best), she might not have been quite so sympathetic, not quite so tender in her manner toward him. But feeling him abused, she took a motherly sort of an attitude which men always enjoy.

"Poor Brian," she said more than once during the evening. And she thought "marry in haste, repent at leisure," but would not say it for fear of hurting Brian's feelings.

Yet Mollie still admired Ruth, still regarded her as quite wonderful in many ways. She often thought of the nice dinner she had given Claude Beckly and herself; of what an easy gracious hostess she was. She envied Ruth her poise, her easy manners even under trying circumstances. Mollie had realized that Claude Beckly's familiarity was obnoxious to Ruth and had taken him to task on the way home for his impudence in calling her by her first name.

"She is different from our crowd; she doesn't call people by their first names. The idea of you telling her to call me 'Mollie.' I was furious!" Then, "You should have been looking at her when you called her 'Ruth.'"

"Brian wasn't, if she was," Beckly had answered with a hint of sarcasm.

"Brian is one of us. She is not," Mollie had answered, and in that answer had expressed her feeling toward Brian. He was one of them. They understood each other, were contented and happy doing the same things, visiting the same places. While Ruth was of a different mould, although it is doubtful if Claude Beckly were able, like Mollie, to detect that it was also a finer mould.

"You don't understand, Claude. She has been brought up in the most conventional way. Things we do in the village, innocent as they are, would shock her terribly. She wouldn't understand us any better than you seem to understand her. You have queered our getting asked up there to dinner again, "I'll bet a nickel.

"I hope not!" he had returned in such a lugubrious tone that Mollie had laughed heartily and twitted him with caring only because of the "good feed" he might miss.

Mollie told Brian something of this conversation with Claude. She dwelt on the fact that Ruth did not understand any but the most conventional people. Saying nothing disparaging, rather the opposite, but emphasizing the feeling that Brian already had, that Ruth did not care for his friends.

"I don't see how one so conventional ever came to think she could go to business."

"She didn't, for some time," Brian answered, flushing a little. "But you see, Mollie, she had done a lot of such work in her aunt's big house, a wonderful home. Then she isn't a bit domestic. She hates housework," he confused the hard work of the house, as do many men, with domesticity. Yet many of the most domestic, home-loving women do not care to be in the kitchen all the time.

"I suppose she earns a big salary in that swell place."

"Oh, fair."

"She dresses beautifully."

"I don't believe she has bought a new dud since we have been married. She had clothes enough to last a lifetime."

"And I have two little, cheap dresses a year," Mollie wailed, pretending to be unhappy because of it and not caring at all.

"You are more attractive in them"—Brian stopped. He must say nothing disparaging of Ruth, "I just love to see you with your apron on, fussing around the studio," he finished, flushing, and at the same time patting her hand.

"Come and see me often, then, Brian," she said softly, "You will find me that way most of the time."

To Be Continued.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

NOBODY CAN TELL WHEN YOU DARKEN GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE TEA.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and atttractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. When ever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound,' you will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. It's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through you hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Big Gun For the Canal.

The great coast defense gun, with a bore sixteen inches in diameter, which was built a dozen years ago at the Watervliet arsenal, is no longer a "white elephant" at the Sandy Hook proving ground, to which it was sent for tests. The gun stood its trials satisfactorily, but because big guns such as this went out of favor and were displaced by high velocity twelve inch guns the big piece has lain for a decade at Sandy Hook. A disappearing gun carriage, however, is now being built to carry the piece, and it will form part of the battery of the defenses of the Panama canal.

Weird Story of a Glasgow Ship.

A remarkable story of the sea has just come to light. It is stated that two survivors of a vessel wrecked off Cape Horn found the wrecked Glasgow ship Marlborough in a cove, with twenty skeletons near by. The Marlborough left Lyttelton, New Zealand, in January, 1800, for London and was not heard of again. It was supposed that she sank in a collision with an iceberg. Her captain was W. Aird. Lloyd's Register shows that the Marlborough was an iron two deck sailing vessel 228 feet long, 35 feet wide and 21 feet deep.

High School Lunches.

High school pupils in eight American cities spend $1,500,000 each school year for lunches. The American Home Economics association estimates that this amount, spent for lunches outside of school, will buy only $1,000,000 calories in food value, whereas if spent in the school lunchroom, with its carefully supervised menu, it will purchase the equivalent of 178,000,000 calories.

SQUELCHING A NUISANCE.

Returned Tourist Got Paid Back In His Own Coin.

One general nuisance (a traveler who returned from his first European trip a few weeks ago and has been a bore to his friends ever since) was substantially squelched on a wet day recently.

"Isn't this weather the limit?" he inquired as he met a friend who was equally aware that the gamut of atmospheric change had been run in the preceding twenty-four hours. "Reminds me of the night I spent at a pretty little hotel on an Alpine lake."

"Well?" responded his friend, hoping it would be short.

"When I arrived the sun was just going down on a scene of unsurpassed beauty. The hotel was entirely surrounded by blooming gardens and green terraces leading down to a charming little lake colored by the last rays of the sun and prettily marked by the shadows cast by trees on shore. The next morning the landscape was buried under two feet of snow. Some change, eh?"

"Huh!" was the preliminary of the squelcher. "In Minnesota when I was a boy I recall a quicker change than that. Some of us boys were having a snow battle. One let fly a snowball at another. It scaled him to death!"—New York Tribune.

How to Handle Obstacles.

Uncle Joe Cannon was encouraging a young advertising man of Danville who had failed to land a national advertising contract.

"Don't take it so to heart," said Uncle Joe, patting the young man on the shoulder. "This is an obstacle in your upward climb. Well, there's only one way to treat an obstacle. "Treat it as a stepping stone."

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

A small bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair, soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—it costs but a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only cure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small stand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries it.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Charity's Reward

It Came at a Rummage Sale.

By MURIEL HAYNES.

"Dicky Ames, you're the most provoking"—

"But best brother that ever lived," concluded Richard Ames. "Look here, Maude. I'll give up my intention of taking Miss Hempsted out driving and devote the time instead to the noble cause of rummage, but only with the understanding that if I give up the society of the beautiful Miss Hempsted for sweet charity I am to pick my own company."

"The way you fired me at Nella Brewster's head the night of the church sociable was nothing short of indecent. If she doesn't want to speak to me again why should you deprive her of that satisfaction?"

"It's not a satisfaction," insisted Dick's sister. "Nella is as utterly miserable as you, and you know it."

"She didn't look that way this afternoon when I passed her skating with Ben Harkinson," commented Dick.

"She's game. She would smile if she had the toothache and happened to see you coming," persisted Maude. "She wouldn't let you see that she was hurt by the way you have acted, but—well, any woman can see that she is dreadfully hurt."

"So much hurt that she could not answer a letter of abject apology I sent her," suggested Dick.

"Did you really send it?" demanded Maude curiously. "She says she never got it and that you didn't even answer hers."

"Because there was none to answer," retorted Dick. "Come on, now! Let us get down to the church and to that charity which is its own reward."

Maude paused uncertainly. It was the first time that Dick had spoken freely about his quarrel with Nella Brewster, and she wanted to sound the trouble to its greatest depths. But here was Dick drawing off just as she had seemed about to reach the bottom.

That the trouble had been trivial at the start she knew, and with two persons like her brother and Nella it was hard to tell where the trouble might end, but the chances were that they would drift farther and farther apart.

Meekly she slipped into her wraps and prepared for the walk to the church, where a rummage sale for the poor was being prepared.

Old clothes were pouring in to be sold to the needy for whatever their slender purses could afford. When Maude led Dick into the Sunday school room he whistled in surprise at the stacks of clothing.

"I didn't know that there were so many old clothes in town," he declared wonderingly, and one of the workers directed him briskly toward one of the piles.

"This is only the first lot," she said. "These are the men's and boys' clothes. Will you help get those straightened out? We want them sorted roughly by sizes."

Dick followed the example of the other men in the room and slipped off his coat before he attacked the pile of garments.

Here were clothes of all sizes and weights, and as he picked up the first garment one of the men on the other side called to him.

"Better go through all the pockets first. I found a dollar bill in a vest awhile ago, and Cheevers did better than that. He found two."

"We should leave them in the clothing," suggested Dick. "Perhaps the donors put them there on purpose."

"They forgot them," declared the other man as he turned to lay a coat on its proper heap, and Dick again bent to his task.

The pile of clothing seemed formidable, but with half a dozen men working briskly they had disposed of the entire lot before the mounds of feminine wear were half sorted.

"They are stopping all the time to talk about styles," explained Cheevers.

"The moment they get a dress that is out of the ordinary they all stop to see how it's made."

"I heard Gracie Chester say that at last she could be certain that Mrs. Pomeroy's dress wasn't silk lined," answered Dick, with a chuckle.

"By the way," went on Cheevers, "here's something I found in the overcoat of the little darkey that the Brewsters brought up from the south with them last winter. Looks as though Alexander had been holding out some letters on you."

He passed over a thin package of letters, and Dick gasped. The envelopes were grimy and worn, but he could see that they were some letters from himself that never had been delivered and others from Nella that had shared the same fate.

He recognized even the letter in which he had sought to win forgiveness for all he had said during their last quarrel—a quarrel which had started over some of her letters which he now held in his hand for the first time.

There was a bulky one from Nella that he opened first, and his heart glowed as he realized that without waiting for him to speak Nella had written her own letter of forgiveness.

It was clear now. Alexander was worse than forgetful. He could not forget because he never seemed to know anything.

The letters that were handed him he failed to deliver and then lied out of it when he was taxed. Now Nella was angry because Dick had not answered her gracious little note, and he could not blame her when he knew that she never had received any of his more recent letters.

He slipped the package into his pocket with a word of thanks to Cheevers, and then he left the turmoil of the rummage sale to look for Nella.

He met her just leaving her home, and as he came up the walk she regarded him curiously.

"I came to deliver my letters in person and to make certain of their delivery," announced Dick. "Can you give me a few minutes?"

Nella made no move to re-enter the house, and Dick was too wise to press the point.

"I was helping Maude at the rummage sale," he explained. "Cheevers found these letters in Alexander's old overcoat. I might explain that when I left my letter—this thick one—Alexander was just going out, and he had his overcoat on when he came to the door, but he promised to deliver it to you at once. His ideas of delivery seem to be to stuff things in his pocket and forget all about them."

Nella started as she recognized her own letters, and hastily she glanced over some of them. She saw in a moment what Dick had already realized, and her lips trembled as she recalled the misery she had suffered since the quarrel.

She loved Dick very dearly, even well enough to offer forgiveness when she had felt that he was in the wrong, and to have him make no reply to the kindly letter had hurt both heart and pride.

Now she could see that Dick had promptly cancelled his error and that all the suffering had been caused by one small and very black youngster, who had been brought home from the south because he had seemed so "cute."

"I am afraid that Alexander will never make a messenger for Cupid," said Nella softly. "I am so sorry, Dick, that we trusted too much to him, but I had no idea that he was so careless. Think of the trouble that he has caused us both! Will you come in and"—

"Make up?" asked Dick promptly. "To be sure I will and only too glad to do it."

She led the way into the house, and as the great hall door swung shut behind them he caught her in his arms and covered her face with kisses. A low chuckle from the far end of the hall disturbed them, and without a word Dick darted down into the shadows.

There followed wild yells and the sound of strange expletives. Dick came back flushed, but smiling.

"I shook him some," he explained, "for both you and me. Wasn't it just like Alexander to be hanging around?"

"He will be sent home," declared Nella. "We cannot trust him again. You were a dear, Dick, that you didn't kill him."

"I wanted to," admitted Dick; "but, then, what's the use? I've got you again, and all because I helped Maude at the rummage sale. She said that charity, like virtue, was its own reward, but I didn't realize the high premium I paid."

FITZ IS STILL WAITING.

Oh, where is Fitzhugh Cecil Gray,
A nineteen thirteen graduate
Who read upon commencement day
A thesis that was simply great?
He told about success in life
And how to win it right offhand.
He solved financial problems grave
And whooped it up to beat the band.
He juggled mighty fortunes in
The paper that he read that night.
He labeled "Poverty a Sin"
And set the whole blamed world aright.
You ask where Fitzhugh is right now?
He's holding down a job that's—well,
He's waiting table, so they say,
For beans in some resort hotel.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexion; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

12. Verses 8-10. What significance is there to the poor and to the toiling masses that Jesus was born in a stable and cradled in a manger?

RARE SLEEPING PALM.

One That Was Brought Here From the South Sea Islands.

A specimen of the rare sleeping palm has been found in Golden Gate park, probably the only one in the United States. Curator Barron of the park museum discovered it as he was walking in the park with his young son.

The tree, which was brought to this country forty years ago by a famous Australian botanist, William Robinson, gives out a peculiar aromatic odor. Barron smelled the exotic fragrance and discovered the tree, whose upper branches were laden with a beautiful rainbow hued flower giving forth a heavy perfume.

Around the base of the tree were the dead bodies of small animals and birds. Barron soon felt drowsiness stealing over him, his son complaining of the same feeling.

It was found that the tree, which had originally been brought from one of the south sea islands, belonged to the species Cocineae somnambulae, or sleeping palm, which blooms only once in fifty years and the flowers of which were formerly used as a drug by the islanders.

Samples of the flowers have been sent to the medical department of the University of California, where a test will be made to discover the source of their peculiar properties.—Exchange.

HELPING CHICAGO GIRLS.

Special Court, With a Woman Judge, For Poorly Paid Workers.

The working girl of Chicago is to have a special court, which is to be of the nature of an employment bureau and provide a place where a girl who is out of money or employment may come and tell her troubles to a woman judge, who will help her get work, put her among people who will be her friends and show her that the city is not the lonesome place she may have thought it.

All the concerns of the city which employ girls are asked to co-operate with Judge Hopkins, who will preside over the court in bettering conditions of girls who have become discouraged and are about to give up the struggle as hopeless.

"This is the plan," said Judge Hopkins: "Any girl in Chicago who is dissatisfied with the wages paid her—that is, if they are below $8 or $10—is asked to report her case to this court, either to Miss Louise Towsey, adult probation officer; myself or one of the women connected with this court. In this way we will be able to give the girl a new start. She will not only be given a new job, but she will find the women of this court the best friends she could find anywhere in Chicago, who will look after her and keep her from becoming lonesome."

A Curious Turkish Rug.

Quite an odd interpretation of the directions sent to a Turkish rug manufacturer has resulted in a rug the value of which is enhanced about $1,000 as a curiosity. The plans for making the rug were drawn here and sent over to the maker, who has copied everything with painstaking fidelity. The rug is now in this city and is a beautiful and expensive thing in itself, but authorities say that it is worth over here the full $1,000 more than the order price. The oddity is that the maker has woven English words into the design wherever they were to be found on the plan sent to him. So that in one corner one may read, "Put blue here." In another part, "Put yellow here," or "Put green here."—Philadelphia Record.

Training John.

A California woman in training a new Chinese servant to wait on the door had her daughter ring the bell and present her card. The next afternoon a friend called and handed her card to the Celestial, who pulled out of his sleeve the card the daughter of the house had presented the afternoon before and carefully compared the two. "Tickee no matchee!" he exclaimed, handing back the visitor's card. "No can come in!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Way of Modern Fathers.

"Yes, before papa would consent to my marrying George he insisted on looking up his past life."

"Mercy! That was risky."

"But he didn't go very far. He stopped just as he found that George was the only nephew of three rich uncles."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE PRELIMINARIES ARE STILL UNDER WAY

Important Conference Was Held This Morning—Amicable Settlement in Prospect.

QUESTIONS DISCUSSED

By Robert J. Bender.
(United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 27.— Great strides toward an amicable settlement of the highly important peace preliminaries were made to-day when President Wilson, Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour conferred at Buckingham Palace.

This was the distinct understanding at the conclusion of the conversation. President Wilson met the British leader in his apartment. The session lasted an hour and a half.

The League of Nations, freedom of the seas, and possibly the Russian situation, were known to have been scheduled for discussion.

As the President and British Ministers came down the steps of the Palace shortly after noon they were in high good humour. They departed at once for Downing street, where they lunched with the British statesmen and Ambassador Davis.

During the conference a large crowd stood outside in the rain. Among them was Viscount Grey. President Wilson unveiled a portrait of George Washington in Downing street offices after luncheon. Mrs. Wilson was the guest of Lady Reading at a luncheon. Among other guests were Mrs. Lloyd George, Mrs. Asquith and Mrs. Davis.

Day Was Dark.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 27.— Premier Lloyd George, accompanied by Sir Maurice Hankey, Secretary to the Committee on Imperial Defence, arrived at Buckingham Palace at 10.30 o'clock this morning for a conference with President Wilson. The day was dark and rainy, but a big crowd had arrived before the Premier made his appearance.

Mr. Wilson was astir early this morning and was busy with his secretary. There were a number of American callers and the Duke of Connaught and Sir Richard Herschell visited the Palace before the arrival of the Premier. A. J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, walked over from the Foreign Office to attend the conference between Mr. Lloyd George and the President.

MAY GO TO ITALY.

President Wilson approached the conference with the greatest confidence that a thorough understanding on basic principles of peace settlement would be reached. The length of his stay in England will be determined exactly by the progress made in this direction.

He is expected to make the frankest exposition of his views in his "conversations" with the British public, particularly in his speech at Manchester, the great industrial centre of the country. That the world need expect no departure from the formula he has drawn up was indicated in his speech to the American soldiers on Wednesday.

The President, it became known to-day, expects to carry out his deferred plan for visiting the battle zone as soon as possible. He may also go to Italy.

GREATER ROUMANIA URGED BY COMMITTEE IN PARIS

PARIS—The creation of a greater Roumania, capable, with the co-operation of her Balkan allies, of commanding the respect of Germanic races, was advocated last night at a meeting of the Paris Committee of Roumanians of Transylvania, Bukowina and Banat.

In the resolutions adopted the close relations between the Roumanians and French were emphasized. Attention was called to the fact that the Roumanian National Council, representing the Transylvanian, Banat, Marmaros and other regions, had proclaimed the independence of thtse former Hungarian districts and declared for their union with the Kingdom of Roumania.

DRASTIC MEASURES WILL BE ADOPTED

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 27.—The British Admiralty is prepared to take drastic measures against the propagation of Bolshevism in that part of the German fleet remaining in German hands. Sinking of vessels displaying the red flag and execution of crews infected with Bolshevism is threatened.

Personal Greeting

London Press Comments on President Wilson's Reception in Metropolis.

LONDON, Dec .27.—(By Associated Press.)— London's morning newspapers, having suspended publication since Tuesday for the Christmas holiday, had to find space to-day for three days' news from the world. Nevertheless, by far the largest part of every paper is given over to President Wilson's visit, other news being condensed. Throughout, descriptive articles, as well as editorials, gratification is expressed over Mr. Wilson's presence, and the people's joyous welcome, which is declared to have been the warmest tribute to a distinguished visitor that London has ever known.

There is a strain of sympathetic personal greeting running through all the stories, and writers regard the popular acclamations of the President as being animated by the same spirit.

St. John's Sunday School Teachers and Scholars

St. John's Sunday School teachers and scholars with the boys and girls from the "Children's Shelter" as guests of honour, spent a royal time inthe school last night in keeping with their annual Christmas Festival. The C.W.A. under the direction of Mrs. Seals, president, provided a substantial tea to which full justice was done. Lantern slides, grave and gay, were shown and a fine programme given by the choir boys, Miss Fenwick, Miss Robertson and Mr. Ward. The Rev. Canon Davidson distributed the prizes for regular attendance at church and school, and added words of kindly encouragement to all. The choir boys sprung a pleasing surprise on their choirmaster, Mr. R. J. Devey, when one of the senior boys, Fraser Watson, read the following address:

Dear. Mr. Devey:—

We, the choir boys of Saint John's Church, have great pleasure in presenting you with this small token in appreciation of past favours, and many kindnesses towards us. We hope that the many times you have occasion to use it may recall to your memory the choir boys of Saint John's Church.

Wishing you a very prosperous New Year, we remain,

The Choir Boys of St. John's Church.

The address and present, a handsome smoking set, were suitably acknowledged by Mr. Devey, who heartily thanked the choir boys for their kindly thought as well as for the present.

The Bystanders Were Shot Down

Former Emperor's Palace in Berlin is Defended by Soldiers and Sailors Against Ebert Troops.

By Frank J. Taylor.
(United Press.)

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Heavy casualties were suffered by curious bystanders who gathered to witness the attack on the Royal Palace, where mutinous sailors defended themselves against government troops.

A great number of sailors and soldiers also were killed or wounded.

A battery of 77. millimetre field pieces was brought up by the soldiers during the night and artillery fire directed at the palace at intervals throughout the day. Despite the close range many of the shells went wild and damaged other buildings. Flying debris continued and injured civilians, as some of the shells exploded at a considerable distance from the target. The Royal Palace itself was shattered badly.

Soldiers stormed and captured portions of the Palace following the bombardment, but were unable to penetrate the Royal stables, in which the sailors were firmly entrenched.

The crowd seemed to be divided in its sympathies, but was unanimous in its enjoyment of the spectacle of the former Kaiser's abode crumbling before artillery fire.

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS

Dr. Lacy takes this opportunity of wishing his friends and patrons a very happy Christmas and a bright and prosperous new year, also for making his past year the most successful in business.

Solution of the Russian Problem

Prince Lvoff Makes Some Interesting Disclosures—Desires Immediate Allied Intervention.

FORCES REQUIRED

(By Henry Wood, United Press.)

PARIS, December 27. — "The only solution of the Russian problem is immediate allied intervention." Prince Lvoff, the first Russian Premier after the revolution, declared in an interview with the United Press to-day.

He suggested that the United States and Japan should furnish the armies.

"I appreciate fully the disinclination of the allied peoples, after four years of war, to intervene in far-away Russia, but the allies must undertake that for unless the Bolsheviks are conquered the insidious propaganda they are spreading throughout the world inevitably will again menace the world's peace.

"Only we who have just come from Russia realize the extent of the danger, which the allies and neutrals do not yet appreciate.

"The quicker the allies intervene, the better. Two hundred thousand would be sufficient now to put down the Bolsheviks, while by spring a vastly larger force would be required.

EXISTING FORCES.

"Should the allies feel that a general intervention is impossible on account of the sacrifices that they have already made they might authorize America and Japan, whose military strength has not been exhausted like the others, to undertake the work. The Japanese forces already in Russia number sixty thousand; the Americans have twelve thousand while the French and the British contingents are smaller. The immediate increase of these forces to 200,000, would permit the establishment of a representative government and Russia's participation in peace conference before it closes.

"With a local government established and growing at Archangel and Omsk, and with separate states in Ukrainia, Poland and Finland, the Bolsheviks hold only the interior. But it is imperative to eject them from Petrograd and Moscow. This could be accomplished easily by landing a large allied force at Reval, only 260 kilometers (161 1-2 miles) form Petrograd.

MUST BE SETTLED.

Once the Bolsheviks are put down, the eventual government unquestionably would be Republican. The Bolsheviks no doubt would attempt a monarchial reaction, but we could then defeat them.

"The peace conference will be unable to re-establish and insure world peace without settling the Russian problem, while every day's delay in intervention renders the employment of a greater force eventually more apparent.'

Prince Lvoff heads a delegation of fifteen Russian officials who are conferring with the allied representatives in an effort to obtain aid in overcoming the Bolsheviks. It includes former Premier Kokovtzoff, vice-Governor Korf, of Finland; M. Vitrouboff, leader of the Zemstov; M. De Giers, Ambassador to Italy, M. Bakhmetieff, Ambassador to the United States; M. Stakhevitch, ambassador to Spain, and M. Maklakoff, ambassador to France.

PETERBORO SOLDIERS RETURNING

Advices received this morning at the office of Ald. F. H. Dobbin, states that the steamer "Corsicon," arrived at St. John on the 25th, Christmas Day, and that Sapper Edey left the same day for Toronto. It is stated that the soldier is from Peterborough.

Also that another boat arrived at Halifax on Christmas Day, but that the boat had been quarantined, and the exact time of departure of the men from Halifax could not be determined. Those from Peterborough on the steamer included, Pte. J. A. Rousselle, Pte. A. P. Hardman, and Pte. H. Wilford.

Lieut. David Melton, who enlisted with the 93rd Battalion as a private and went overseas subsequently made a sergeant in the pay office, and word has just been received that he has secured his commission and is now a lieutenant in the Pay and Records Office in France. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs George Melton, Sherbrooke Street, City.

WILL DISCUSS ISSUES OF MOST VITAL IMPORTANCE

Premier Lloyd George Was Present at the Buckingham Palace Conference.

By Robert J. Bender.
(United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 27.— Issues of the most vital importance to the peace settlement hinged upon President Wilson's conference with Premier Lloyd George at Buckingham Palace this morning.

It was the first meeting of the leaders of the two great English-speaking nations to talk business. The League of Nations, freedom of the seas and possibly the Russian situation, were certain to be discussed.

In addition many minor details were expected to enter the conversation, which was to last until noon.

Those Present.

After luncheon with a number of British officials and political leaders in Downing street, the President was to continue the conference with Lloyd George and probably other members of the War Cabinet. Those at luncheon will include Lloyd George, Herbert Asquith, former Premier and leader of the Opposition; Foreign Secretary Balfour; Chancellor Bonar Law; Arthur Henderson and William Adamson, Labour leaders; Lord Reading, Ambassador to the United States; Viscount Grey, former Foreign Secretary; the Marquis of Crewe, Curzon, Viscount Bryce, Viscount Mortri, and John W. Davis, American Ambassador to Great Britain.

The President will meet other members of the War Cabinet at the State dinner to-night, following his return to Paris, the final decision in this regard depending upon his conferences in London. He expressed the conviction that the people of France are in complete sympathy with his peace ideas, and he is anxious to come in contact with the Italian people to determine at first hand how they stand.

Among Those Present.

The company invited to meet President Wilson for luncheon arranged to be held to-day at Premier Lloyd George's residence, comprised a small gathering of elder statesmen, personnel including leaders in the last and present government, and heads of the three of the political parties, Conservative, Liberal and Labour.

The luncheon gave occasion for the first visit by former-Premier Asquith to the Premier's official residence since the Liberal leader resigned his office. Viscount Morley, another of the party, retired from the Asquith cabinet at the beginning of the war on account of his opposition to Great Britain's participation in the struggle. Viscount Grey, still another of those invited, has been living almost in retirement since he left the cabinet. He is one of the strongest advocates of a league of nations. Arthur Henderson, Labour leader, also guest, is likewise a supporter of the idea of a league of nations.

Toronto Labor Man Here Monday Night

For Open Meeting in the Interests of the Candidates of the Trades and Labour Council—Mr. Allan Studholme Unable to Come.

ORGANIZATION COMPLETED

For their public meeting on Monday night next the Trades and Labour Council are communicating with prominent Labour leaders in Toronto to secure a good speaker. Mr. A. L. Bolwell, of the committee in charge of organizing for the local municipal campaign, telephoned to Mr. Allan Studholme, ex-M.P.P., at noon to-day, but learned that he was just recovering from an attack of influenza and would be unwell to come to Peterborough.

The Toronto Labour men have their hands full with the Queen City elections, but it is practically assured that they will spare one of their best men for the local cause.

The meeting will be held in the Trades and Labour Hall, George street, and all workingmen and other citizens are invited to be present.

Meeting Last Night.

The Organization Committee held a good meeting last night. Committees are at work canvassing in all the wards, the shops and factories are in capable hands, the advertising arrangements have been worked out, and everything is promising according to reports. A great deal of effective work is planned for the week-end, and early next week, and the public meeting is expected to give a fillip to the efforts of the workers.

The Labour Hall and its adjoining rooms are open every night, and those who desire to assist in the campaign will find a warm reception and plenty of work.

THE LABOUR BUREAUS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—The co-operative system of Labour Bureaus arranged for by the Federal and Provincial authorities, will, it is stated, be pretty well established throughout the Dominion by the New Year. A canvass is being made of the lumbering and mining industries to ascertain the approximate number of men who can be absorbed by these industries. Thomas Molloy, of the Saskatchewan Labour Department, has been loaned to the Dominion government for the purpose of organizing the bureaus of the west.

Ex-Czar Is Still Alive?

High Authority Says That Nicky is in a Neutral Country—Reported Murder of Czar Was Manufactured By Bolsheviki.

Canadian Press:

WARSAW, Dec. 27.— There is some doubt that the Czar and his entire family are alive. I am positive of this," was the declaration made to a correspondent to-day by Michael De Tchihatchof, a nephew of General Skoropadski, and who has just escaped from the Ukraine after a recent trip to Petrograd, Dvinsk, Vilna and Rovno.

"I cannot reveal where the Czar is, because he does not wish it," he added. "He does not care to be bothered, and he wants to be left alone. His whereabouts is known to an Allied government. It is in a neutral country. Accounts of his murder at Ekaterinburg were manufactured by Trotsky and Lenine for propaganda purposes."

Great Britain is Willing to Have Peace Congress Organize League of Nations

DENIES EXISTENCE OF SECRET TREATIES.

(Special to the Examiner.)

PARIS, December 27. — Aristide Briand, the former Premier, denied in the Chamber of Deputies to-day that any secret treaties had been signed by the allies in 1916. He said the only agreements reached then were to be publicly ratified at the peace conference.

Lord Robert Cecil Made This Clear In An Interview With the United Press.

NECESSARY FEATURES

By Lowell Mellett.
(United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 27. —Great Britain not only is willing, but is determined that the Peace Congress shall organize a permanent League of Nations before its adjournment.

Lord Robert Cecil, foremost British authority on this subject, made this clear in an interview with the United Press to-day.

Cecil said he had never entertained any notion of the peace delegates simply giving the League of Nations idea their blessing and leaving the details to be worked out in the future. On the contrary, he wants no opening left for possible failure of the league to materialize.

Investigation in government circles reveals that Cecil is speaking in British government's mind, as well as his own.

Horrors of War.

"Now we know the horror of war," he said. "A year from now the old glamour may return. We must guard against this possibility."

Cecil gave the following provisions as the necessary foundations of the league:

First—A permanent secretariat.

Second—A fixed place of meeting.

Third—Periodical meetings. These meetings must include as working members, men really entitled to speak for the people of their countries, such as Premiers and Foreign Ministers, or their equivalent. Meetings must be held at least once a year.

Fourth—It is essential that no war shall be possible until it is discussed either at a periodical meeting or at a meeting especially called for the purpose.

Necessary Features.

"These are vital things," Cecil said. "Of course, as irrecently outlined, the league must have non-contentious as well as contentious features. It must have broader purposes than merely prevention of wars. It must have administrative powers as well as the authority to settle disputes."

It is impossible yet to get the closely guarded British official views of freedom of the seas.

Other important principles of the peace settlement are freely discussed, however. In regard to conscription, a high government official suggested to the United Press that the fact that Germany's millions of trained men are still available, render abolition of conscription in other European countries more difficult than at first appeared.

The official design attributed to prepare government's case on disarmament pointed out that it is necessary to devise a system to prevent fabrication of submarine and airplane parts in factories manufacturing peace time products.

"It all involves the necessity for accepting Germany's word," he said. "If a way can be found to make her word good, the problem will be solved. Otherwise the difficulties of preventing trickery are almost insuperable."

Indemnities are also a serious issue. It is known that President Wilson adheres to his determinations to keep to th armistice agreement. Since the recent elections little has been heard there in regard to compelling Germany to pay the whole cost of the war.

Lakefield Loss Will Be Heavy

Town Records Were Lost—Municipal Hall Completely Destroyed.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 27.—Twenty-five thousand dollars is the estimated loss sustained by Lakefield as a result of the fire which early this morning completely destroyed the Town Hall together with the contents. Included in the one building which was a two-storey brick structure, was the municipal clerk's office together with the town records, such as the tax rolls, etc., the public library, the fire department equipment, the gaol, the band instruments and a miscellaneous quantity of equipment that usually finds is way into a town hall of this character. Only a small portion of the loss is covered by insurance as the following amounts would indicate:

Insurance on building	$3,200
Insurance on contents	300
Insurance on library	900
Insurance on piano	200

Records Lost.

The tax roll, assessment records and other municipal documents, together with the old records of the village from its inception, were lost. Other losses are enumerated as follows:

St. John's Church lost the dishes and tables used in connection with an entertainment held in the building last night.

The Soldiers' Comfort Club lost one hundred pairs of socks and a large quantity of wool.

Mr. George Charlton, who had been repairing the fire engine lost one hundred and seventy-five dollars' worth of tools.

Mr. W. M. Graham lost a cabinet Victrola valued at $75, which he had loaned to the party of the previous evening.

Mr. Samuel Charlton lost a quantity of tables and chairs, which were loaned for the Lakefield Curling Club dances scheduled for this winter.

Origin Unknown.

The hall was built in 1889 and was a solid brick structure 40 x 60 feet. While considerable doubt exists as to the origin of the fire it is believed to have been in some way attributable to the heating plant. In connection with the entertainment of last evening a small stove had been used to prepare coffee, but the ladies in charge are a unit in declaring that the fire was completely out before they left the building. The Town Hall was never locked and Lakefield did not enjoy the luxury of a night watchman.

As stated on page one of this issue the fire was first discovered about four-thirty o'clock this morning, although it had been raging some time previous to that. It burned fiercely all morning until some of the walls fell in and partly smothered it. The snow on the roofs of adjoining buildings helped to keep the fire from spreading.

The burning of a cable line near the fire put the telephone service on the Smith Township side of the canal out of business this morning.

There will be a special general meeting of the Peterborough Branch Great War Veterans Association on Monday night, December 30 at headquarters. Every member is urged to be present as very important business in connection with the municipal elections will be taken up. 3T

PULLING THE STRINGS

There is rather a Gilbert and Sullivan tinge to the story of the methods of economy adopted in the Peterboro Post office, which is referred to as a matter of news in another column. The spectacle of a dignified post master carefully salving the small pieces of twine that from time to time find their way to the foor of the local mail dispensary, must be regarded as the dawn of a new era in government management. Efficiency must rule and so these fragments of string must not be wasted. There are bundles to be tied up, especially during the Christmas rush, and why buy twine when there are small ends of string available. It is unfortunate that this new spirit of economy which has seized the local head of the department could not have been imparted to the staff. it is even more unfortunate that the employees so far from grasping the historical significance of a postmaster saving a few cents worth of twine, declined it is alleged to use the salvaged string and the distribution of the mails was held up. But above all it was still more unfortunate, from an economic standpoint that the employees should have felt it necssary to call upon the Federal member with a story of the cord that had resulted in discord. Because the representative for West Peterboro rather upset the string saving schednle by buying it is said $6 worth of twine and pulling the department for the same A balance sheet of the new efficiency scheme shows on the credit side a few balls of tied-together twine while the debit entries include some dissatisfied employees, a threatened delay in the mail and $6 worth of string per the Federal member. The net result can hardly be considered as a triumph for the new method. It is a wonder that the postmaster has not considered the practicability of tying up bundles of mail with some of the red tape with which the department is clogged.

A DEFINITE PROPOSAL

At last there is a definite pronosal in connection with the matter of providing suitable headquarters for Peterboro's returned soldiers. There has been plenty of talk, newspaper and otherwise, about the city's duty to the men who have fought overseas but it has remained for Ald. J. H. Dobbin to come through with a straight forward declaration of policy. No one in Peterboro knows more about Peterboro's soldiers than Ald Dobbin. His duties in connection with the Patriotic Fund and the Soldier's Aid Commission have thrown him into contact with the majority of the city's fighting men and with their families. Ald. Dobbin, with his knowledge of the problems with which the returned men have to deal, unhesitatingly announces himself in favour of providing our soldiers with permanent headquarters, with a roof over their heads, as he expresses in a letter to the Examiner. They have earned this and need it, he says and he suggests that the sum of $10,000 be placed in next year's estimate to provide quarters for the men who fought. The proposal is welcomed as a sign that action is substituted for talk and eclaredinv Dobbin's remarks will lead to a helpful discussion along practical lines. The people of Peterboro are prepared to do handsomely by the returned soldier and perhaps may not be of the opinion that $10,000 is enough for the purpose intended, but the fact remains that Ald Dobbin's suggestion is the first tangible plan that has been placed before the public.

Other Aldermanic candidates would do well to follow the example of Ald. Dobbin and state definitely just where they stand on this important question. He has taken a frank, open position in the matter and the opinion of other aspirants for office would be of much interest.

The Health Association is worthy of every support. The function in its aid at the Empress Hotel to-night should be one of the biggest events of the season.

EMPLOYMENT FOR SOLDIERS.

It is a fact, as Ald. Dobbin pointed out in his letter to The Examiner last evening, that the candidates for aldermanic honours were limited to five minute addresses at Monday's public meeting, and this limitation may have prevented some of the candidates from referring to the question of the returned soldiers. The extreme importance of the question, however, should have induced the speakers to devote a portion of their time to discussing the matter, and as it was a number of those who addressed the meeting only spoke for a couple of minutes, and sat down without a word about the returned men.

The Examiner felt that the question of finding employment for the ex-service men, as they come back, is one of the biggest problems with which the City Council will have to deal. The matter of permanent quarters for the veterans is of course a matter that should be dealt with at once, but even more important at the present moment is the question of employment.

The Examiner's claim that this is a municipal responsibility is shared by the official organ of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, the Canadian Municipal Journal, which says:

Now that the war is over, many peace problems must be faced, and two—the repatriation of our soldiers and the re-employment of munition workers—demand immediate attention. What is more, both problems are essentially municipal in character and as such it becomes the duty of each local council to take action, otherwise the conditions of 1915, when unemployment was so general, with all the attendant suffering, that the mayors from all over Canada gathered at Ottawa, and urged the Dominion Government to start public works, will be repeated. At that time the situation was saved by the munition orders and recruiting, but thanks to the prowess of our troops there is no longer any necessity for either of these two expedients, and the question comes—what is to be done to find employment for disbanded soldiers and out-of-works during the transition period? That is the period necessary for the changing of war to peace industries, or during the next twelve months, and in particular during the winter.

To our mind the only way the problem of unemployment can be solved is in the carrying on of public works—federal, provincial and municipal—even if it means greater cost to the country, but which in the long run would be infinitely cheaper than the communities having to take care of unemployed families, which will actually be the case if nothing is done. In this matter we welcome the action of the Dominion government in the appointment of a Repatriation and Employment committee, made up of certain members of the Cabinet who have appointed as Director Mr. J. H. Daly, of Ottawa—a happy combination of the business and social doctor. The propaganda of the Committee is in reality a "get-together" movement, and if the plans work out as scheduled, good results should accrue. All the national associations have been invited to co-operate in the work of repatriation, but in particular have the municipal councils, through the Union of Canadian Municipalities, the executive of which have been asked to select four representatives. The delegates selected, and who have expressed their willingness to serve, are the mayors of Toronto and Ottawa, and the mayor of a western city—to be yet selected—and Mr. W. D. Lighthall, K. C., the Hon. Secretary of the Union. In addition to the above gentlemen, Mr. Harry Bragg, of this Journal, has been appointed as special municipal representative on the staff of the Director of Repatriation. The principal work of the municipal representatives will be in bringing about the closest co-operation between the municipal councils and the repatriation committee, especially in pushing forward local public works, etc., in order to find all the employment possible for local out-of-works. In the work of Repatriation and Employment, then, the municipal councils have a great responsibility and opportunity. Because of the Mayors and Aldermen being in daily contact with the citizens, they are in the best position to know local conditions, and as such are specially qualified to know the baneful influence of general unemployment on the life of their respective communities, and will naturally do all in their power to fight against it. It is obvious, then, that any scheme to create employment during the winter months in particular, will have the hearty support of all local councils.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Across the line there is an agitation to alow the American soldiers who fought in France to retain their shrapnel helmets as souveniors of the war. A similar privilege might be granted Canadian fighting men. They are coming back to Canada now with full kit, and the helmets are hardy worth salving. Why not give them to the men who wore them in France?

How many candidates have publicly stated wheer they stand on the question of providing bathing facilities for Peterborough. The ratepayers would appreciate frankness in answering this question.

The field for the Board of Education, although small, is of good quality—so good indeed that it is a matter for regret that all the candidates cannot be elected.

The Examiner, as is customary during an election campaign, has received a number of letters dealing with candidates and issues. Those which are not signed by the writer will not be published.

As Candidate for Alderman

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having had your confidence for the past five years as a member of your City Council, I again ask your approval.

I have, in looking after your interests, tried to be useful, helpful and practical. Such details as have been entrusted to my care have been attended to efficiently and carefully.

There has been little opportunity in the past four war years for what is termed "progressive enterprise" for the city. If the coming term affords such you will not find me lacking in furthering that which is best for both your interest and that of the municipality. I can only ask you to take my past record as an assurance for the future.

I believe that thoroughness of attention to detail in our city administration is the only sure way to success. All else is but a flash in the pan. We must grow as we grow. Careful management, reasonable economy, faithful service are the basis of your municipal progress. I will, if elected, work earnestly for all.

Very respectfully,

F. H. DOBBIN

BOARD of ALDERMEN

Ald. A. A. McINTYRE

As a candidate for re-election to the City Council for 1919 I respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The coming year will be marked by a number of outstanding questions of grave importance that will have to be dealt with my the incoming Council. These include the proposed overhead bridge on Hunter street, the sewage disposal plant, the two-platoon system for the firemen, and also the question of a suitable war memorial and better and more adequate attention to the many problems connected with the soldiers who are already home and those who will return in the future.

This year it will be necessary for the electors to mark their ballots for at least four aldermen and not more than ten. I hope to be favoured with one of these votes and if elected will give the same impartial and undivided attention to civic affairs that has characterized by efforts in the past. If you vote for less than four aldermen the ballot will be counted as a spoiled ballot, and if you vote for more than ten the same conditions will apply.

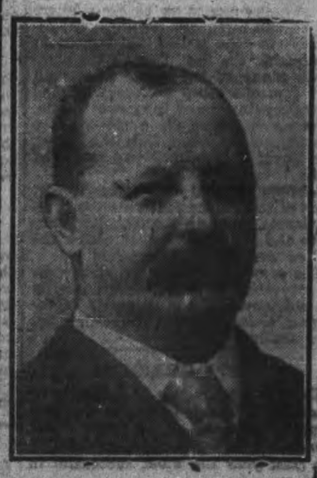
BOARD of ALDERMEN

To the Municipal Electors

Of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—



In compliance with the urgeht request of numerous friends I have consented to stand for election as Alderman for the city for 1919.

Having the benefit of several years' experience in the City Council and occupied important positions such as Chairman of the Board of Works and other influential committees, I would endeavour, if elected, to give my best services in assisting to conduct our civic affairs in a prudent, economical, and business-like manner.

I, as well as every other intelligent ratepayer, fully realize the fact that the city is faced with large responsibilities during 1919. Anything I can do, therefore, to serve the electorate at this critical period will be cheerfully undertaken to the best of my ability.

Soliciting your support and influence, and hoping the very best men may be elected for the Board of Aldermen for 1919, permit me to wish one and all the compliments of the season.

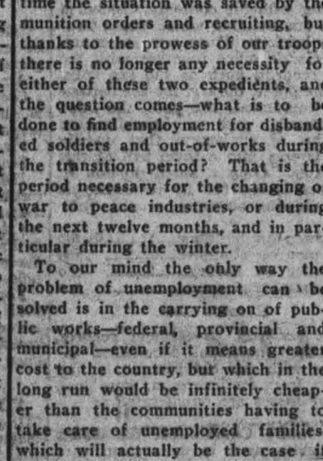
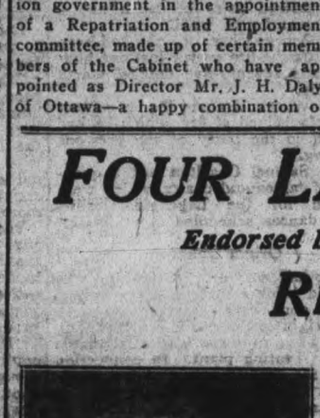
FOUR LABOR CANDIDATES

Endorsed by the G.W.V.A. and Trades' Council

REMEMBER THESE!



ALEXANDER MURRAY, (Machinists' Union.)



ROBERT MORRISON, (Electrician.)

TO THE ELECTORS:

Realizing that Labor is the foundation of all municipal and national prosperity, and that the wage-earners are vitally interested in the large and lesser problems that come before the City Council each year, the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council have decided to enter the race for aldermanic honors for 1919, and take this means of placing before the electorate the names of four candidates, all Union men, who have the interests of the city and its citizens at heart. While representing Union Labor in this city, these men are broad-minded, and recognize that true municipal progress and prosperity can be achieved only by a unification of the various interests of the city, and believe that Labor should have its fair proportion of direct representation on the Council Board. Big questions are pressing for a satisfactory solution, and the reconstruction period will have its own peculiar problems. We believe these momentous matters can be the more readily disposed of if the toilers have a direct voice in the city's councils. The candidates of the Trades Council are all men of sound judgment, and if honored with election will to the utmost of their ability serve all the citizens all the time. To the working men and women of the city we would say that if you have your own welfare at heart—and what one has not?—you should give careful consideration to the candidates who have been endorsed by the Trades Council. If successful it will be part of their duty to see that the affairs of the city are administered wisely, to the benefit of the large majority of citizens, and with a studied economy consistent with safe and sure progress. Remember the Four Labor Candidates when you go to the polls next Wednesday. Don't forget to mark your ballot for at least four candidates. It will not count otherwise.

Yours Respectfully,

Labor Campaign Committee

A. J. BOLWELL, Chairman.

Wagner's Widow Dies at Bayreuth

Extraordinary Career of Laison, Divorce and Devotion Ends After Seventy-eight Years.

New York, Dec. 26.—Word was received in this city yesterday of the death at Bayreuth of Casima Wagner, widow of Richard Wagner. She was seventy-eight years old.

The death of Cassima Wagner recalls the story of a woman who was no less remarkable in her way than her husband. Richard Wagner was no Parsifal or Lohengrin. He inclined more toward the Tannhauser type; nor had he abjured the joys of the Venusberg when he had arrived at middle age, for he had reached that period when he met the woman who was to become his second wife. But there had been others before the liaison which he formed with the daughter of his greatest friend Liszt, and the wife of his friend and disciple, Hans von Bulow.

For instance, there was the young French girl, Jessie Lausson, whom he met at Dresden in 1848, with whom he renewed intimacy at her native town of Bordeaux, and whom, subsequently, to use the phrase of one of his biographers, he "bilked"—that is, he jilted her. Then there was his first wife, Wilhelmina Planer, a young actress with whom he had lived on terms of intimacy before marrying her, after which he neglected her, first for Frau Wesendock and then for Cosima von Bulow, until ultimately she divorced him. This was in the early sixties' when two children had already been born to Wagner by Von Bulow's wife.

Wagner's daughter, Isolde was born in 1864 and was married to Johann Beidler; Eva was born in 1866 and became the wife of the renegade Englishman, Houston Stewart Chamberlain, who expressed his desire to see the entire country and people to which he formerly belonged exterminated. Siegfried, the only son of the composer of some merit, who has visited this country was born outside wedlock in 1867, though the alleged date is 1869, after his mother and Wagner had been married. Cosima Wagner herself was the natural daughter of Franz Liszt by the comtesse d'Agoult, daughter of a French Napoleonic officer, the Compte de Flavigny and wife of another distinguished Frenchman, from whom she eloped with Liszt. The mother of the Comptesse d'Augoult was Marie Bethmann-Holweg, a rich heiress of Frankfort on Maine, grandaunt of the former Cancellor of the late German Empire, who was largely responsible for the world war.

It will thus be seen that Cassima Wagner's antecedents were scarcely ordinary and she was true to type. The extraordinary menage a trois in which after Bulow had surrendered his wife to Wagner, the three lived under one roof, was too much even for Liszt, despite his own stormy career, and there was a coolness between him and Wagner for some years, which, however, was ultimately assuaged, until they became re-united. It is noteworthy that when Wagner's wife divorced and Bulow had followed suit by divorcing Cosima, he was present at the marriage between her and Wagner, and he is even said to have presented her subsequently to friends as "the late Madame Bulow."

Cosima Wagner, at any rate, had the virtue of worshipping her husband despite the fact that he was her senior by nearly a quarter of a century. When Bayreuth became a shrine for devout Wagnerites, after the composer's death, she exercised a sort of regal sway, and not only controlled the theatre, and the productions of the operas, but also local society. She was very jealous of the production of the late composer's works outside Bayreuth, especially in foreign countries, and when "Parsifal" was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, in 1903, she made strenuous, but unavailing attempts to prevent the performance.

The obituary notices from Germany mention Cosima's age at the time of her death as seventy-eight, but records go to show that she celebrated her eightieth birthday on Christmas day, 1917.

Important Russian Cities Are in Danger of Capture

The Bolsheviki Have Drawn 500,000 Citizens Into the Army—Food Shortage.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27. — The Bolsheviki have drawn into the army 500,000 citizens, most of whom fear for their lives through violence or starvation if they refuse to join.

The State Department advices today gave this information, adding there was a considerable number of Austro-Hungarian prisoners and Chinese workmen in the red army.

Food is reported extremely scarce in both Petrograd and Moscow and army membership is about the only chance for many citizens to obtain even a slight sustenance.

Workers who loaded a Swedish steamer at Petrograd were reported by a Swedish captain to be emaciated, weak and so hungry that they stole garbage.

The important cities of Odessa and Kieff are in danger of capture by the Bolsheviki, according to other advices.

Press reports of the attempt to kill General Seminoff, the anti-Bolsheviki at Chita, were confirmed by department despatches. A hand grenade was thrown at him, but he was not seriously wounded.

A Bolsheviki uprising is reported near Omsk.

Bolsheviki have occupied courts in Essen, ejecting all judges, according to a Zurich despatch received by Le Journal to-day. The despatch said the German press is becoming more pessimistic regarding the new revolt.

THE WEATHER

While the weather to-day is fine and pleasant, last night was quite sharp. The lowest during the night was 6 degrees below zero. Towards morning the weather moderated and at daybreak was above the zero point. At noon the thermometer was up to 20 degrees.—W. P.

Russian Rouble is Circulating in Germany in Large Numbers—Upper Classes will Fight Bolshevism.

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, December 27. — The "Lokal Anzeiger" announces the formation of a society for the purpose of combatting Bolshevism. The correspondent is informed that at a recent meeting of the Berlin bankers one of the questions considered seriously was the problem of fixing a status of the rouble which is now circulating in Germany in greater profusion than relations with Russia warrant.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Spain May Ask Gibraltar Back

Proposal That Britain Be Offered Ceuta in Exchange.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—During the recent visit here of Count Romanones, the Spanish Premier, extended consultations are reported to have been held by the Premier with French and American statesmen regarding the Moroccan question, which was discussed in both its military and financial phases. The future status of Gibraltar is said also to have come up for consideration.

On his arrival at Madrid Premier Romanones is understood to have expressed great satisfaction over the result of his conferences.

It was reported in Paris on December 23 that Premier Romanones planned to return to Paris in the near future to confer with allied and American representatives over questions vitally concerning Spain. In connection with the status of Gibraltar, it was declared in some quarters that the Spanish Premier contemplated raising the question of its return to Spain, that country expressing willingness, if necessary, to concede Ceuta, on the Moroccan side of the strait, to Great Britain in exchange for Gibraltar, holding that possession of Ceuta by the British would afford equal strategic advantage in modern warfare.

SIBERIAN FORCE BACK BEFORE NEXT SUMMER

Announcement of No Intervention May Mean Return of Canadians Soon

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—So far as official advices are concerned, the Dominion Government is without intimation of any change in allied plans which will affect a status of the Canadian forces in Siberia It is expected, however, that the stay of the force in Sibria will not exceed in time demobilization of the Canadian Corps now on the Rhine Announcement has already been made that it is not intended to retain the Siberian force in the far East longer than twelve months following the signing of the armistice. But any early return of the men will depend on allied policy, although there is every likelihood, should the situation warrant, that the men will be back in the course of the coming summer, and perhaps earlier.

The complexities of the Russian situation are such that it is impossible to determine whether any changes in Canadian plans are likely, while no official advices are to hand considerable interest is taken in the news despatch from Paris that the allied Governments have recided against further intervention in Russia. Comment is withheld, however, for the time being, as to the bearing of any such decision, if taken, on the position of Canadians already in Siberia.

Election Prospects In Cavan Townshtp

MILLBROOK, Dec. 27.—Municipal nominations take place on Monday next, Cavan at 1 p.m. and others at 12 o'clock noon. There is little talk of a change in any of the municipalities and the probability is that acclamations may be the order of the day as the old representatives are all prepared to serve another term. Reeve Henderson of Cavan is said to be first choice for Warden next year which will insure him re-election not only on that account, but on his record as well. For trustees in Millbrook and S. S. No. 11 Cavan Union, Capt. Spencer, who was on the Board when he went overseas is willing to resume his place to fill the chair of the late Mr. A. T. Armstrong which will likely be satisfactory to the ratepayers. Mr. A. A. Smith and Mr. John Allen are also retiring this year, but will be renominated no doubt.

MILK SCARCITY CAUSES SHORT RATIONS IN ITALY

ROME, Italy—Milk rations, effective during the months of November, in Turin, Italy, allowed only one-half a pint of milk per person per day, and a maximum of a quart and a half for families of more than six persons. Cafes and bars were not allowed to use any fresh milk, but had to use condensed or otherwise preserved milk. Special milk rations were allowed to invalids and children, but to obtain these rations it was necessary to own special licenses, which had to be presented to the milk dealer.

CHASE & SANBORN MONTREAL

MUNICIPAL ELECTION NOTES

The election practice of making a personal canvass for votes has not become entirely obsolete, judging from the reported activities of some of the candidates for the council. It is probably true that most of them are confining their campaigns to the simple and guileless method of advertising their candidatures in the press, and trusting with varying confidence and doubts to the good sense and whims of the electors. Few of them are missing the present opportunity of letting the friendly New Year's handshake do its bit, and the formal greetings generally connote an implied request to "put a vote down for me."

The Street Railway problem seems to be as urgent as any that confronts this city, but an alderman said this morning that he did not expect that it would be dealt with by next year's council. Peterboro has its full share of strap-hangers, especially during the rush hours at meal times, and also in the evenings. On Christmas Eve the system failed utterly to handle the traffic. Doubtless it did all that was possible with the limited number of cars, but on the George street line, for example, about eight o'clock, little groups of citizens were left standing at nearly all the crossings in the south end. These citizens trudged through the snow for a distance of a mile or more uptown. A street railway system should be judged by its performance in emergencies.

The chairmen of the Council's committees are usually appointed on the basis of long service. The old members pick these plums, if they may be so regarded, and newcomers are given to understand that they are only municipal kindergarteners. This custom probably has its merits, but it is a question whether the chairmen are always selected on their qualifications for particular committees. It is obvious, for example, that the chairman of the Board of Works should have plenty of time to devote to the department for which he is temporarily responsible.

The city has been fortunate in this respect, not only this year, but for a decade at least. And during that period Mr. G. Walter Green established an administration that certainly has not been surpassed by those who preceded him, or by his successors. Every day he met the City Engineer and usually called upon the City Clerk. He spared neither his time nor his attention to make the Board of Works as efficient as possible. Looking back upon his methods, it might be proposed that the chairmanship of the Board of Works should be elective, and that the appointment should not be left to the wire-pulling distribution of offices that is customarily employed, with sometimes a double-cross even to veterans.

Modern Bolshevikism as Viewed By Mr. J. H. Burnham

Sir,—If your readers can stand another letter from me on the economic question, I should like to direct their attention still further at the close of the old year to what is surely coming for the new Saturday Night begins the front page of its Christmas number with a most alarming attack upon Canadian affairs, instancing the riots in Winnipeg, Montreal and Toronto. But S. N. does more. It is down on Unionism and stands for the rights of critics like itself who, presumably, alone have the right to say how the world shall wag. It is this unreasoning sort of reasoning that brings on Bolshevism, which thus thinks itself compelled to resort to force also. The French revolution worshipped reason. Bolshevism workships force. Some say, "But what can you expect " So many well-intentioned people decry nature and all that God has made, and condemn it as a total failure, that people generally have begun to believe it. Even the death of the good Jesus seems to depend for its effect on whether men believe it took place or not. The world and all in it is thus placed in the hands of man. And the unco guid strive for the mastery with the unco bad, and it is doubtful which is the worse of the two. But if half the time spent in wanting to get out of this "horrible hole" (the work of God) was spent in trying to secure the triumph of justice in everyday life, what a change there would be. Throwing everything down in a passion of pessimism and leaving it there is an invitation to the devil to lead the Bolsheviks in triumph. Let us brace up and do our part. God is not a failure. He has done His part. The truth is that a large part of us is so thoroughly satisfied with ourselves that we consider that if others would repent and be like us, wow! what a grand world this would be. If we only knew it, the mass of the people are laughing at us and getting ready to kick us out. A whole lot of reforming is needed in the reformers themselves. The self-satisfied and well-to-do are the Bourgeoisie whom, more than any other revolutionists now, as in 1789, delight to murder. If you resort to the force of laws what can people do but resort to force also, and when the one is unreasonable the other is sure to be also. And if others, why not the Bolsheviks? That is where Bolshevism arose and, like the onrush of the Huns in the early centuries, it threatens the world. It is one phase of the universal rebellion against cant. Recently, it is said, a distinguished lecturer in Peterborough rather sneered at the Americans in relation to the war. Apart from her military aid, the U. S. lent us the money to go into munition-making and the war generally. Sneering at the U. S. is ingratitude almost passing conception. But the point of it is more serious still. People are taught that the civilian does not cultivate his conscience and is willing to take what he can get and not even acknowledge it, while even the revolutionists give receipts! That S. N. is right in one particular at least we must all acknowledge. Times are changing rapidly and fundamentally. Even a majority is not infallible, and when it proposes to supersede the principles of justice and common sense with get-right-quick methods, how can they blame others for ignoring the same principles of justice and adopting the same wonderful methods of setting things right. We are not the chosen instrument of God. He is able to do His own work. But we can spoil it. Is nobody but the Bolshevik a profiteerer and plunderer? The people are tired of being bluffed and having it put all over them in the name of people who want everything according to their own fancies, tastes and desires. But God is still the ruler of the world and not man.

Wishing you the compliments, etc.,

J. H. BURNHAM.

TO YOUNG MEN and MEN WHO STAY YOUNG

Cressman's Men's Wear Department invites you to inspect a comprehensive showing of Evening Clothes and Dress Accessories, on and after Friday, December twenty-seventh.

Voice of The People

Dear Sir:—Allow me a small space in your paper regarding the War Widows pensions. I see by the papers where there has been some big changes in the money of the returned men, which, I agree with. But it seems there is nothing for the poor War Widow but the small sum of forty dollars It makes no difference how high living is

I am much surprised at our Great War Veterans that don't loo into this matter the same as the War Veterans in other cities are doing. I do not think it fair to ask a widow to try and live in a city with forty dollars per month, and to think while her man lived she got the sum of fifty-seven dollars and at that it was from hand to mouth I hope our Great War Veterans will give this a fair consideration,

Yours Truly
A Soldier's Widow.

HEROES OF THE WAR

Life in Trench and Billet Ably Portrayed on Screen.

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's creations are always welcome, and his three best figures, Old Bill, Bert and Alf, are sure of a cordial greeting in Peterborough when they make their bow in the film version of "The Better 'Ole" at the Grand Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

Captain Bairnsfather's cartoons of the British Tommy at the front have become world-famous, and will go down through the ages as typifying the spirit of the British soldier who has done so much in winning this war. Their cheery opticism, under all circumstances, their unflagging sense of contempt for danger, are shown in "The Better 'Ole," the film version of the play.

The film is invested with a real live plot, in the shape of an excellent spy story wherein villainy is confounded and virtue rewarded in the appropriate.

Back in the billets Old Bill discovers that the keeper of the Inn is in reality a spy, who means at a given time to signal the Germans of the movements of the French. How Old Bill frustrates his plans, obtains his papers and incidentally is handed a substantial roll of money by the spy in return for what he believes to be the papers he has lost, and which are really valueless, is a delightful bit of humour.

Bert is the "ladies' man" of the trio, but his love-making is always interrupted by the arrival of either Old Bill or Alf. His oft-repeated remark to each little French girl in turn that "after the war is over I'd like a little girl just like you, Marie" is one of the funny bits of humour which runs through the play.

Mail day in the trenches, the wounding of the comrade, the trip home to Blighty, and the return again to the firing line, is skillfully told, and it is safe to say that "The Better 'Ole" will be one of the most popular screen pictures shown in some time, for it is something new, something different, from the war plays we have been seeing, and visualizes a side of life at the front in which we have all been interested—the every day life of our men when not actually fighting.

BRANTFORD HAS PROTEST.

Removal of Provincial War Tax is Demanded—Peterborough Makes Similar Request.

A strong protest against the continuance of the provincial war tax of one mill on the dollar is being considered by the Brantford City Council ,which is asked to endorse and forward to the Ontario Government a memorial on the subject. The Brantford objectors claim that necessity for the tax no longer exists, inasmuch as the Province during the past year showed a $6,600,000 surplus. They also challenge the legalsty of the continuance of the tax, the war having ended with victory. No expression of opinion in the matter can to-day be obtained either from Premier Hearst or his Attorney-General. Hon. I. B. Lucas, the former being at Sault Ste. Marie for the Christmas holiday, and Mr. Lucas at his Markdale home, Hon. Mr. Macdiarmid is in St. Thomas with his family, and Hon. Mr. McGarry in Renfrew, while civil service employes rejoice in the fact that Queen's Park is hermetically sealed and deserted by all save caretakers during the day after Christmas.

The Peterboorugh City Council, at the last meeting, endorsed a similar resolution of protest against the continuance of the war tax.

Presentation to Mr. Harry Castle

Fellow Workers Give Expression of Good Fellowship.

Mr. Harry Castle was agreeably surprised at his home, 118 George street, on Tuesday evening, when his fellow employees of the Canadian General Electric Company, presented him with a handsome club bag and a box of cigars, accompanied by the following address:

Peterboro, Dec. 24, 1018.

Dear Harry: It is with feelings of good cheer and good fellowship that we, your men, gather here this evening to show you the marked esteem in which we hold you and to display at least in some small way, our appreciation of you and the many kindnesses we have received from you during the past year. This coupled with many other reasons, is the spirit that prompts us to assemble here together, and we assure you that our intentions are genuine.

We ask you to accept this gift as a token of our friendship, hoping that the feeling which urged us to give it, and the spirit in which we give it, will be remembered long after the gift has worn out.

Wishing you a Very Merry Christmas and a Prosperous and Happy New Year.

Mr. Castle, although taken completely by surprise, made a suitable reply, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

4 LABOUR UNIONS NEGOTIATE FOR 44-HOUR WEEK

LONDON.—Labour unions throughout United Kingdom are agitating for forty-four week. This would be eight hours a day on five days a week and four hours on Saturday.

The National Transport Workers' Federation has presented to all the municipal and privately owned tramways a demand for a working week of forty-four hours at the present weekly wages.

Representatives of the Federation of Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades and representatives of the employers recently held a meeting at which it was decided that a forty-seven hour week, without any reduction in existing wages, constituted a reasonable attempt to readjust working conditions.

Millbrook Boy Describes Conditions In Belgian Villages

The Weather Is Getting Cold and Wet—Kindness of Inhabitants.

The following letter was received from Pte. Lewis Sutton by his parents who reside in Millbrook. He describes the operations of his battalion since Cambrai and also the joy of the Belgians at the deliverance of their country from the Huns.

Ciply, Belgium,
Nov. 20th, 1918.

Dear Mother:—You will notice by the top of the letter that censorship regulations have relaxed somewhat, so I will now be able to write a half decent letter instead of the usual run that I have been accustomed to.

In Ciply, Belgium

At present we are resting in the above named village, just outside of Mons, for a day or so. We have been on the move off and on for nearly a month now, and expect to continue to for another few weeks. Our destination is some town on the Rhine so you see we have still some marching before us.

I have had no mail from you for about two weeks, but expect a Canadian mail in any day now. Collins got a parcel from a cousin yesterday and I have just now finished a big hunk of cake which it contained. It sure was good

I suppose there would be great rejoicing at home when you received news that an armistice had been signed

Near Valenciennes

I don't think you could have been any better pleased than we over here. We were at the time in rest billets at Anzin, on the outskirts of Valenciennes, where we had come just a couple of days previous from the line.

Operations of the Battalion

For about a month back, in fact, ever since the Cambrai operation we have been following up and pushing old Fritz till at the time the armistice was concluded he was behind Mons. Our battalion has seen quite a bit of scrapping this summer, first down at Amiens, on the Somme, then at the Scarpe, then Cambrai, and afterwards around Valenciennes I think I must have been born under a lucky star to come through them all safely, as Fritz certainly made things pretty hot at times, especially during the Cambrai operation I won't bother here, to go into detail about any of these scraps, for in a few months I hope to be able to tell you, instead. oughta fiethr zo BhhardHBi Rhevh

Home In April

If everything goes well, I hope to be home by April or May next year. I hope to be anyhow. Home certainly looks good to me now I would just about give ten years of my life to get at some of those pies and cakes of yours, to say nothing of the good home-made bread and other things. We don't think of these things till we have to do without them for a while

Turning Cold

It is beginning to turn quite cold here now. We have already had a couple of nights of rather heavy frost. For the last two days it has been very foggy and wet.

War Souvenirs

I posted that parcel a few days ago, containing the Prussian Guard's helmet and a little French crucifix, which I found in a ruined house, not long ago. I hope the parcel arrives home safely, as those helmets are rather scarce. I found it in a German barracks in Valenciennes the day after we captured the city

The Belgians around here are very good to us and are certainly glad to be rid of the Boches.

Billeted With Belgians

Collins and I had a private billet with an old Belgian couple for a few days back at Petit Wasmes the town which we just left this morning before marching here. We had a fine old bed for a change The only trouble with it was that it was too high we almost needed a step-ladder to climb into it. The old couplee could not do too much for us.

Kindness of Inhabitants

The people over here seem to be insulted if we refuse anything, so we couldn't very well do that, so we evened up the score by buying them biscuits and other things at our Y.M.C.A., which they could not get otherwise. This village where we are staying at present is crowded with refugees. So we do not fare quite so well. There are seven of us in this one house so we have to sleep on the floor of the kitchen. They are all stone floors in this country, so you see our bed won't be very soft to night

However I have had lots worse, so that won't bother me in the least.

Church Service

Last Sunday our battalion held service in a church, the first time in this country. In France the people are all Catholics, so we protestants had to hold our service in the open, but here there are a few Protestant churches. The minister at the church spoke English fairly well and gave us a short address before the service.

Belgian Dance

These Belgians believe in having a good time, for the same evening while strolling around the town I heard a band playing in a big hall, so walked in There was a dance in full swing and what must have been about half the population of the village were enjoying themselves immensely at it I am afraid some of the people at home would get many a shock if they were to visit this country for a while

Well, I think I had better leave some news for the next time, so will close now. Love to all,

Lewis.

MAY RETIRE FROM THE GOVERNMENT

Cabinet Was in Secret Session the Greater Part of Day.

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—As a result of today's deliberations it is believed in some quarters that the majority Socialists will retire from the Cabinet and leave the Independents in full control of the government.

The Cabinet was in secret session the greater part of the day. The leading Independents in the government also were in conference and this gave rise to the rumour that Hugo Haase, leader of Independent Socialists, would be called on to organize a new government. The crisis is likely to continue for a day or two and may meet with an unforseen solution. Today passed quietly in Berlin.

MR. BURNHAM HAS HIS OWN TROUBLES WITH APPOINTEES

That Postmaster Edgar's ideas of economy do not accord with those of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., a member of the Patronage Committee that thrust Mr. Edgar into the position, is illustrated by an illuminating and slightly titillating incident of the holiday rush. It seems the postmen require the ordinary white string to tie their parcels of letters, and for convenience and efficiency in their work they kept balls of the cord in their desks. The P. M. decided to impose an economical stroke upon the men, collected or had collected, the balls of cord and, according to his brilliant notion of efficiency, ordered the men to use pieces of string which it is said he himself, the high-salaried post master had picked off the floor. The details of the story are lacking, but a digression may be permitted to emphasize this recovery of the broken ends of string.

It is easy to imagine the inundation of letters and parcels that swept over the post office employees in the last days before Christmas, and their resentment to the needlessly involved task of fitting the pieces of string to the bundles of letters will be fully appreciated. The balls of string required no adjustment of separate pieces, but simply the cutting off of the required lengths from the rolled and fresh supply. The man foresaw the difficulties that bristled in the Post Master's Christmas idea, the delay and the lost time, and intimated that they would be unable to arrange and deliver the mail on Christmas day if they were to be hampered by the big idea. It is said that there were some negotiations here and there that culminated on Monday morning in a decision that the balls of string must be returned or the mail would be untouched. A messenger was despatched to the Post Master's residence on Weller street, but in the meantime, to insure the customary facilities for packaging the mail, the men sent for Mr. Burnham to come to the Post Office and hear their complaint.

It was characteristic of Mr. Burnham that after the situation was explained to him he immediately set out for a store and returned with an armful of string in balls, dumped them into the post office, and, perhaps, vented his opinion of the big idea. Later the messenger boy returned with a note from the Post Master to the effect that the men could have the string as desired. And in the end the men were pacified, the work of preparing the mail for delivery went smoothly, and Mr. Burnham has a bill for six dollars for the cord he bought, an item the P. M. must add to some column or other in his economy accounts.

"MISS BLUE EYES"

A Splendid Attraction at "The Grand" New Year's Day.

Mr. Harvey D. Orr, who has appeared here the past two seasons with his two musical shows, "The Million Dollar Doll" and "There She Goes," returns to the Grand this season on New Year's Day, matinee and night, with his laughing musical comedy success, "Miss Blue Eyes."

In three acts of continuous laughter the plot tells of the troubles of two divorce lawyers who go to "Honeysuckle Inn" on the Boston post road in answer to one of their many clients. There they surprisingly encounter their respective wife and sweetheart who in turn had gone there the same evening to secure the return of twenty dollars they had paid in advance for a surprise supper they were to have given the two lawyers. The chief of police swoops down and arrests all drinkers of the famous 'Honeysuckle Dream' and they all air their troubles in the Westchester county jail the next morning, much to the amusement of others.

Mr. Orr comes here with the original company of 40 people and a beautiful chorus of Broadway's prettiest girls. There are some twenty musical numbers and "Miss Blue Eyes" should prove a splendid holiday offering at the Grand New Year's Day.

Advance plan of tickets opens Monday a.m. at box office.

Bolshevik Sue A'lies for Peace

Allied Governments do not Answer, as the Government of Russia is Not Recognized—Last Plea Since Christmas.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, December 27. — The allied governments, since Christmas, have again been approached by the Bolshevik Government of Russia regarding the terms of peace. These differ in no respect from those put forward by M. Litvinoff, the former Bolshevik ambassador at London, through the Norwegian government, in November.

The proposals have met with no response as they emanate from a government which is not recognized by the allies. The whole Russian question is at present under discussion among the allied governments.

AN INTIMATE DISCUSSION

Wide Variety of Subjects Discussed at To-day's Conference.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, December 27. — President Wilson's conferences to-day with British statesmen are described in American quarters as having been very satisfactory. The President spent more than three hours before Premier Lloyd George's luncheon in a most intimate discussion with the Premier and Foreign Secretary Balfour at Buckingham Palace, going over the general aspects of the fourteen points of his peace programme.

No one particular phase was taken up but the whole discussion was a general one. No official announcements were made of the results of the conference. Afterwards the President continued the discussions with British statesmen at a luncheon in Downing street, and later resumed them at Buckingham Palace.

It was learned that a great deal of progress was made in making clear some phases of the President's points which are uppermost in the minds of the British, principally as regards the question of British naval supremacy.

At Buckingham Palace, before luncheon President Wilson, the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary, met in one of the rooms of the President's suite, before a cheerful open fire, with no secretaries or documents to lend any air of formality to the discussion. It was an entirely informal conference intended to develop most intimate aspects of the situation. The President did a great deal of talking, and it was said afterwards that nothing developed to show that any substantial difference in principel or in fundamentals existed. The discussion ranged about the freedom of the seas, league of nations, and attendant proposition of armaments.

THE FIRST MOTION PICTURE TO DEPICT THE INDEFATIGABLE "CARRY-ON" SPIRIT OF THE BRITISH ARMY

'ULLO

WHAT THE RETURNED MEN AT WHITBY MILITARY HOSPITAL THINK OF "THE BETTER OLE"

A SERGEANT: A darn good picture. The best I ever saw.
A CORPORAL: The most realistic version of life at the front that I have ever seen.
A GUNNER: Great! The last word in war plays, and I have seen nearly all war pictures produced.
A PRIVATE: Seen it twice, want to see it again. This is the picture for anyone that has a relative at the front.
AN OFFICER: Never thought that it was possible to reproduce on the screen life as you see it at the front. "The Better Ole" has accomplished this.
A NURSING SISTER: Wonderful! It will give the public an inside view of the life of our wonderful men. Advise everyone to see it.
A PRIVATE: Liked it for many reasons better than any picture that I have ever seen. It is not a gloom dispenser, but a gloom chaser. This is the real dope. No camouflage to this picture. One of the best points is that this picture is British from start to finish. Full of pep the greatest ever.

KAISER AND WAR LORDS RAN NO RISKS IN THE WAR

Elaborately Constructed Funk-Holes are Discovered at Spa Headquarters —Always in Hiding—Wilhelm Had Comic Opera Trench System for Posed Movies.

SPA, Belgium, Dec. 28.—The former headquarters of the Kaiser and his general staff is disclosing some extraordinarily queer facts these days about the men who engineered the world war. Take for one, Hindenburg, Germany's superman, around whom reams of poetry have been written disclosing him as a fearless Napoleon leading his troops to victory. As a matter of fact he spent a great deal of his time in a wonderfully constructed "funkhole," or dugout, underneath the grounds of his villa here.

Spa, it may be noted, is almost on the German border and so far from where battle lines used to be that it was almost a day's journey in a fast motor car to get within sounds of the big guns. The Kaiser, too, had a similar hiding place at Neubois, near a comic opera trench system about which he is said to have paraded for the benefit of motion picture men. At each of their villas there were delicate electrical instruments which would set up furious buzzing whenever an airplane appeared anywhere near. At the first sound from this contrivance, Hindenburg and the Kaiser used to run to shelter, it is reported. People who worked about Hindenburg's establishment said that he was continually running for cover.

Everything For Safety.

America's representatives on the International Armistice Commission are now occupying Hindy's headquarters and they were amazed when they discovered this underground refuge of the great warrior. The entrance was through the dining-room. From there a flight of steps led down to a tiled ante-room, which by the way now serves as a very good pantry for the Americans. From the tiled room there was another flight of steps that led down to the real dugout. This was blocked by a huge iron door about one inch in thickness which could be locked from the inside only. Within, it was fastened by a double bolt which would do credit to any banking establishment.

Dugout Luxuriously Equipped.

The dugout itself was luxuriously equipped. On the floor was a heavy flowered carpet and a Louis XV. table and chairs added to the artistic arrangement. The walls, which were of corrugated iron, were painted white and the whole place brilliantly illuminated by electricity. On a little table was an electric fan to keep the marshal cool in summer while an electric stove provided for heat in winter. The room was about 14 by 12 feet, and was protected by four to six feet of earth above it.

The Emperor's dugout was similar except that it was much deeper underground and there were two entrances, one through the villa and the other from the grounds. The main entrance was from the house and led down a long flight of steps.

Another touch to the picture was added when a German resident of Aix-La-Chapelle told the correspondent of the Associated Press that the Crown Prince spent virtually all of his time in amusement.

Because of the purity and high quality of the ingredients of Magic Baking Powder, its leavening qualities are perfect, and it is therefore economical.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

CHRIST IN EVERY DAY

(By The Reverend Joseph H. Odell, D.D.)

In these days, when we measure the growth of religion by whether the churches are full or not, it is well to remember that life is much more deeply saturated with religion than we realize. No one who shares our modern life can escape its influence, however studiously he or she may avoid acknowledging its claims. It can me truly said that every day, from the time we awake in the morning until we retire at night, throughout our business transactions, in the home, upon the street and amid our friends, we are always being touched by Christian influence. It pervades, permeates and shapes everything we say and do, whether we are conscious of the pressure or not. We never put a date upon a letter or a receipt without stating how long ago it was that Christ was born. We never give a Christmas present without working out a little charade of the Wise Men from the East laying their treasures at the Cradle of Bethlehem. Every time we send a flower to a house of mourning we pay tribute to the general faith in the resurrection. Whenever we see a red cross on an ambulance or on a package of court-plaster we are looking upon the symbol of salvation. More fish is sold on Friday than on all the other days of the week—a reminiscence of the self-denial of Calvary. When we say "Adieu" to a friend, it is a commendation to the care of God, remaining with us from Norman days. When we say "Good-by," our word of parting is a modern contraction of "God be with ye."—Exchange.

LOCATE HOUSE IN WHICH PRESIDENT'S MOTHER LIVED

Identity Established of the Ancestral Home in England.

CARLISLE, ENG., December 28. — The visit of President Wilson to the home of his maternal grandfather in Carlisle on Sunday, will be almost coincident with his 62nd birthday, which occurs to-day. His visit will have a double object.

The President will attend worship in the Lowther street Congregational Church, of which his grandfather was the pastor for 15 years, and will visit the scenes of his mother's early childhood. The pastor of the church has invited him to make an address at the morning service.

Arrangements are not yet complete to offer the President the freedom of the city and it is doubtful if the presentation can be made while he is here.

The President's grandfather left few records of his ministry here. Doubt regarding the house where the Rev. Mr. Woodrow lived was dispelled by a man 90 years old, who was a pupil at his academy. Documentary evidence also has been found:

The document says:

"The Rev. Mr. Woodrow resided for some time in the chapel on Annetwell street, but his income from the church was small and his family was increasing, so that he was obliged to open a school. He moved to Cavendish place, to a house that has pillars at the door. His income from the church at the time of his resignation was only about £50 a year."

The house with the pillars is now known as No. 83 Warwick road. The Rev. Mr. Woodrow leased it from the Duke of Devonshire. It appears to be settled affirmatively that the Rev. Mr. Woodrow himself lived there. When the family went to the United States they left no branches in Carlisle.

The Warwick road house, except for a little portion, is a plain square flat fronted building, with a few straggly evergreens in the narrow front yard. An old lady who sold the house a month ago after her family had possessed it for 55 years, yesterday pointed out the good points of its construction and said:

"Don't you think that the character of a man who laid such a foundation and built so solidly and well is fitly reproduced in his grandson?"

It has been reported incorrectly the President's grandmother was buried in Carlisle. She accompanied her husband to America. They landed in New York on their way to Canada and she became ill and died in New York.

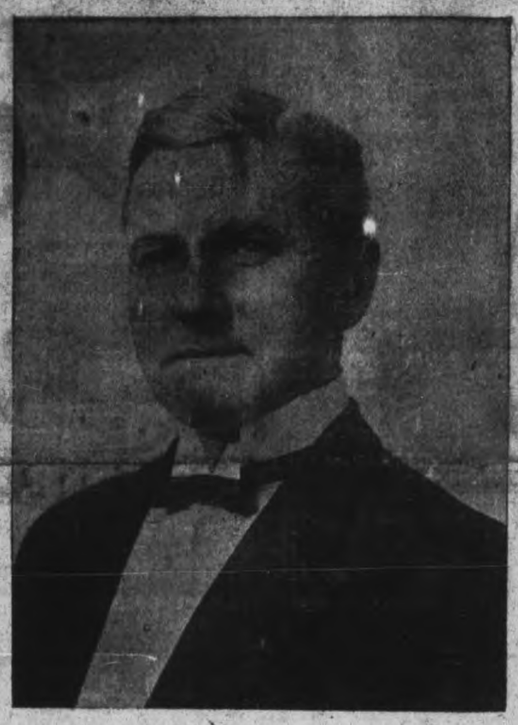
THE BOARD OF EDUCATION



A. A. FOWLER

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having now served a two-year term on your Board of Education, receiving the highest vote on the occasion of my being selected for the honour, I again allow by name to come before you for re-election... My two years service, and particularly that of the last year when I was Chairman of the Property Committee, has given me the experience necessary to more intelligently attend to the important duties of the Board. Having accepted the honour of the ratepayers confidence, I gave the same care and attention to the affairs before the Board as I did to my own private business, and if again entrusted with the work will give the very best service of which I am capable. Knowing that greater School accommodation is becoming necessary especially in the South and West sections of the city, and in order to obtain all the knowledge possible, I visited, in company with Dr. Neal, and at our own expense, the Technical and Public Schools of London and Hamilton.

This Board will in the next two years, be obliged to dispose of considerable business, involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and my two years' experience on the Board, and long business training, should fit me especially for the duties at this crucial period.

I am an enthusiast along educational lines and want Peterborough to have the best Educational Advantages, and I consider that our equipment and Staff are of the high efficiency necessary to properly apply the magnificent System as outlined by the Provincial Authorities.

If elected it will always be my aim to guard the interest of the ratepayers and keep down expenses, endeavouring at all times to see that every dollar spent was properly applied. If my past Service, and future willingness are considered worthy of your support, you can show it on election day by endorsing my Candidature with your vote.

Yours faithfully,
A. A. FOWLER.

GRAIN MARKET

The strength of corn is still the dominating influence in the grain market. With no prospect of any improvement in the cash corn situation, commission houses were active buyers in the December option, their action resulting in a very sharp and rapid advance at the close, when December closed 3 5-8c. over Friday's close. Oats were strengthened by the advance in corn. Locally the situation is unchanged, except for a 3-8c. advance in Manitoba oats quotations:

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William (not including 1 1-2c. tax), No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, C.W., 73 3-8c. in store, Fort William; No. 3, 69 7-8c.; extra No. 1 feed, 70 3-8c.; No. 2 feed, 69 3-8c.

American corn, new crop— No. 3, $1.65; No. 4, $1.60; corn feed, $1.45 to $1.50, track, Toronto.

Ontario wheat—No. 1 winter, $2.14 to $2.22; No. 2 winter, $2.11 to $2.19; No. 3 winter, $2.07 to $2.15; No. 1 spring, $2.08 to $2.17; No. 2 spring, $2.08 to $2.14; No. 3 spring, $2.02 to $2.10, f.o.b., shipping points, according to freight.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 70c. to 73c.; No. 3, 69c. to 72c., according to freight outside.

Barley—New crop, 90c. to 95c.

Peas— No. 2, $2.00, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.36.

Rye—No. 2, $1.54.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.25; Toronto-Montreal, $10.25, new bags.

Manitoba flour—War quality, $11.35, Toronto.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $42.25; bran, $37.25; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay— Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $22 to $24; No. 2, mixed, $20 to $21 per ton; straw, car lots, $10 to $10.50.

High Cost of War.

Colonel E. Picard finds that the firing of one shell of the French twelve inch naval guns costs 4,350 francs, or about $870. This amount is divided as follows: The cost of the projectile, which weighs about 970 pounds, is $300. The charge, weighs about 220 pounds and costs about $280. The gun costs about $70,000. Taking the life of the gun at about 200 shots, each shot would cost about $350 in wear of gun.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week—149 cars, with 2,025 cattle, 207 calves, 3,411 hogs, 747 sheep and lambs, and 43 horses.

City Cattle Market— 40 cars, with 1,040 cattle, and 94 sheep and lambs.

No fresh cattle receipts yesterday gave dealers another day off. There will now be no regular market until Monday. After a holiday of three or four days in succession, there will probably be a fairly active demand for cattle in the opening market next week. There would in fact have been a market yesterday, had enough stock been on hand to make a fair showing. Business therefore, was practically "suspended" with Monday. Price quotations remain unchanged.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

Many an unwise parent works hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of giving his children a good start in the world, as it is called. Starting a young man out with money left to his relatives is like tying a bladder under the arm of one who cannot swim. Ten to one he loses the bladder and goes to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he won't need the bladder. Give your child a good education. See that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated and his whole nature subservient to the laws that govern man and you will give what will be of more value than the Indies. You have given him a start no misfortunes can deprive him of. The earlier you teach him to depend upon himself the better.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Suggests That Mollie Be His Teacher

CHAPTER LXXIII.

When Mollie had asked Brian to come and see her often, she was not thinking so much of the pleasure his visits would give her, as of the happiness she might perhaps give him. He was lonely, unhappily married. She liked him, why shouldn't she make up to him for all he had missed by marrying a woman who was, to say the least, not congenial? It meant giving him a little of her time, in return for which she spent a pleasant evening, and—had a good dinner. Mollie's income was such that the prospect of a good dinner which cost her nothing, was welcome even when it did not also mean the society of the best looking fellow she knew.

It seemed to Mollie that the fault must be all Ruth's. Who couldn't get along with such a boy as Brian? All he asked for was sympathy and understanding. So she figured. He was so generous, too. Why, if she would let him, he would take her to the most expensive places in town. But, to be truthful, Mollie enjoyed the village environment far more than that to be found North of Washington Square. In the village they knew everyone. It was rather jolly to show them that Brian had not forgotten her entirely, simply because he had married. Up-town she scarcely ever saw anyone whom she knew, and Brian had not explained to her that that was the reason he so often proposed leaving the village purlieus.

Mollie had gradually urged Brian to tell her of his business. She was ambitious. She TOLD him she was ambitious for HIM. She made him promise to work hard, to study whenever he could. She even went so far in her attempt to encourage him to greater effort, as to offer to read dry law books out loud with him when he complained he couldn't fix his mind upon what he read after five o'clock.

"Temperament, Brian. That is what your wife doesn't understand in you, and I do. It is one reason you like to come down here."

Brian laughed. The thought of temperament in connection with Ruth's conventionality, was amusing.

"Then, too," Mollie went on, "she's had so much, that poverty is a sort of nightmare, to her. That's the reason she went to work, I imagine. While you and I have seen nothing but poverty, so have become accustomed to it. We have learned not to hanker after the flesh pots, as expressed in expensive furniture and fashionable clothes—in exotic flowers for the table, and expert cooks in the kitchen. The two worlds are as far apart as the poles, Brian."

"I like the old world best," he retorted, neither of them appreciating they were talking insidious propaganda. Propaganda tending to break up a home.

"Frankly, so do I. It seems to me we get more out of life when we are not wrapt up in convention. It doesn't take much to make us happy, and—"

"A loaf of bread and thou," Brian quoted dreamily.

"Half a loaf sometimes," Mollie returned.

"Say, Mollie, I need a stenographer. I use Clark's, now, but it looks better to have one of my own. You don't know of someone I could get to come to me for part of the day, do you? Someone who wouldn't want too big a salary?"

"How would I do, Brian? I am a good typist, and can type very fast. My stenography is bum. But if your letters were well written, I should think that might do for now. If you don't talk too fast, I can take them on the machine nearly as fast as you can dictate." Then, "Why haven't you learned to type them yourself, you lazy boy?"

"It would be awfully jolly having you in the office, Mollie, but I am afraid I shouldn't get any work done. I'd be thinking of you all the time. That isn't a bad idea of your about learning to use a typewriter myself. It would save, and make me independent also. I tell you what I'll do. You teach me to use the machine. I'll come here." He had a feeling that Ruth might object to Mollie in his office.

"You'd be a long time learning, that way, Brian. You could only come when you were a grass widower.

"I'd like to know why I could not go to an evening school if I wished to. Ruth will be pleased that I am anxious to do something to push my work —no matter what it is."

Mollie smiled a little, inscrutable smile. She had sensed at once that Brian had no idea of telling Ruth that her apartment was to be the schoolhouse in which he was to learn to use a typewriter.

"Women are naturally very ambitious for those they love. But—"

"Don't you begin to talk that way, too! Business success isn't everything. A good, comfortable home means as much to a man as a successful business. At least it does to some men."

"Poor Brian," and Mollie's lips just brushed his cheek as he bent and kissed her good night.

FLAME CHECKING DOORS.

Novel Device For Stopping Dust Explosion Fires In Mines.

Doors that will slam themselves shut when fire comes along and throw pans of water over the oncoming flames are the latest devices for stopping the terrible dust explosion fires in coal mines. The real marvel of the doors is that they do not wait until the fire gets to them, but promptly go into action while there is still time to shut off the flames.

The doors, placed at intervals along the mine passages are ordinarily kept swung back against the walls, and on them are balanced several pans filled with water. A dust explosion in a coal mine rushes rapidly through all the open passages, but the flames are preceded by a sudden draft or air pressure. This draft will shut the doors in time to head off the flames, and as the doors slam the water from the pans is thrown in the direction from which the fire is coming.

The same principle of utilizing the precursive air wave is the basis of most of the systems now rapidly being applied in coal mines to check the dust explosions.

One method that has had much attention of late is to keep all the passages well sprinkled with stone dust, with piles of it stored on shelves along the passagewars. When the air wave comes along ahead of the fire, this stone dust is stirred up into the air and acts something like a blanket in smothering the coal dust flames.—Saturday Evening Post.

Value of a Lawyer's Talk.

A young lawyer was defending an old convict on the charge of burglary in a state where the court rules allow each side one hour to address the jury. The young lawyer, somewhat nervous, consulted a veteran member of the bar who happened to be standing near. "How much time do you think I should take up in addressing the jury?" he asked in a rather pompous manner.

"Take the full hour," was the gruff reply.

"The full hour! Why, I intended to take only fifteen minutes."

"Take the full hour," responded the old lawyer.

"But why?"

"Because the longer you talk the longer you will keep your client out of jail."—Ladies' Home Journal.

After Samson had been delivered up to the Philistines by the treacherous Delilah the strong man's luxurious locks lay for awhile where they had fallen.

Then Delilah returned.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

COMFORT SOAP

NOMENCLATURE.

For centuries fair woman reigned,
And o'er her subject man maintained
A firm and gentle sway.
Enthroned securely in his heart,
Crowned with his love, she had the art
To rule and to obey.

Obey? Yes, in its primal sense.
Just turn and search the Latin, whence
Our English words contrived,
You find the root means but "to bear"—
The prefix opposition—there!
You see where we've arrived.

Yet everybody was content,
For lovely woman had her bent.
So he believed, did man.
Alas, that age of gold is past!
It doubtless was too good to last.
Fate had another plan.

Shakespeare was very much to blame
For asking us, "What's in a name?"
A name! That's just the rub!
Man yielded woman her demands
While she'd "a scepter" in her hands.
But how about a club?
—New York Tribune.

He Ducked.

"So you called on Miss Millions last evening. How did her father strike you?"

"He didn't. I saw him coming."—Pittsburgh Press.

A Common Quest.

"I say, my friend," called the motorist to the farmer as he drew up alongside of the field, "I'm looking for a decent road to take me into Squigglesville."

"I'm derned glad to hear it," replied the farmer. "Ef ye happen to find it, stranger, send me a tellygram, will ye?"—Judge.

An Improving Influence.

"You have a new cook."

"Yes," replied Mr. Crosslots.

"Is she doing good work?"

"Yes. She can't cook very much, but she served notice that she wouldn't stay if my daughter didn't quit playing ragtime on the piano."—Washington Star.

Family Affair.

"I called on Mrs. X. for a contribution to our charity fund and got $10. Then I went to her husband's office."

"Did he put his name down?"

"Oh, yes; he wrote 'Mr. and Mrs.' in front of his wife's name and handed back the book."—Boston Transcript.

He Knew.

Jack—Do you know that girl?

Mack—Her voice has a familiar ring.

Jack—A familiar ring?

Mack—Yes. I remember now. She got a diamond ring out of me once when I proposed to her.—Florida Times-Union.

The Worry Fiend.

"He's always finding something new to worry about."

"What's his latest?"

"He's afraid that if beef goes to $1 a pound his doctor will prescribe it three times a day."—Atlanta Constitution.

Rapid Bridge Building.

More than a mile of burned railroad bridge was rebuilt in twelve days last summer. It was the two track bridge across Newark bay, 5,663 feet long, including a draw 264 feet long. The fire was yet in progress when the reconstruction was decided on and the plans got ready. Orders were given for 14 pile drivers, 13 marine derricks, 21 scows, 2 tugs, 6 catamarans, 5 air compressors, 3 water boats, 2 derrick cars, 2 locomotive trains, 3 switch engines, 2 teams of horses, 3,000,000 feet of lumber and for the assembling of 1,500 men.

Quiet Joy.

"Did the operation on Mrs. Gabby's throat prove a success?"

"Oh, her husband is enthusiastic about it. He says she can't speak now above a whisper."—Baltimore American.

Good Advice.

"I am out of employment," said the boob. "I have only $100 saved up, and I would like to make it go a long way."

"Why don't you mail it to Australia?" asked the grouch.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Brave Woman

By Walworth Pierce Atherton

They were orphans, Bertram and Lucy Gale, twins, both tall and slender, the same eyes, the same general cast of features. Just now he was lying outstretched upon a bed of suffering and she was hovering about him with gentle ministrations.

"It was just a misstep and see what has come of it—a broken ankle!" mourned Bertram. "And the doctor says I will not be able to even use a crutch for a month. And just at a time when hope began to dawn. Oh, Lucy! I could cry my heart out."

"Which would be very silly and useless," commented Lucy.

"But what are we going to do? Just settled at work, bringing in nine dollars a week. A month!—why, you and grandma will starve in that time."

Certainly the situation was desperate. Grandma Gale, old, decrepit, barely had the strength to cook the meals.

"Something has got to be done," she decided. "If—oh, the daring idea! Oh, if I only could;" and her eyes shone. Then she drew nearer to the side of the couch.

"Bertram, dear," she said, "tell me something about your work, all about it. What you have to do, and where, and who you work with."

"I don't work with anybody," replied Bertram. "You see, I sit all day long on a stool in a sort of passageway where a boxed belt runs the machinery. Just outside are the freight cars into which the belt runs and then back. In the finishing room the tin cans are fed into the belt box. It runs slowly, so I have time to look at every can and see that it is perfect. They nearly all are. Where they aren't, I take them out and throw them through an open window into the waste dump."

"Are you alone all day?" pressed Lucy with strange insistency.

"Yes, when I get to the works I pass the watchman, who sees that I register on the time clock. Then I go at once to my little den. The only time I mix with the others is when I get my pay check."

"I see," murmured Lucy thoughtfully. "Bertram, we can't live unless someone works. Grandma mustn't know. Will we break it gently to her. It must be myself? Wait a minute."

Lucy went into the adjoining room, where Bertram slept regularly. She reappeared arrayed in his working suit. Covering her rolled up hair was the jaunty cap he wore. Bertram stared bewildered at this perfect prototype of himself.

"Do I make a fair boy!" she cried excitedly. "Oh! please tell me I will do, to take your place."

"Oh, Lucy, never!" gasped Bertram but she began a plausible argument with fervor. She felt awkward and shy as she started for the plant early the next morning. No one noticed her particularly. Bertram had fully posted her as to the location of the little closet he had worked in, and Lucy felt safe as she found herself an unheeded part of a great working machine.

"Oh, it was so easy, and I like the work," she told Bertram exuberantly. "No one notices me or speaks to me, so I guess I am making no mistakes. A few go to and fro along the corridor just outside the den. A young man, well dressed, comes in that way each day. He nodded and said 'Good Morning Bertram,' supposing I was you."

"That must be Hector Lane. His father owns the plant. He's nice and pleasant to everybody," said Bertram.

It was Friday, and Lucy's imposture was not even suspected. Then had come the usual lull of running the cans when she noticed a man slink quickly through the doorway of the corridor just below the little ventilating window that looked into the den. A minute later the agreeable young man who always spoke the cheering hail passed through the doorway. He carried a satchel—containing the pay roll of the plant, as Lucy knew later. In a flash the intruder leaped upon him, dealt him a heavy blow with a slingshot, tore the satchel from his hand and placed it on a ledge just beneath the window.

Young Mr. Lane had fallen like a log. His despoiler slunk towards the door and peered cautiously forth to be sure the coast was clear. Intuitively Lucy decided that the satchel must contain something of value. She reached down, secured it, touched an electric button that was a signal of something wrong with the can belt and as the satchel dropped from her nerveless fingers fell upon it on the floor, overcome with excitement and agitation.

There she was discovered by the shop foreman, and Hector Lane, too. When Lucy again opened her eyes she found herself in care of a forewoman. The latter dispatched a messenger to the office, and, wearing a bandage about his head, Hector Lane came upon the scene.

There was a good deal of explanation to make, and Lucy broke down and cried as she confessed her deception, but the magnetic eyes of the young man flashed with commendation as her cleverness in saving the pay roll was revealed.

It was natural that he should be interested in that lovely face and the circumstances of the Gale family. A few months later the interesting young man asked Lucy to change her name and all the troubles of the Gales were over.

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

A Milk Diet.

Eggs are very nutritious, especially when raw or lightly boiled or poached. Milk is a perfect and complete food for the very young and for old and feeble people, but for the average adult it is not sufficient alone. It certainly contains both food and drink, but the food is limited in quantity and not sufficient to make good the tissue waste incurred by the active life of a full grown man or woman in vigorous health.

A strict milk diet has, however, been proved to be efficacious in such opposite cases as extreme emaciation and excessive stoutness. In the latter case the cream is first removed, and in both cases the milk cure is combined with rest in bed and massage.

Needless Worry.

A patient young angler was diligently plying his rod and line.

"Do you know," bowled the irate owner, appearing on the scene, "that you are fishing in forbidden water? Yes, sir, preserved water!" And perhaps you will allow me to inform you that I have been to considerable expense in well stocking it with fish."

"Ah, yes!" exclaimed the angler languidly. "And with what fish, may I ask, have you so liberally replenished the stream?"

"With roach, sir, my favorite fish."

"Ah, well, then, in that case," blandly observed the youth, "there's no need for you to worry further, for I am fishing for trout."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Literature and Business.

An ambitious youth wrote an author for advice. "I am only making $10 a week at my business," he wrote, "and I think I could make a success in literature."

The author replied:

"I am only averaging $9 a week at my business. Tell me what yours is, and if you're really anxious to jump into literature I'll swap jobs with you."—Atlanta Constitution.

Immigrants and Literacy.

Scandinavians lead the world in point of literacy. Among every twenty German immigrants over fourteen years old is found one illiterate. Of immigrants from other nations it is claimed there is found an illiterate among every twenty-three Dutch, thirty-eight Irish, fifty-two Welsh, fifty-nine Bohemians, seventy-seven Finnish, 100 English and 143 Scottish, but the proportion among those who come from Scandinavia is one in 250. Among the Lithuanian immigrants and those from southern Italy half of them read no language.—Argonaut.

I find the tablets a harmless and efficient cure for all kinds of headache."

BAKU, THE BLACK CITY.

Chief Center of the Petroleum Industry in Russia.

Baku, on the Caspian sea, is the chief center of the petroleum industry in Russia. Baku, in surroundings destitute of vegetation, finds employment in the production of naphtha for 200,000 persons. This mixed population of Russians, Tartars and Persians is wholly dependent on the industry.

One of the most important groups of oil wells operated in the district constitutes what is known as the Black City. Here, encircled by bare hills, lie the naphtha beds, and rising from the blackened surface are a number of grim towers that indicate the position of the wells. The usual process of extraction is by a windlass that works a hollow spindle whereby the clammy mixture is drawn up. It is then conveyed to the refineries. To sink each well costs between $80,000 and $160,000, according to the nature of the soil and its depth. Fire, of course, is a big risk in the business.

Last year the daily output per well in Baku was sixty-four barrels of forty-two gallons each. This year the field has shrunk to fifty-eight barrels. During the first six months of the present year the quantity of naphtha produced in Baku amounted to 24,504,000 barrels against 25,738,000 in 1911. This shows a decrease of 4.98 per cent, although the number of wells in operation was augmented. While, therefore, there is no immediate fear of a naphtha famine, prices are not likely to go down.—Harper's Weekly.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Snoring.

Snoring during sleep is generally an evidence of some obstruction of the nasal passages. Possibly the person is suffering from adenoids or thickening of the nasal mucous membranes, and, if so, he should consult his family physician. If it is a mere habit and there is no sign of obstruction of any kind, then bandaging the mouth will sometimes bring about a cure. Apply the bandage sufficiently snug to prevent the air from getting into the mouth. Bandage the same as you would for a broken jaw, taking pains to close the mouth or place pieces of court plaster over the mouth, shutting the lips tight together.

Life's Lengthening Span.

A Chicago doctor prophesies that children born in 1950 will have an average length of life of 100 years. The prophecy is based on a study of statistics, which show that the average length of life has been steadily increasing for fifty years, and he thinks that the rate will be maintained.

Talk of minimum salaries for ministers is peculiar. They are already as minimum as they can be.

A wise man thinks before he speaks, but a fool speaks and then thinks of what he has been saying.

People profit more by experience in speculations in which they make than in those in which they lose.

Many a man has just missed being great, but the fact never has been chiselled on any one's tombstone.

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! Is tongue coated, breath feverish and stomach sour?

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleasing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company."

DOORPLATES IN NEW YORK.

No Longer the Proper Caper In the Residential Districts.

"People who get about New York much must have noticed one change that has taken place in the last few years," said the man with the red mustache, "and that is the abolition of doorplates for all except business purposes. There was a time, and not so very long ago, either, when everybody that aspired to any kind of social prominence decorated his front door with a plate on which his name was engraved.

"These plates were made of all kinds of metal, ranging from tin to solid silver, according to the prosperity of the owner. Some of them were very expensive. I happened to be in the engraving business when the doorplate craze was raging in its most virulent form, and I know for a fact that we turned out any number of plates that amounted up to and even beyond the fifty dollar mark.

"There was a peculiar thing. There were forty houses in one block. Each was ornamented with a doorplate, and on twenty-one of these houses the name was Green. I went over to that neighborhood the other day out of curiosity. There are no doorplates there now, and I had no means of ascertaining whether the Green colony still sticks to its old haunts."—New York Times.

Novel Electric Advertising.

A western retail dealer is securing for himself a measure of publicity quite out of proportion to its cost. This dealer has had all the lamps in his store wired to a switch, which can be operated by a push button outside the entrance. Over the button there is a sign reading, "You Can See Our Store by Pushing the Button." Many of those who pass during the evening hours yield to their curiosity and push the button, whereupon the entire interior is lighted. The lamps are cut off automatically as soon as the switch is released, and the scheme has caused considerable comment.

GIN PILLS AND THE SPANISH "FLU"

Everybody knows that one of the most depressing and dangerous complaints resulting from the attack of Spanish Influenza — is weakened kidneys.

Hundreds of persons are now suffering worry and annoyance from Kidney disorders because they failed to remedy the detrimental effects left by the "Flu."

But there are other people who are not suffering—they are the people who used Gin Pills and restored their kidneys to their proper state of health again.

From all parts of the country letters in large numbers are coming in to us stating that Gin Pills have proven just the remedy required. They strengthened the weakened kidneys and banished annoyance and worry.

Gin Pills have always been accepted as the universal remedy for Kidney or Bladder Trouble—now they make good again, as the best remedy for after the "Flu" convalescence.

If you have suffered from the "Flu" try Gin Pills and safeguard yourself against the possibilities of more serious kidney disorders.

ADMISSION TO WEST POINT.

What the Proposed Change In Conditions Would Accomplish.

The proposition is under consideration for a change in the conditions for admission to West Point.

It is not proposed to lower the standards of admission, but to admit any designated candidate who has passed without conditions the entrance examinations to a university or college the standing of which is satisfactory to the academic board. It is also proposed to admit those who have passed what is known as the American college board examinations without conditions, provided in both cases that the mathematical standard is equal to that required for admission to West Point. Of course such candidates will be subject to the same physical examination as others.

It is believed that this is a step forward, as it will enable young men who are preparing for college to go on and complete their education if they should have failed to secure an appointment to West Point. They can thus prepare for college and for West Point at the same time, and this plan will put West Point in line to secure some of the brightest young men who are seeking a higher education.

Not only will it decrease the number of vacancies at the academy, but it is the general belief that young men selected from those prepared for college will have a broader education and less liable to fail if they should enter the academy. At the same time this change will not prevent young men from taking a special course of study for West Point.—Army and Navy Journal.

THIS IS REALLY TOO BAD!

We Don't Speak Good English and Have Mighty Poor Literature.

When the American ambassador, Walter Hines Page, tells us—in some degree, at least, seriously—that better English is spoken in America than in England it really is a little too much. At the Savage club dinner the other evening he said. "On our side of the Atlantic we speak English better than you do and more of it!" The Americans are a people (or air a people) that, as Charles Dickens told them, liked to be "cracked up." They are rich They are, or seem to be, confident of themselves. They excel at the business of games. They make things "hum." But it is absurd to pretend they speak good English.

Their English and their spelling of English—which, we are sorry to say, is imitated by English writers who should know better—are most unpleasant. Their twang is sometimes so. Nor is American literature of much account. The Americans, it is true, have had Emerson and Walt Whitman, two great and original writers and thinkers, and they have had Hawthorne. Bret Harte, too, counts in a smaller way, while William Cullen Bryant wrote a wonderful little poem, "To a Waterfowl." But the list of their writers of genius or even high talents is painfully restricted.—London Saturday Review.

ROYAL ETIQUETTE IN JAPAN.

A Member of the Imperial Family Can Die Only In Tokyo.

Surely there never was a more grim journey made than that of the dowager empress of Japan when she came for the last time to Tokyo.

She had died in her palace in the country. But the Japanese hold that a member of the imperial family can die nowhere except in Tokyo. Therefore the dead empress, theoretically still alive, journeyed from her country place to the palace in Tokyo with all the ceremonial that attended her movements when living.

She traveled in the royal railway car and was driven through the streets to the palace in a court carriage with the blinds closely drawn. The ministers and high state officials who greeted her on her past arrivals in the capital were at the station as usual and showed in no way that on this occasion they were meeting the corpse of the empress.

Troops lined the streets and presented arms as she passed. Only the great crowds in the streets, standing in silence instead of loudly cheering, betrayed the fact that the imperial carriage contained a dead woman.—New York Sun.

Willing Himself Well.

An interesting example of a man willing himself well is that of "Original" Walker. The thing was the work of a moment. He had been reading Cicero's "De Oratore," and some passage suggested to him the expediency of making the improvement of his health his study. "I rose from my book," he writes, "stood bolt upright and determined to be well. In pursuance of my resolution I tried many extremes, was guilty of many absurdities and committed many errors amid the remonstrances and ridicule of those around me. I persevered, nevertheless, and it is now, I believe, full sixteen years since I have had any medical advice or taken any medicine or anything whatever by way of medicine."—London Chronicle.

Swam Too Long.

The attorneys for the prosecution and defense had been allowed fifteen minutes each to argue the case. The attorney for the defense had commenced his argument with an allusion to the swimming hole of his boyhood days. He told in flowery oratory of the balmy air, the singing birds, the joy of youth, the delights of the cool water. And in the midst of it he was interrupted by the drawling voice of the judge. "Come out, Chawncey," he said, "and put on your clothes. Your fifteen minutes are up."

New York's Public Schools.

Public education in New York city began with the founding of the Free School society in 1805. The society started in a small way, depending for a time upon public subscription. By an act of the legislature in 1842 the board of education was established. The Free School society continued to conduct its schools until 1853, when, by mutual consent, they were all taken over by the board.—New York American.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers —Meat forms uric acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Grade Crossing Signals.

Danger signals at grade crossings being installed by one of the eastern railroads are expected to prove to be very effective. As soon as a train comes within a mile of the crossing the signal shows a red light and a gong that can be heard 500 yards away begins to ring. Both warnings continue to act until the train has passed when the gong ceases and the red light changes to white. Should the wires become deranged or should anything happen to the mechanism, the signal on the disk flashes to danger and remains there until repairs are made.

TO SUPPORT PROPOSAL

Portuguese Delegate Endorses Wilson's Plan for League of Nations.

READY TO BEGIN

(By Henry Wood.)
(United Press Service.)

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Portugal will support President Wilson's plan for the league of nations to the limit, Egas Moniz, Foreign Minister, told the United Press to-day.

Moniz thus aligned himself with the French, Italian and Spanish statesmen whom the President sinces his arrival, has arrayed in favour of the league. Moniz heads the Portuguese peace delegation which, aside from the United States, is the only belligerent to date which is ready to begin the conferences.

"In the peace conference we will support to the fullest degree President Wilson's programme for the league of nations," said Moniz.

DENIES THE EXISTENCE OF A CRISIS

Associated Press:

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—Berlin continues to deny the existence of a crisis.

Developments, however, seem to be rapidly approaching a point where the Ebert Hasse Cabinet will no longer be able to assert its authority. Berlin newspapers reflect apprehension pervading all circles. The Vossiche Zeitung, for instance, says six men who remain in the Government are really no longer in the Government. According to a Copenhagen newspaper despatch of Friday, the Workmen's and Soldiers' Central Council has been summoned to meet with a view of reconstructing the Government in Berlin. This report was contained in a Berlin despatch to the Copenhagen "Berlingske Tidende."

DEPARTMENT HASN'T DECIDED YET TO RAISE SCHOOL AG

Dr. Merchant, of the Department of Education, discussed with the local Board of Education on Thursday night the probable effects of Hon. Dr. Cody's proposed raising of the public school age for compulsory attendance from fourteen to sixteen years. The Board was informed that there has been nothing definitely decided yet by the Minister. If the age is advanced two years it will necessarily increase the attendance at all the schools and probably create a congestion even in those that were most recently built.

Mr. Eastwood, as chairman, took advantage of Dr. Merchant's visit to emphasize Peterborough's claims for aid to a technical school. Some members of the Board are hoping that the Federal and Provincial Governments will each contribute one-third of the cost of a technical school that has been proposed for this city. The main result of the interview with Dr. Merchant was the securing of exact information on the Department of Education's plans and contemplations.

TRAVELLERS ENDORSE CANDIDATES

Aspirants to the Board of Aldermen who were endorsed by the Commercial Travellers' meeting held in the Royal Theatre this morning, were:

J. J. Turner,
James Hamilton,
Harry Phelan,
R. N. Jones,
John Edgar,
W. H. Taylor,
A. H. Stratton,
Robert Morrison.

"We'd better pick out the best of a bad bunch and let the rest take their chances," said one member, and this seemed to voice the sentiments of the meeting.

Some thought that the heavy responsibilities of 1919 should not be placed in the hands of men who hold for some "sect."

Another meeting will be held on Sunday or Monday when a complete list will be endorsed.

French Soldiers Do Not Want to Know the Meaning of War

Frenchmen Demand a Permanent Kind of Peace—The Spread of Bolshevism.

WAR PROFITEERS

(By John DeGandt.)
(United Press Service.)

PARIS, Dec. 28. — Workmen of France, determined to prevent future wars, will insist on a peace based on President Wilson's programme, Albert Thomas, Minister of Munitions, told the United Press to-day. He said he based this statement on information obtained from thousands of French soldiers.

"We do not want our descendants to engage in another war; we do not want them even to know the meaning of war," declared Thomas, who is a Socialist and labour leader.

Permanent Peace.

"Thousands of poilus have told me this. The French workmen demand that kind of peace. They did everything possible to win this war against wars, but they have always been fundamentally pacific. Now they are equally determined on a Wilsonian peace.

"I am glad to say that President Wilson's fourteen points are restoring the unity of French Socialists. Divided on other questions they unanimously endorse his views and are confident of his wisdom and right judgment.

"The league of nations is the dearest ideal of French labour. Fully understanding its necessity the workmen know it does not matter whether the league satisfied war profiteers who would put a ban on mankind.

"When the Bolsheviki revolution began the Russian Ambassador told me it would not last more than a fortnight. Nearly fifteen months have elapsed and the Bolshevik army now numbers approximately 300,000. Russian regeneration is impossible with Bolshevik from what I have learned through a visit there. vuick intervention is necessary, but it must be a democratic intervention by democratic powers, including the United States. They must respond to the wishes of the different Russian nationalities. Then a change may be expected."

TROOPS RENEWED THE BOMBARDMENT

Several Mutinous Sailors Were Killed and Others Surrendered.

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—Government troops renewed bombardment of the Royal Palace this morning, killing several of the mutinous sailors entrenched there. The defenders finally surrendered.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, with an army of loyal troops, is reported to be marching on Berlin to restore order. The Bolsheviks still control the former Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts.

Value of the Average Man

Men Who Are Worth $1.50 a Day Below the Collar.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 28. — "Statistics show the average worth of a man is $1.50 a day — from his collar down. His actual worth depends on how he uses that portion of his body from his collar up," F. R. Bigler, vocational officer of the rehabilitation division, Federal Board for Vocational Education, of District No. 10, comprising Minnesota and North and South Dakota, told more than one hundred wounded soldiers at Fort Snelling.

While Mr. Bigler was addressing the convalescent wounded men in the post Y. M. C. A. Building, Harry W. Jones, director of rehabilitation work in District No. 10, was discussing vocational training plans with the soldiers who have been wounded so severely they still are unable to leave their beds. Both speakers found the disabled officers and men in a receptive mood.

MEXICAN WANTS CHANCE.

"They have a bright lot of men and they are interested in the outlook for their future welfare," Mr. Jones said. "There was one Mexican lad among the bed patients, and even he expressed a desire to take advantage of the opportunity of training which the Federal Government has offered all soldiers entitled to compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act.

Mr. Bigler illustrated his informal talk with pictures of the various ways in which disabled soldiers may be employed. He showed pictures of Mike Dowling, of Minnesota, and other crippled men who have been successful despite their physical conditions.

"You have heard a lot about training cripples to work," Mr. Bigler said, "but we also are going to train the soldiers of this district to combine play with work, for you men don't work to work all the time."

Mr. Bigler showed how simple it is for a one-armed man to bait a fishhook, eat tough steaks, wash his face and tickle the keys of a piano. As Mr. Bigler has lost an arm and a leg, the disabled soldiers at Fort Snelling listened to his advice with more sympathy than they perhaps would have given the same sort of talk by a physically perfect man.

SHOWS HOW IT'S DONE.

"The loss of one hand or one foot cuts no ice with you men," he said. "In fact, we shouldn't refer to it as a loss. When you entered the army you gave your whole body to Uncle Sam, and you are lucky that he took only a hand or a foot. Uncle Sam appreciates the gift, nevertheless, and he is going to give you a chance to return to civil life better equipped to earn a livelihood than before you entered service.

"Don't jump at the first job that is offered you. It will be only temporary. Above all, avoid political jobs. They will last only as long as your friends are in the saddle. Talk it over with Uncle Sam's vocational officers before you enter on your life's work. We want to help you to help yourself to make good."

Dozens of soldiers in the audience asked the speaker questions concerning the training proposed and the compensation offered while the soldier is being trained.

THE WEATHER

Cold again last night, the lowest figure being 4 degrees below zero. Once more the weather moderated towards morning and went above zero. There was a beautiful display of rime or hoarfrost on the trees this morning, the tiniest twig bearing it share of the frozen vapor, and making a spectacle not frequently seen. This rime is supposed to foretell a thaw or mild weather, but is not very reliable.—W. P.

HOW GALLANT E-14 RAN THE GAUNTLET

British Submarine Fought Through Hail of Shells to the End.

LONDON.—The finest of all tales of the achievements of British submarines in war time is now completed by the official story of the sinking of the famous submarine E-14 off the Dardanelles early in 1918, with the loss of her commander, Lieutenant - Commander Geoffrey White, and all except seven of the crew.

The E-14 left Mudros on the evening of January 27, and proceeded up the Dardanelles to search for the Goeben. After diving under submarine nets, she found that the Goeben, which the enemy had moved a few hours previously, had gone, so Commander White turned back, keeping a sharp lookout for enemy craft.

A torpedo was fired at a ship which, it transpired, carried the Goeben's ammunition, causing a heavy explosion, which extinguished the submarine's lights and sprang the forehatch. Leaking badly, the submarine rose to within fifteen feet of the surface. Land forts immediately opened a heavy fire, but did not hit her. The E-14 submerged to 100 feet and continued on her course, but became unsteady and kept diving, so she was brought to the surface. She could no longer be relied upon under water, and only three bottles of air were left. A heavy fire immediately opened from both sides of the straits, and a shell hit the hull just over the wardroom, destroying the upper steering gear.

An E-14 survivor says: "Orders were given to steer from below, and we ran the gauntlet for half an hour, only a few shots hitting us. The captain, seeing it was hopeless to escape, ran towards the shore. His last word were: 'We are in God's hands.' Only a few seconds later I looked for him and saw his body, mangled by shellfire, roll into the water and go under. The last shell hit the starboard saddle tank, killing all, I believe.

The submarine soon afterwards ran into a sandbank close in shore, and the Turks picked up the survivors.

ELECTION RESULTS

Counting Began This Morning and Final Result Will be Known Some Time To-day.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Counting began this morning of ballots cast at the recent general election and the final result will be known before the day is over in all probability. With the counting starting at 10 o'clock a large proportion of outstanding returns were expected to be available about midday, and all the rest before night, with the exception of one constituency.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Dec. 28. — The first announcement of the results of the parliamentary elections of December 14 made public to-day showed a victory for the Coalitionists.

Morris, Coalition candidate for the House of Commons, won over Mrs. Bespart, Labour candidate, 7,231 to 5,634.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

The coming parliament, the first under the new Reform Act, will have 707 members, or 37 more than the last parliament. Of these 122 already have been returned, either unopposed or for universities where conditions enable an immediate declaration of results. Those returned comprise 51 Coalition Unionists, 31 Coalition Liberals, 12 Laborites, one Independent Irish Nationalist and 26 Sinn Feiners.

The general indifference over the election justifies the expectation of small polls, and with the exception of professional politicians, nobody is excited over the results.

Some of the newspapers confidently predict a big victory for the Coalition government under the leadership of Premier Lloyd George. This is based mainly on home indications, and does not take into account the votes of the soldiers and sailors abroad, of whose attitude towards the various parties little is known. According to some of the reports the soldiers and sailors were mostly indifferent to the election and did not trouble to vote. Other reports differ and the estimates of the number of soldiers and sailors who voted are from 30 to 70 per cent. of the whole. The Laborites apparently are banking on the soldiers' vote.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, December 28. — (Later.) —At 1.30 o'clock the election returns showed this result:

Coalition Unionists	127
Coalition Liberals	56
Unionists	5
Liberals	2
Labor	23
Irish Nationalists	1
Sinn Feiners	26
Independents	1

It is evidently a sweeping victory for Lloyd George.

In Cambridge, Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, Coalition Unionist, defeated Rev. T. R. Williams, Labourite, by 11,553 to 3,784. Sir Albert Stanley, President of the Board of Trade, was re-elected for Ashton-Under-Lyne against Litster, soldier candidate. Arthur Henderson, President of the Labour party, and former member of the Cabinet, also Philip Snowden, Labourite Pacifist, are both defeated by Coalitionists.

New Honour For Wilson

Will Look to Wilson to Save Austria From Final Smash Up.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 28.—President Wilson may be proclaimed first honourary President of the German-Austrian republic, the Wiener Neues Journal declares, according to a despatch from Vienna to-day.

"A new superstitution is spreading throughout Austria that President Wilson is really the late Crown Prince Rudolf, whose death many did not believe," the newspaper says.

"In lower Austria it is popularly believed that Wilson will save Austria from a final smash up."

Crown Prince Rudolf, heir to the late Emperor Franz Josef, mysteriously disappeared several years ago. His death was never authentically established.

Interesting Address in George Street Church by Lieut. Gordon Manning

The Speaker Was Three Years in the Imperial Army and Went Through Some Heavy Fighting.

BATTLE OF SOMME

A vivid account of life with the British Army told by Lieut. H. Gordon Manning, occupied the attention of a large audience at George Street Methodist Church last evening.

Dr. J. E. Middleton, teacher of the Anti-Can't Organized Class, under whose auspices the meeting was held, was the chairman of the evening.

Mr. J. S. Dyer, an entertainer from Toronto, kept the audience in fits of laughter with his jokes and laugh-provoking Irish and Canadian songs. His impersonation of an old Frenchman, recounting his early life was especially appreciated.

Lieutenant Gordon Manning, brother-in-law of Dr. J. E. Middleton, has been many months in the United States lecturing on the Chautauqua circuits and spoke convincingly of the German propoganda which is still being disseminated by the Germans in order to establish Germany on the some footing as she occupied before the war.

Heavy Fighting.

Lieutenant Manning was three years in the Imperial Army, with the "Contemptibles" when they first landed in France. Attached to the 1st Battalion of the Northamptonshires in the 1st British Division he saw some of the heaviest fighting of the war. And gave several authenticated accounts of Hun savagery, to wounded men—shooting wounded men in No Man's Land, besides the bombing of the Canadian Hospitals at Etaples, where he happened to be at the time.

"In every way they consistently violated international law," stated Lieut. Manning.

Killed the Wounded.

"It was part of their policy to kill every wounded man, because, that man may recover and fight against them again." Souvenirs from the front line trenches were displayed—two types of British gas helmets, the familiar "Gott Mitt Uns" German belt buckle, and the Hun saw-edge bayonet.

He stated that the idea of making the German bayonet with a saw-edge was conceived by a man who had in mind the usefulness of the bayonet as a saw in domestic use But the "enlightened" German General Staff thought it would be a good thing to mutilate their enemies with, and that is how this weapon of cruelty came to be used in this war.

Repairing barb-wires in No Man's Land and fallen-in trenches at night, while the Germans flew up brilliant flares was vividly described by the Lieutenant.

Battle of Somme.

The great battle of the Somme also formed part of his account. The battle, in which our own Canadian Corps was so vitally concerned, lasted for a period of six months. The objectives were not obtained for the reason that the first attack was premature because of the necessity to relieve the heavy pressure at Verdun, which the German Crown Prince was attacking with his whole force. Then the weather was very wet and this impeded operations greatly.

"Rugby or hockey is not in it with an air battle," said the Lieutenant.

"I have seen many of them and it is very exciting."

Use of Decoys.

He described the use of decoys by the British in which a British plane will deliberately court disaster in order that a British plane (unknown to the Hun) may get above its opponent thereby relieving the front of another Hun machine.

At the battle of Hooge Lieutenant Manning was severely wounded. A Lance-Corporal in his company dragged him back under cover of darkness from No Man's Land to the British trenches. This ended the speaker's spell of active service. He was afterwards used in the United States as a war speaker.

After the address Lieutenant Manning at the Parsonage was presented with a gold-headed ebony cane by Mr. Fremont Walton Doane, President of the Anti-Cant't Class.

The Irish Republic

Posters to Appear in All Parts of Ireland To-day.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Posters will appear in every parish in Ireland to-day announcing that the Irish Republic has come into being, says the Express. The newspaper adds that the Sinn Feiners, in the recent election, swept Leinster, Munster and Connaught. Seventy members of Parliament were elected by the party, but they will not take their seats. It is said by the Express that a central Sinn Fein Council will be established in Dublin almost immediately and will call itself the Irish Parliament. If the Government orders its disbandment, it is said, it will establish itself elsewhere, and if necessary, move from place to place.

The Armistice Was Violated

British Fleet Returns From Trip Through the Kiel Canal.

LONDON, Dec. 28. —(British Wireless Service.)—Bearing an Allied Commission which inspected German naval bases and airship and seaplane stations, under the terms of the armistice, the British battleship "Hercules" has returned to her home port. During the trip, fraught with peril, many German ports were visited and preliminary arrangements for the surrender of German airplanes were made. A dramatic episode of the voyage was the passage of Kiel canal on December 18. Accompanied by the British destroyers, "Verdun" and "Viceroy," the "Hercules" gave the Germans along the banks of the canal their first sight of a British flag since 1914.

The Kiel Canal Trip.

When the light British cruisers passed through, Germans who watched the ships were for the most part indifferent and curious, but not infrequently women and children waved their hands at the sailors. There was not the slightest response from the ships. Discipline on board German warships is very low according to officers of the "Hercules." They found, on the first enemy ship boarded, that sailors were lounging about and the ships were in bad condition as a result of neglect. This was in direct violation of the terms of the armistice, and drastic action was taken by the inspecting officer. He notified the Germans that the ships must be cleared of sailors, and if his orders were not obeyed he would return to the Hercules and report that he was obstructed in his work. Fearful of the probable consequences, the German seamen left their ships at once.

Allied Representatives.

Admiral Sir Montague Browning, head of the Commission, was accompanied by the best men from the Allied nations available for the work. Admiral Goette, of the German navy, seems to be the only senior German officer still attending to his duties. Admiral Von Scheer and Admiral Von Ripper apparently have disappeared into the same obscurity which hides General Ludendorff and other former leaders, who have sought safety in retirement.

THE RED SHIELD DRIVE.

The Salvation Army campaign for one million dollars to assist in the wonderful war work the Army has been and is carrying on is drawing near, and it should be only necessary to impress upon the people of Canada the fact that the efforts of the Salvationists are needed at the present time, scarcely less than during the actual fighting, to ensure a most generous response to the appeal. The Salvation Army war work is the only effort of its kind that has not been criticised. Ask any returned soldier what he thinks of the work of the Army overseas and he'll enthusiastically commend it. This is a test that any citizen can try and the verdict of the men for whose benefit the work is being conducted can surely be accepted as most important. Raymond B. Fosdick, chairman of the Commission of Training Camp Activities of the American War Department, says: "Somewhat to my surprise I found the Salvation Army probably the most popular organization in France with the troops. Its simple, unadorned service seems to have reached the hearts of our men." Sergt. W. E. Turley, secretary of the Ontario Provincial branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, speaking of the need of a continuance of the Salvation Army work until the Canadian army is demobilized, remarks: "Comfort found in the Salvation Army Huts would do much to lessen their chafing at the delay in returning them to the greater comfort of their homes in Canada. Our comrades over there have earned all the happiness we can give them in peace or war and we who have been fortunate enough to return from the battlefield will help the Salvation Army to obtain its objective."

Testimonials such as these, which could be multiplied many times, should make the task of raising the amount aimed at by the Salvation Army an easy task.

THE RETURNING SOLDIERS.

Already some thousands of the Canadian soldiers have arrived home from Europe and thousands more are on the way. A returned colonel, in a published interview, has said there is much dissatisfaction among the Canadian troops at the slowness of the arrangements for the soldiers' return. On the other hand, the representatives of the large organization of returned men that has been formed at home—the Great War Veterans' Association—have argued that the return movement is quite rapid enough, and that the effort to secure employment for the men will be facilitated by it much more than by having larger numbers brought bac kat once. The War Veterans view the matter from the standpoint of those already at home. The returning colonel spoke what he regarded as the mind of the soldiers who are still overseas. It is the difference of viewpoint that causes the difference of opinion as to which is the better policy. The men who have been overseas for a long time, and willing enough to remain when they were needed, now that the war is over are naturally anxious to return as quickly as possible. The most speedy arrangements for their transportation will hardly keep pace with their desire to see their homes and families again. There is, however, much wisdom in the suggestion of the Veterans already home, that a too rapid demobilization may be productive of trouble.

There has lately been a quick change in the situation respecting employment. For three years the demand for men in most lines of business has exceeded the supply. There has been an abundance of work at high wages. That situation is rapidly changing, so far at least as the work is concerned; the wages situation will readjust itself later. The problem of unemployment is already beginning to present itself in a sharp form. Not all the soldiers who have come back have found suitable work. The authorities and the large employers of labour appear to be doing what they can to meet this situation. Their efforts will not be helped if great bodies of men are brought home immediately and quickly relieved of their uniforms. It is not in the interest of the soldiers that they be brought home in such great numbers as will flood the labour market. If the return movement is slower than some would wish, it may for that very reason be in the end beneficial to the men and to the community generally.— The Journal of Commerce.

AN ENTENTE IN LIBERALISM.

There is much fod for thought in the letter addressed by Dr. John Hunter of Toronto ,to the Globe, in which he proposes an entente cordiale among the Liberals of Canada as the best solution of the present involved political situation. Dr. Hunter believes with thousands of others, that Canadian Liberals should find in the obligations and opportunities that peace has brought to Canada, a chance to reunite and bestow their time and energy.

"Canada is at the cross roads," says Dr. Hunter, "and has to choose which one of these three—Unionists, Liberals or the new Rogerite-Tory aggregation—is to shape her future. Each has its distinctive traits. Unionists, however honest and capable, would have to guide the ship of State very circumspectly, because if it were to attack either of the other belligerents it could not safely do so without the risk of a mutiny in its own crew. Unionists must of necessity adopt a "laissez faire" policy.

Canada with an "Entente Cordiale" amongst Liberals, could reproduce even on a grander scale that "Golden Age 1896-1911" of unity, progress and prosperity, the finest in Canadian history. Canada during those fifteen years arose to a consciousness of her true position, so aptly defined by Kipling, "A daughter in her mother's house, but mistress in her own." Immigrants in hundreds of thousands, native-born Canadians, ceased crossing to the U.S., the fangs of the "punk old National Policy" extracted and trade enormously increased. No scandals or fiery race or creed feuds marred the political renaissance between 1896 and 1911.

The Hon. "Bob' Rogers gave a "free feed" recently to his hungry followers and tried very hard to resuscitate the old N. P. He would have his followers return with him as their leader to the party catacombs, containing the relics of those awful years—1878-1896. In that catacomb are to be found the political skeletons of the "wilderness period" in Canadian history—scandals rampant, and stagnation everywhere, immigration practically nil, and an unbroken procession of trainloads of native-born Canadians rushing over to the United States, rebellion in the Northwest, menacing racial and creed strife, depressing annual deficits and only sub-consciousness of Canadian self-reliance. If the Hon. "Bob's" political "bill of fare" isn't "crow," what is it?

Will not any Canadian who takes an intelligent and impartial view of the possibilities of success with a Unionist, Liberal, or a Rogerite-Tory aggregation be forced to the conclusion that an immediate "Entente Cordiale" amongst the Liberals would give Canada the only form of government thoroughly competent to meet the new conditions efficiently, and to make the best possible use of the opportunities within her reach."

WAY OF A TRAIN IN SPAIN.

Even the Expresses Creep Along as Though They Were Weary.

The train this morning is a correo (express), but everything is so new that you feel no more hurried than the train and rather enjoy its ways. It creeps into the station quietly and carefully, as if in fear that some hen might have laid one of those numerous fine Spanish eggs on the track and it might get broken in a too reckless approach. Sometimes—but this doesn't happen frequently—it slows up when near to one of the smallest of the multitudinous stations and speaks by without stopping, as if ashamed or afraid.

When it does come to a standstill it listlessly slides back a bit and then slides forward a bit and then rights itself once more and then straightens up with a jerk, as if it were tired and its muscles not obedient to will. Then for a few moments every one cautiously waits to see what further it intends.

About the time it is thoroughly stopped some one pulls at the cord attached to the tongue of the station bell and gives three signals to let the passengers—and any one else who may be interested—know that the train has officially arrived, and a station employee calls out, "San Pablo, ocho minutos!" meaning that there will be eight minutes of waiting. — Grant Showerman in Atlantic.

A Distinction.

"Does he ever have much to say?"

"No, but that doesn't keep him from talking a great deal."—Detroit Free Press.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

2,000 more Canadians have sailed for Siberia. The protests from all parts of Canada against the sending of this expedition have apparently had no effect.

German war profiteers are said to be using aeroplanes to get their booty out of the country. Canadian gentry of the same kind would require Zeppelins to transport their spoils.

Spain, who did nothing for the Allies in the war, makes the modest little request that Gibraltar be handed over to her. There is just as much chance of the Germans getting their navy back.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Chilblains.

Patients who are martyrs to chilblains have not only been immediately relieved, but have had no recurrence of this annual trouble during the winter following after treatment with the galvanic current. The hands and feet are placed in two baths of saline water into which the galvanic current is directed. The current is applied at whatever intensity can be supported by the patient; if the chilblains are inflamed it may be reduced to five or six milliamperes, and the result is correspondingly slow, but sure.

The more irritating spots may be covered with collodion before treatment. The sittings are repeated daily for as long as necessary, each sitting lasting twenty minutes, and the current being passed in one direction for the first ten minutes and in the opposite direction for the second ten. From the first sitting the itching diminishes or disappears.

RAILWAY FATALITIES.

They Are Very Few, Considering the Number of Passengers.

Railway travel in the United States is not so dangerous to life as the frequent disasters might lead us to believe. The number of passengers killed annually shrinks into insignificance by comparison with the number who are carried over the roads in safety.

A New York mathematician estimates the average length of a railway journey in the United States as thirty-four miles. The record of fatal accidents shows that on the average 2,275,122 such journeys are taken in safety to each one which results in killing a passenger.

If a man were to start riding out these 2,275,122 safe journeys at the rate of two per day for each business day in the year it would take him 4,792 years to complete this amount of railroad travel. To have begun riding so that he would meet his death in a railroad accident during the present year he would have had to begin his trips more than 1,800 years before the Christian era.

As fatal railroad accidents are fewer in England, Germany and other countries than here the showing becomes all the more favorable to the safety of railroad travel when the whole world is taken into consideradon, rather than the United States alone.—New York American.

Nothing to Offer.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner. "My lawyer took my last farthing."—London Mail.

Back From Hun Prison Camp He Tells of Hardships That Led to Insanity and Suicide

Aid Through Red Cross Prevented Death of Almost Entire Number, Says B. E. Cameron.

New York, Dec. 28.—"If we have been forced to subsist exclusively on what the Germans gave us less than three per cent of my fellow prisoners, I am confident, would have survived."

In these words Bruce E. Cameron, a young Canadian who just returned to his home in this city, summarized his nightmare memories of the three years and nine months of existence he had endured in the German prison camp on the race track enclosure at Ruhleben, near Berlin. He was a student of music in Dresden, Saxony, when the war broke out. In Novembe 1914, while engaged in argument in a public place, he resented with some heat the charge that the British were using dumdum bullets. A few days later, on November 8, he was arrested on a charge of having insulted the country, uttering seditious words.

Incarcerated at first in the Government penitentiary at Bautzen where his associates were highwaymen and murderers he was transferred later to the prison encampment at Ruhleben. This was exclusively a civilian prison camp. There were about five thousand prisoners there of, whom fifteen hundred were seamen interned from British merchant ships that were in German ports when the war broke out

Stalls as Cells

The stalls of the race track paddocks were used as cells, eight or ten men at first being crowded into each stall, which still reeked of the odors of stable litter. The number in each stall later was reduced to six men and after the camp became better organized eight or ten frame barracks built to extend the accomodation tions Hundreds of prisoners also slept under armed guard in the grandstands and open field seats In each of the barracks there were 27 stable and in each stall were housed six men

The Germans supplied to every prisoner on blanket, one bit of bagging filled with damp straw as a "shake-down" on which to sleep, one bowl, which might be used either for washing purposes or as a receptacle for the nondescript "soup," coffee or cocoa served occasionally, and one thin, cheap, towel, which, like the blankets, was expected to last indefinitely Those men who enjoyed the use of better toilet facilities had to procur them by bribing the guards, or otherwise through their own resources

"The food," said Mr. Cameron "was simply rotten; no other word would do it justice. Once a day there was at first, an issue of a loaf apiece of soggy black bread much inferior to the war bread served to the soldiers. Often it contained particles of straw and sand, which caused many of the prisoners to become ill with stomach and intestinal disorders. As food became scarce in Germany a two pound loaf of this heavy black bread had to last five men for one day, and nothing else was served for the morning repast. What they called tea or coffee or cocoa was horrible stuff, lacking wholly the taste of those beverages I don't know what they were made from

All Soup Alike

"At the midday meal they sometimes gave us cabbage soup or what was called soup of some other kind. It was all equally thin and tasteless. The only recognizable ingredient I remember to have identified regular was caroway seed On some days boiled potatoes were issued instead of soup. During the latter years it was forbidden to serve potatoes except in their skins. Inside the skins was usually found the tubers rotted or spoiled by frost or decomposition. In America or Canada we would not have fed them to pigs The only meal doled out was an occasional bite of the cheapest kind of black, German sausage about as big as your index finger. Three or four times a week we had a mixture of rice and prunes until we all grew sick of this diet

"After the first eight months of my prison life arrangements became effective whereby we each received four parcels of food montly from England, and, through the Red Cross bakeries set up in Denmark, bread reached us when it was not more than five days old. So far as the Germans were concerned, even when they had plenty, they never gave us enough. Such a thing as a piece of soap was unknown. Through the coldest days and nights of winter the heating arrangements of the barracks were pitifully inadequate and we shivered under our ragged blankets. More than a hundred men whom I knew died and a hundred others went insane, while half a dozen took their own lives. I know of thirty other Englishmen who have died within three weeks after their release and return to England as a result of their maltreatment.

Some Distinguished Prisoners

Mr. Cameron named as some of his fellow prisoners a nephew of Arthur J. Balfour, British Minister of State; the youngest son of Lord Davenport, Sir Timothy Eden and Jack Cameron, Fred Pentland, Sam Wolstenholme and Jack Brearly, all well-known men in the British football world. The prisoners were released ten days after the signing of the armistice Mr. Cameron returned to America on board the Canadian Pacific steamship, Melita, arriving in St. John's, N. S., and coming thence to New York, where he arrived last Monday.

One of the most prized souvenirs of his internment is a pair of dice molded by his fingers from the black "bread" served them, which hardened after a few hours of exposure into a substance seemingly as hard as bone or ivory. These bread dice, when tossed upon a table clicked as resonantly as genuine "bones."

Steel Prices Are Easing Off

Shell Shop Outfits Not Very Much in Demand.

The end of 1918 finds the machine tool trade far from the condition in which it moved at the outset of the year. Now it is simply a matter of making adjustments following cancellations, and otherwise removing the traces of war from the trade. It is not likely that much of the maenery used in shell shops will be traded in to any extent. Dealers, as a general thing, are not looking for that class of trade. There are exceptions to this, of course. This week, a shell shop sold a dozen lathes that had been welll cared for to a dealer. They can be turned back to general purpose machines. The man who sold them had made the money out of them on shell work, and the dealer took them in at a price that would enable him to hold them for a few years, if necessary. But such a trade is the exception rather than the rule. There is certainly no general disposition on the part of dealers to go ahead and stock up on shell shop outfits. On the other hand, they are keeping well away from it in most cases.

STEEL MARKET

The steel market is waiting for the investors to come along. By the investor is meant the man who is going to build an addition to a shop, erect a hotel, or some structure that calls for steel. Such ventures are competative. They have to face the competition of similar establishments that were built when prices were much lower. If they can save ten per cent, by waiting a year, the chances are that they are going to wait. The investor has noticed the first signs of the prices of steel easing off, and he naturally watches for the next step in the same direction. Each reduction brings him nearer the stage where he can proceed without taking on a much heavier load than the man with whom he will have tocompete.

There is no improvement in the scrap metal situation. It is as quiet as it could possibly be. Prices are simply what buyer and seller agrees upon, and the price often hangs on the degree af urgency that enters into the sale.—Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News.

As Candidate for Alderman

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having had your confidence for the past five years as a member of your City Council, I again ask your approval.

I have, in looking after your interests, tried to be useful, helpful and practical. Such details as have been entrusted to my care have been attended to efficiently and carefully.

There has been little opportunity in the past four war years for what is termed "progressive enterprise" for the city. If the coming term affords such you will not find me lacking in furthering that which is best for both your interest and that of the municipality. I can only ask you to take my past record as an assurance for the future.

I believe that thoroughness of attention to detail in our city administration is the only sure way to success. All else is but a flash in the pan. We must grow as we grow. Careful management, reasonable economy, faithful service are the basis of your municipal progress. I will, if elected, work earnestly for all.

Very respectfully,

F. H. DOBBIN

TO THE ELECTORS:

Realizing that Labor is the foundation of all municipal and national prosperity, and that the wage-earners are vitally interested in the large and lesser problems that come before the City Council each year, the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council have decided to enter the race for aldermanic honors for 1919, and take this means of placing before the electorate the names of four candidates, all Union men, who have the interests of the city and its citizens at heart. While representing Union Labor in this city, these men are broad-minded, and recognize that true municipal progress and prosperity can be achieved only by a unification of the various interests of the city, and believe that Labor should have its fair proportion of direct representation on the Council Board. Big questions are pressing for a satisfactory solution, and the reconstruction period will have its own peculiar problems. We believe these momentous matters can be the more readily disposed of if the toilers have a direct voice in the city's councils. The candidates of the Trades Council are all men of sound judgment, and if honored with election will to the utmost of their ability serve all the citizens all the time. To the working men and women of the city we would say that if you have your own welfare at heart—and what one has not?—you should give careful consideration to the candidates who have been endorsed by the Trades Council. If successful it will be part of their duty to see that the affairs of the city are administered wisely, to the benefit of the large majority of citizens, and with a studied economy consistent with safe and sure progress. Remember the Four Labor Candidates when you go to the polls next Wednesday. Don't forget to mark your ballot for at least four candidates. It will not count otherwise.

Yours Respectfully,

Labor Campaign Committee

BOARD of ALDERMEN

Ald. A. A. McINTYRE

As a candidate for re-election to the City Council for 1919 I respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The coming year will be marked by a number of outstanding questions of grave importance that will have to be dealt with my the incoming Council. These include the proposed overhead bridge on Hunter street, the sewage disposal plant, the two-platoon system for the firemen, and also the question of a suitable war memorial and better and more adequate attention to the many problems connected with the soldiers who are already home and those who will return in the future.

This year it will be necessary for the electors to mark their ballots for at least four aldermen and not more than ten. I hope to be favoured with one of these votes and if elected will give the same impartial and undivided attention to civic affairs that has characterized by efforts in the past. If you vote for less than four aldermen the ballot will be counted as a spoiled ballot, and if you vote for more than ten the same conditions will apply.

Yours for a greater and more prosperous and progressive city.

A. A. McIntyre.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN

ONE GOOD TERM DESERVES ANOTHER

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Having again been nominated for Alderman for the city for 1919, I again ask your support in favour of my re-election.

My record in the Council during the past year is before you, and I can safely leave it in your hands. If again elected I pledge myself to continue to give my close attention to the best interests of the city as a whole.

Compliments of the season.

Yours faithfully,

R. N. JONES

BOARD of ALDERMEN

To the Municipal Electors Of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

In compliance with the urgent request of numerous friends I have consented to stand for election as Alderman for the city for 1919.

Having the benefit of several years' experience in the City Council and occupied important positions such as Chairman of the Board of Works and other influential committees, I would endeavour, if elected, to give my best services in assisting to conduct our civic affairs in a prudent, economical, and business-like manner.

I, as well as every other intelligent ratepayer, fully realize the fact that the city is faced with large responsibilities during 1919. Anything I can do, therefore, to serve the electorate at this critical period will be cheerfully undertaken to the best of my ability.

Soliciting your support and influence, and hoping the very best men may be elected for the Board of Aldermen for 1919, permit me to wish one and all the compliments of the season.

Yours faithfully,

HARRY PHELAN

CATHOLIC ARMY HUTS COMMITTEE WERE ENTERTAINED LAST NIGHT

Were Guests of Dr. F. P. McNulty, Chairman of the Committee, at Thoroughly Enjoyable Smoker Last Night.

AN EXCELLENT PROGRAMME

Dr. F. P. McNulty was the host at a smoker at the Knights of Columbus Club last night to the committee that had charge of the Catholic Army Huts campaign in Peterborough. It will be recalled that the local objective had been set at $6,000, but the total receipts were $13,229 with expenses of $400, according to the report presented last night by Mr. John R. Corkery, treasurer of the Fund. Dr. McNulty was chairman of the committee, and while he attributed the success of the campaign to the generous response of the citizens and to the work of the committee, a large share of the credit is due to Dr. McNulty himself, who as chairman directed the canvass, supervised the general plans, and co-ordinated the efforts of those who volunteered their help.

The smoker was tendered by Dr. McNulty to the local committee as an expression of his appreciation for their generous and highly effectual assistance, and in every detail it bore the McNulty touch of perfection. After a few brief speeches, that struck a common note of hopefulness that Peterborough's war-born unity would prove lasting, an hour's entertainment was provided by Messrs. John Grace, J. H. Grace and W. J. Power, of Grace Brothers' minstrels, Ottawa, and at the end light refreshments were served in the billiard room. The entertainers by their versatility in song and jest, monologue and dialogue ,carried the large audience of guests and members of the Club through an exceedingly pleasant evening that was without a pause or dull moment. They were frequently encored and with a wealth of material responded to every demand. Dr. McNulty extended a warm welcome to the special guests among whom were Mayor Duncan, J. H. Burnham, M.P., Messrs. G. W. Hatton, Roland Denne, G. O. Cameron, Joseph Wearing, W. H. Hill, W. H. Dunsford, A. H. Stratton and Frank Linton. He thanked all those who had contributed to the success of the campaign for the Catholic Army Huts Fund in Peterborough, spoke of the pleasure he had derived from the associations in that work, and said that he was especially grateful to those citizens who had volunteered their services on the committee.

Mayor Duncan congratulated the Knights of Columbus upon their fine club house which he said he was visiting for the first time. He fittingly acknowledged Dr. McNulty's invitation and referred to municipal affairs. Incidentally he said that the city had big problems ahead of it next year, and he hoped the ratepayers would elect a good Council to help carry on the work.

Mr. Wearing made a happy speech in which he said that he was glad he had been able to help the Army Huts Campaign. "I believe this war has produced a better understanding among men in religious and other matters, and that in the years to come men will be brought aogether as never before. During the war, our men worked together in a common cause overseas and here at home. Thank God for it, for we have been separated too long. The work of reconstruction presses upon us now, and the first efforts must begin at home."

Mr. Wearing said he hoped that the unity of the people would be employed in promoting the progress of Peterborough. The citizens should elect good men for the Council, and every ratepayer should give this matter thoughtful attention on New Year's day, and not remain at home without making use of his privileges and right to vote.

"We should pick out the best men for next year's reconstruction in Peterborough," he concluded.

Ex-Mayor Duffus, who is Grand Knight of Peterborough Council, particularly welcomed Mayor Duncan as a former colleague of the City Council. After dwelling upon the fruits of the war, he spoke of the municipality's affairs. "While it is the privilege of the citizens to criticize and find fault with the Council, that can be carried too far. We should try to help the Council to carry out its important work."

Rev. C. J. Phelan.

"I must congratulate all those who took part in the Catholic Army Huts Campaign," Rev. Father Phelan said, and expressed his pleasure at the presence of citizens who had taken an active part in practically all the home campaigns during the war, Victory Loan workers and "boosters" for the Red Cross. He hoped that such gatherings might be more frequent, and said he could see no reason why they should not be. As an old resident, Father Phelan said he knew Peterborough was not built on narrow lines. "We should all work for the betterment of the city and the citizens, and in the hope that a good feeling will permeate all the people."

Bishop O'Brien, who was present during the latter part of the evening made a brief address stating in part that like all the military efforts in Peterborough the Catholic Army Huts Campaign had been helpful in cementing friendships. The past four years had been unique in many respects. One of them was the gathering together of the different elements of the city into one united body and working for the one patriotic object all had in view. His Lordship recalled some of those meetings from the first year of the war onward. What a pity it would be, he said, if these efforts in a common cause were going to cease. The unity of the citizens after the war would make for good citizenship and would be a splendid thing.

"If we don't have meetings together so often in the future, I hope that the spirit of unity will not be wanting. Peterborough that has done so well in recruiting, in giving to patriotic and charitable causes, should not be behind in the best spirit if citizenship."

Bishop O'Brien congratulated Mayor Duncan upon his re-election by acclamation, and added that a greater and better Peterborough would be achieved by all the citizens working together.

Voice of The People

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Sir:—Your editorial of last evening's issue on the situation regarding employment and position for men returning from service was both timely and helpful. May I commend its tone, its call for practical assistance and the admonition to our people that this matter is one that should be handled lest it force itself on attention in other ways. Employment means self-support. The lack of opportunity to engage in employment spells depression, want of self-reliance and resentment. Let us try that these may be avoided.

I am almost ashamed to trouble with stuff in print, but you will excuse this time as the message is imminently serious. In my association with the war work in the last four years I am close up to the line of unemployment, especially of the men returned. I thoroughly appreciate his stand and feeling what he hopes for, his more than expressed regret when something is not forthcoming. The shutting down of the war industries has accentuated the almost paucity of opportunity to secure employment. And such as he can handle.

I would not have you think and print that some earnest effort is not now, as in the past, being made to find places for men returned. This week the local branch of the Soldier's Aid Commission has sent out the circular letter appeal, a copy of which I enclose. This you might print if of value to the discussion. Seven hundred were despatched. Not relying on factories and other fairly large centres of employment, but to every one in the city who would employ from one man upwards. The list of possible employers was thoroughly dredged, that all should be appealed to.

Dear Sir:—May I ask your attention to a resolution passed at a meeting of the Peterboro Branch of the Soldier's Aid Commission, December 11th, a copy of which to be brought to your consideration. The resolution follows:—

"That in view of the recognized obligation both made and understood that men enlisting for service overseas from trades and occupations be given the opportunity and preference when seeking employment, that employers of labor endeavor to as far as possible make openings available for men returned from overseas, and that men be reinstated in old positions if at all possible when applying for work, and that employment be given to other returned soldiers if at all capable of filling positions."

This Commission is making earnest effort to assist men returning from ...munity to earn a livelihood. It is thought that to impress the need for co-operation on your attention is not assuming too much. It is asked that you keep this need constantly before you and appreciate what is due to the man who has served us so well and faithfully.

It is asked, that if you have openings, or know of such, that you communicate at once with the Secretary. 'Phone 261W, and the information will be made of prompt service.

While this has been done at intervals in the past, the present time is critical. Because of number of men returning and of the closing out for the next three months of outside work. Already I am receiving helpful assurances. I venture to enclose two, from among a number, and I think we shall not trespass on the writer's intentions when we print them.

Mr. A. McNab, local agent for the G.T.R., writes as follows:

"I have your circular letter with reference to the placing of returned soldiers when there are any openings on my staffs.

I am pleased to report that on the 1st day of December I was able to place six returned soldiers in positions on the crossing gates of the city. In addition to this, one man who enlisted from my freight shed, is returned, and will be replaced in his old position as soon as he desires to take up work. There is yet another man from my shed staff and three young men from my office staff with the forces in Europe, and I will be prepared to replace them on their return.

This will make eleven of the men to be absorbed back in civil life in Peterborough with positions on the Grand Trunk Railway. I will always be glad to give preference to returned soldiers, in filling any vacancies that may occur on my several staffs."

Mr. E. G. Patterson, General Superintendent of the Can. Gen. Electric Co., writes:

"Business conditions are such that we do not see immediate requirement of additional help, nor do we see before us much liability of increasing our force at all, but when we do we will arrange to let you know the class of help we need."

Other letters are coming in, all expressing a spirit of helpfulness. These are not laid aside to be forgotten, but kept in sight, and the writers called up, in the hope that from day to day some opening may develop.

Another reply indicated that the writer could use a man for a certain duty if one could be found that would likely fit into the position. A man, not two weeks back from service was at once advised by letter to place himself in touch with the opportunity, and so may work into a place.

Two weeks ago, at the suggestion of Mr. G. A. Gllespie, and after some consideration of the local situation, with Dr. W. A. Riddell, Superintendent of Trades and Labour for Ontario, and in his reply he discusses the situation and states:

"In our appointment to our new offices we are most anxious that the man will have a thorough knowledge of our Employment System, so that most likely should we open an office in Peterborough it will be opened and conducted, for a time at least by a man who has had previous experience in our Bureau."

This indicates that the Provincial authorities have their eye on Peterborough as a centre for employment, and we may expect that the intimation will presently bear fruit.

I may add, that when preferring an application to any employer that the soldier be considered in his claim for a place the soldier is not left to present himself at the factory door, with possibly other applicants. He is given a proper letter of introduction to the owner, manager or head of department, stating the service he (the soldier) has given. His qualifications or familiarity with the work in view, and closing with an appeal to recognize the service and afford the place. I am heartily glad to say that employers as a rule have been most helpful, and where the man can be placed at all he is given first opportunity, even if not taken on at once.

There are phases of this whole question that I need not discuss, including the absolute and radical change in the habit, life of, and line of thought of, the soldier. He has been, if we may put it that way for the sake of illustration, gaining and having a little mush as a professional baseball or hockey player. Having with his duty the excitement, the rest camp, the passing two and fro, the association with thousands of men like himself engrossed in the great fighting work of licking the Hun. Then to return to the seemingly hum-drum hours of attending a machine, of turning a shaft, of loading a waggon, will take indeed a more or less prolonged interval before he can accept the situation as uncomplainingly as he did before he took up servce. I have little faith that anything of real, personal, continued self-work on the part of our people at large, who should be interested will get the soldier replaced in active civil life. He does not ask for paternalism. He wants to do what he can do, in his state, and hope to make himself fully efficient. He doesn't ask for a "chance." Surely he deserves something better than that.

Respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

Gives Marriage a Cheap Look

The philosopher of the Port Rowan News does not like the present prospect of $800 husbands marrying $1,000 wives, and says: "The girls are not likely to give up their situations in banks or offices simply because the young men are coming home from the war and may want their old jobs back agin. The men will have to look for new jobs or wait until the girls get married. This might seem hopeless to those who have not made any investigations. But enquiry reveals the fact that girls receiving $1,000 are saving so that when they marry youths earning $800 they may be able to live in comfort. It is impossible to blame the girls for their strivings after true womanhood, but an eight hundred husband with hasbeen thousand girl does seem to give marriage a cheap look.

"The Better 'Ole," 'E's a Funny Bird, 'E Is

Peterboro Very Fortunate in Getting This Picture at The Grand Next Week.

The following is taken from the Canadian Moving Picture Digest on the appearance of "The Better 'Ole" at the Allen Theatre in Toronto. The picture was so popular that it had to be put on for an additional week and the demand is still so great that it will require to appear again shortly:

"It was raining the proverbial "cats and dogs"' Thursday afternoon, but the Allen was packed to capacity and a line of people waiting in front of the box-office for seats, for "The Better 'Ole."

What is the answer? The people want to laugh and we cannot blame them. There is a great, big laugh due us after what we have endured during the past four years. Laughter that will drive the tears away from our eyes, laughter that will straighten out the wrinkles in our heart. The producers of "The Better 'Ole" must have been blessed with a prophetic vision. They must have foreseen that the war would soon end and that the coming picture, even remotely akin to War, must have the comedy element of The Great Tragedy predominant.

Peal upon peal of laughter. Everybody was laughing at the dear antics of "Old Bill, Bert and Alf," even the very walls of The Allen seemed to resound with laughter. I should say about ten laughs a minute. "The Better 'Ole" runs about two hours, count them for yourself.

There were a few places where you caught your breath and the tears rose unbidden to your eyes, but the next moment you had laughed them away in a very estacy of merriment. You gurgled, chuckled, writhed, you held your sides, you nudged your neighbour and you nearly died with laughter.

The character of the poet was a splendid touch. The poet, who has inspired, fought and given his life, like the thousands of "Old Bills, Berts and Alfs" have done. "The Better 'Ole," explains how it was possible for our boys to stand the terrific strain of the four years; and I believe that those who have made the greatest sacrifices, those who will have no "Toms, Berts or Alfs" to return on the great coming Back Day, I imagine that they will find much comfort and cheer in witnessing "The Better 'Ole." It will give them a glimpse of the British Spirit which met, fought and whipped The Enemy. It will ease their hearts to know that the boys sang, danced, loved, laughed and fought like men, filled with the Spirit of Life even in the presence of Death.

Those who do not believe in the value of titles, strip these from "The Better 'Ole" then weigh the balance.

The fade in from The Three Musketeers to "Old Tom, Bert and Alf" was excellent photography and the flash of the costumes in this bit of a scene the Drake scene, the scene of the singing The Marseillaise gave a touch of polish and finesse to the picture.

"The Better 'Ole" is a funny bird 'e is, 'ere to 'is good 'ealth; and may 'e live long and prosper."—"Canadian Moving Picture Digest."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Eye Strain.

One makes a great mistake by saying that the eyes are tired and the retina or seeing portion of the eye is fatigued. This is not the case, for the retina seldom if ever gets tired. The fatigue is in the inner and outer muscles attached to the eyeballs and the muscles of accommodation which surround the lens of the eye. When a near object has to be looked at this muscle relaxes and allows the lens to thicken, increasing its retractive power. The inner and outer muscles are used in covering the eye on the object to be looked at, the inner one being especially used when a near object is looked at. It is in the three muscles mentioned that the fatigue is felt, and relief is secured temporarily by closing the eyes or gazing at far distant objects. The usual indication of strain is a redness of the rim of the eyelid, betokening a congested state of the inner surface, accompanied by some pain. Sometimes this weariness indicates the need of glasses rightly adapted to the person, and in other cases the true remedy is to rub the eye and its surroundings as far as may be with the hand wet in cold water.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course, if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1440 at age 21.

Besides, while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

For Board of Education

MRS. KATE MORRIS

TO THE ELECTORS:—

The Board of Education in this city, up to the present time, has consisted of men only. Cities as small as Orillia and as large as Toronto, have had women school trustees for Some time—and their usefulness has been recognized by the men with whom they work and by the citizens whom they represent.

Sixty-five women teachers are employed in the schools in Peterborough, influencing more than 2,500 children every school day in the year.

Since the care and development of the children of the city depends so largely on women, in the home and in the school, is it not reasonable to think that the woman's point of view should be valuable on the School Board.

It is with the hope of being of some service in a work that surely requires the co-operation of men and women, that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

Board of Education Can Appropriate Money For Playgrounds Association

Mr. J. W. Worth Has Had Considerable Correspondence With the Minister of Education on this Particular Subject—Playgrounds in Peterboro.

After considerable correspondence with the Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, Mr. J. W. Worth, a member of the local Board of Education, is satisfied that there is nothing in the statutes to hinder the School Board legally appropriating money for the use of the local Playgrounds Association. In September, 1918, Mr. Worth, who is keenly interested in child welfare, wrote Dr. Cody asking if there were anything in the educational laws of the Province of Ontario hindering the local board from appropriating monies to take over the activities of the Playgrounds Association and if so recommending his favorable consideration of the alteration of such a hindrance. He suggested, from a standpoint alone facilitating children's education the playgrounds are an asset in-as-much as supervised play results in a more controllable mood of the scholars upon their return to school for the Fall term. Considerable delay was caused to the satisfactory conclusion of Mr. Worth's correspondence on account of Dr. Cody's absence in England.

Facilitated Efforts

Mr. Worth told the Examiner that his efforts in reaching the object were facilitated by information given by Mrs. A. Mowat as to the activities of the Playgrounds Association from their inception to the present moment.

Child's Welfare

He said that his ideas with regard to the Board of Education do not exactly follow the lines upon which the Board works at present. He thinks that it is responsible for the welfare of the children as well as looking after the maintenance of the schools and keeping the finances in order. He is exceedingly pleased that a lady is running for the Board of Education, as she will show the sympathetic interest for children which would be expected from a woman.

Mr. Worth was one of the first persons in Peterboro to bring forward the question of public bathing beaches.

St. John's Choir Boys Entertained

Were the Guests of Dr. G. S. Cameron, the Rector's Warden.

St. John's choir boys spent a pleasant afternoon yesterday as the guests of Dr. Cameron, the Rector's Warden.

Numbering eighteen, the party elected to visit the "Grand," the pictures showing the surrender of the "Hun" grand fleet proving a drawing card. The boys recognized the picture of Admiral Beatty at once and led the audience in rounds of applause, noticably more vigorous as the dismantled submarines were shown. The splendid feats in aquatics of the fat man were very acceptable to a bunch of boys, who nearly all graduated in swimming at Inverlea Park last summer, and if spring boards are not provided up there for the holiday season next year, the City Council will find that the problems of the War Veteran's Home and the Hunter street bridge won't be the limit of their anxieties by a long way.

Every minute of the show was enjoyed, and part two of the treat, which had been placed in the hands of Mr. Chas. Coleman (an old choir boy), followed at 5.30. A substantial, as well as daintily served supper, proved very acceptable to all concerned, and hearty cheers for the donor of the treat signified the boys' whole-hearted thanks.

Singing of carols, choruses of National songs, and God Save the King brought a pleasant event in the young choristers' Christmas festival to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey were in charge and found their duties light and full of pleasure.

Regulations Governing the Sale of Coal in Peterboro

There Are No Restrictions on the Sale of Soft Coal, Mine Run, or Buckwheat Coal.

RULES IN FORCE

The Board of Fuel Commissioners have received inquiries as to the regulations governing at the present time. The following are the rules in force here.

1. Persons having less than six tons of hard coal may purchase such amount of any kind as may be required to bring the total amount in the cellar up to six tons. This rule does not apply to mine-run or buckwheat coal or soft coal, there being no restrictions as to these varieties.

2. Persons having only nut or smaller sized coal may procure two tons of large sized coal (egg or larger) and those having only egg or larger sized coal may procure two tons of small (nut or smaller).

3. With the exception of farmers, those living outside the city limits may procure coal (subject to these rules) from any dealer but the city. Farmers must obtain a written permit from the secretary of the Board to procure hard coal other than mine-run or buckwheat.

4. Special cases requiring consideration will be considered by the Board as occasion demands and these rules are subject to change at any meeting of the Board.

5. There are no restrictions as to soft coal, mine-run, or buckwheat coal. Farmers with furnaces should procure mine-run coal. Persons living in the city should procure one or two tons of buckwheat coal as this burns very satisfactory mixed with other coal and is cheaper than the other varieties of Prepared coal.

6. The rules and regulations in force from time to time must be observed and anyone attempting to evade the rules will be promptly reported to the Fuel Administrator. Coal deliveries are checked up daily and the Board knows where every ton is delivered.

INCREASED FIRE RATES THREATENED IN HAMILTON DOES NOT HIRE FIREMEN

HAMILTON, Dec. 28.—The Board of Control to-day received a communication from the Fire Underwriters' Association, which stated that unless the fire department was increased to a strength of at least 150 men, the insurance rates in this city would be increased.

The city intends to inaugurate the two platoon system, which will mean an increase in the strength from about 80 to 125 men, and the board thinks the chief of the fire department is best qualified to know the city's needs. This latest demand of the underwriters is regarded as a hold-up, and the city will put up a fight against a further increase in rates.

BAN ON SHIPMENT OF BEER AND WINES NOT TO BE LIFTED

No Action Taken To Change Order-in-Council, Says Rowell.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—There is absolutely no truth in the rumour that the Federal Government intends cancelling the restrictions on inter-provincial trade in beer and light wines. Hon. N. W. Rowell, president of the privy council, stated that in order to do this it would be necessary to cancel a portion of the order-in-council dealing with the manufacture and sale of such liquors, and no action in this direction had been taken.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

COMPANIONSHIP.

Much has been written on the subject of truth, love and duty; suggestions to mothers, methods of housekeeping and home making, and many other subjects, helpful inspiring all of them; but it is the greatest hero of every-day life — the provider of the home, the protector of the fireside the husband and father, we wish to say a word of praise and for his benefit offer a few suggestions to the wife. With what unselfish devotion he labours to secure for you the comforts, luxuries and pleasures of life!

Whether it is in the shop, behind the counter, in the office, at the factory, in the mill, or on the farm, it is with one purpose in view— he works, strives and slaves, patiently, uncomplainingly, year in, year out, for the comfort and happiness of those he loves — wife and children. The man who, for their sakes, faces a combination of discouraging circumstances, distressing financial difficulties, numberless failures, and keeps steadfastly at his post, defying them all, is a hero and nothing less. We meet them every day. Such they are, and doubtless will continue to be as long as there is a home worthy of protection, a child worthy of care, and a woman worthy of love.

And now, little woman, a word with you. If some manly man has chosen you to reign queen in his heart and home, know that in that capacity you will fil the most sacred the most honourable position in which woman can aspire. In it you appear in your most sacred and dignified character. "To be able to reinforce your husband in the work of life," and rear your children for positions of usefulness is a work worthy of your most careful and prayerful consideration.

LABOUR VERSUS IDLENESS.

There is no blight like the blight of idleness. It is in the unworked garden that weeds grow. It is in the stagnant water that disease germs waken to horrid life. It is in the calm that marines lose heart, and from the spent battlefields pestilence, more dreaded foe than the red carnage of war. Ennui palls upon a brave heart as prostrated peace falls upon a true soldier. Ennui is like a long-winded, amiable, but watery-ideaed friend who dropped in to see us and dribbles platitudes until every nerve stands out like porcupine quills and we long for the advent of an enemy. Ennui is like being forced to eat meal without sale, or to drink tepid water. Labour, on the contrary, if it be remunerated labour, is a friend with grit and endurance in his make-up. It comes to use as a wind visits the forest, and sets all our facilities stirring, as the wind ruffles the tree-tops. It saltens up our meat and spices our drink.

A loving, good mother is a treasure above all others of an earthly nature, as she never feels any sacrifice too great, any anguish too keen, any shame so dreadful, any fate so overwhelmingly terrible, as to transend the endurance or crush the power of a mother's love. Mrs. Wilson says, and truly she spoke, that "under an invincible inspiration, when danger threatens her darlings, she knows no self-disgrace, death affrights her not, she extends her arm to arrest every approach, offers her own breast as a shield against darts, bullets, sword thrusts, and counts it a privilege to lay down her life in defense of those loved ones." O, loyalty, supreme, sublime, immortal! Thy name is mother's love. Her very existence is interwoven with her children, their counselor, comforter and guide; therefore we should highly prize and sacredly cherish that valuable jewel, a good mother. This world is so dreary when we are bereft of mother, yet so few appreciate her as we should, for what is home without a mother

In these days of degeneracy and lack of gallantry, every parent should know the whereabouts of daughters after eight o'clock at night. Too many girls there are who are permitted to roam the streets at their own free will at almost any time of night, and who ultimately come to some bad end. We are not a croaker, neither do we believe in taking away the freedom, to a reasonable degree, from the girls and boys, but we do believe there should be fewer heartaches, fewer broken homes and more purity and womanliness in the world did every parent keep the child off the street at unseemly hours.

Keep up with the wagon. Change your old views and habits for new and better ones when you find them and be always on the lookout for them.

God sends every bird its food, but He does not throw it into the nest. He gives us our daily bread, but it is through our own labour.

There are statues and monuments over the earth to men who have won renown. There are portraits and paintings of more or less worth of others on walls in each town. There are pictures in papers for millions to scan of those who gained fame during life—but where is the shaft that is raised to the man who is helpful at home to his wife? Alas! There is none, but the moment is ripe to remedy such a neglect and therefore this monumnt fashioned in type we for that true hero erect. But he's too modest to wish that his name be on it in glory enrolled, that others may copy we'll proudly proclaim his virtues in letters of gold. A dawn he will rise without waking his spouse and start up the heater and range and that the warmth is all over the house, and then—without thinking it strange—he'll put on the kettle and something to cook for breakfast, the table he'll set, so when his dear wife hurries downward to look, a joyful surprise she will get. After supper at night to his wife he will say, "My dear, you are tired, I know. You've worked for the children and me all day without any stop." (Which is so.) "Now, I'll wash the dishes and look after things while you have some moments of rest." If ever an angel there is without wings this man is surely the best. He'll sweep and make bread and the washing he'll do in case there is no servant about. The baby he'll hold and take care of it too, so his wife has a chance to get out. He'll never leave articles sattered around for his wife to keep putting away. If ever a martyr deserves to be crowned he does—and he will some day. Now take off your hats to this monumem raised to the man who is helpful at home, and copy him, too, if you want to be praised by wives and adored by your own. Although such a paragon never is seen on pedestals here on earth, in Heaven you'll find him with angels chanting his worth.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Pain in the Feet.

In many cases pain in the feet is owing to the presence of corns or bunions. But there are more obscure affections that cause pain in walking. Two of the most common are flat foot and the opposite condition—an overhigh arch.

When the arch is too high the weight of the body is not properly distributed, but falls on the heel and the ball of the foot. In flat foot the pain is most severe in the early stages, when the fibrous sheet that stretches between the ball of the foot and the heel has to do all the work of keeping the foot in shape, since the ligaments that are meant to support the arch are already weakened and elongated. After this fibrous structure—the Plantar fascia it is called—has yielded and the flat foot is fully established the pain is much less acute.

When both heels are painful it usually means either that flat foot is beginning or that the rheumatic or gouty tendency is declaring itself. When only one heel is affected the cause is usually bruise or strain. As soon as the doctor discovers the source of the trouble he must try to remove it, and the patient can often help him.

Silver Fox Fur.

The black silver fox fur is most valuable when there is no silver in it—when it is a pure rich black throughout. A dressed skin of this sort averages 30 by 10 inches and will easily bring $3,500. A good silvery skin clear and pure in color, with bluish underwool, is worth about $2,000.

Cheap Carpet Cleaner.

"What can I use to clean carpets?" asked a correspondent who signed herself, rather bashfully, "Young Bride."

"Have you tried your young husband?" replied the answers editor, who lost his position just a few hours after the reply appeared.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BECOMING A BRITON.

Easy For Aliens to Acquire Citizenship In England.

A large number of aliens become British subjects every year by taking advantage of the naturalization act The process of taking out naturalization papers in England is delightfully simple. An application can be put through in a couple of weeks if good and sufficient reasons can be shown while the average time elapsing between application for a certificate of naturalization and the granting of permission to file the oath of allegiance to the king with the home office, which automatically confers British citizenship, is only about eight weeks.

The naturalization act of 1870 requires that the applicant shall have resided in the United Kingdom at least five years and shall intend, when naturalized, to continue to reside here.

The lease of a house or an apartment is sufficient to establish legal residence The landlord's word is taken as sufficient proof. The applicant has merely to fill in a blank with the details of his residence and other information and have the facts as to his residence verified by one British subject, while the applicant's respectability and loyalty must be vouched for by others. He then pies the application with a £1 fee at the home office.

A special Scotland Yard detective is assigned to inquire into the case and examine all the statements on the applicant's memorial. Three months is allowed him in which to make his report, but a few weeks usually suffice. If the application is passed another fee of £2 is required. The applicant then has permission to file his oath of allegiance, which concludes the process.—London Tit-Bits.

Painting the Eiffel Tower.

The Eiffel tower changes its dress every five or six years at a cost of from £2,800 to £3,200. The date is at hand when fifty painters will find occupation for three or four months in covering the 180,000 square yards of its surface with a new coat of paint. The shade has yet to be decided upon. The Eiffel tower started twenty-two years ago in orange, wore red in 1893, golden yellow in 1899 and silver white on the summit and chrome yellow at the base in 1907. There are people who would vote for an invisible shade of khaki for the coming renewal. The tower is now used as a wireless telegraph station, as a post for an electric device to prevent hailstorms and as a guiding mark for aviators.—Ireland's Own.

A Crusher.

She was a young woman, very pretty and modishly costumed, accompanied by her son, perhaps six years, just behind sat a good looking young man. The young man watched the young woman closely. For the first quarter of an hour he did not dare to speak to her. But she was so attractive that he cudgeled his brains for some excuse to begin a conversation. At last he hit upon the idea of pretending he was a stranger—a foreigner—in need of information. He leaned over and said in his best French:

"Pardon, madam. May I address a few words to you?"

The six-year-old escort turned around with a courteous inclination of his curly head.

"If you wish, sir," said he, "I will translate for you. My mother does not understand French."—New York Post.

Patience as a Virtue.

"Don't you remember me, sir?" asked the caller, addressing the man at the office desk who was poring over the market report in a daily paper.

"Remember you?" queried the man addressed, peering at the caller over the top of his gold rimmed glasses.

"Yes, sir. Don't you remember your old waiter at the chop house? Why, I recall the last order you gave me—porterhouse steak, French fried potatoes"—

"Oh, yes, I remember you now," said the man dreamily, rubbing his hand over his forehead. "Is the meal ready yet?"—Yonkers Statesman.

And He Drove On.

"Say," calls the bright youth to the honest agriculturist who is working in his garden, "why don't you set a hen on your eggplants?"

"Ma set one on 'em last year," answers the agriculturist, barely looking up.

"Did she hatch anything?"

"Yep; hatched out that bed o' cockscombs by the fence."—Judge.

Warden Anderson Refers to Conference With Mr. G. W. Hatton

The Meeting Lasted for Six Hours and the Crown Attorney Was Present Most of the Time.

Editor of The Examiner:

Although I have on several occasions almost decided to endeavour to correct impressions wrongly given to the public on matters of public importance, I have always, until the present time, kept away from the newspapers.

However, on reading on page eleven of your last Saturday's issue, the day dream of a reporter, "Mr. Hatton met the committee at the Court House," I decided to attempt an explanation of the meeting for the benefit of your readers.

Before I start, I may say that I think it would be about as difficult to convey to your readers all that took place in a six hour conference, with Mr. Hatton present most of the time, as it was for your reporter to correctly size up the situation by one glance across a large room from outside the door of the County Clerk's office.

By reading the item referred to, the reader is led to believe that Mr. Hatton (who, although Clerk of the Peace, seems to have a weakness towards occupying the position of plaintiff in law suits against municipal bodies), and being more or less successful, was on hand to collect his toll, and that the Council were going through the ordeal of coming across with the $530.66, under an assumed attitude of good nature toward Mr. Hatton, who could afford to smile with satisfaction because of his success.

Two-Fold Purpose.

Now this is all wrong. The meeting was not at all for the purpose of paying Mr. Hatton, neither was the matter of the $530.66 dealt with by the committee. The meeting was for two other purposes.

The chairman of the County Property committee and other members of the Council, realizing that Mr. Hatton has the habit of rushing into court to have trifling matters adjusted instead of meeting the Council in a friendly way, and giving them half a chance to provide office accommodation and supplies, etc., for the Crown Attorney's work, invited Mr. Hatton in, for a friendly chat about the whole situation, and to see if his attitude toward the representatives of the people whom he serves, could not be improved somewhat for his own benefit.

Not a Loss

The Council were but slightly disturbed by Mr. Hatton's action against the County. The $530.66 he has recovered for office rent, light, heat, etc., are not a loss to the County. It is only part of what Mr. Hatton might have had from the County during the four years he has been in office, had he been on better terms with the Council. Then, as to the typewriter, for over $500.00, all he has is a second hand machine, which he does not need. So far as a monetary standpoint, his course has been unprofitable to him, to say nothing of the trouble he has made for himself and worst of all the lack of confidence created in the minds of the people toward him, as an officer of the Crown.

It may be that Hon. I. B. Lucas, from his point of vantage can see little fires of Bolshevism kindling here and there in rural Ontario. If he does, he must be well advised to attribute it to other causes than to sympathy with the peasants of Eastern Europe, in open revolt against all law and rights, because of the tyranny of rulers and noblemen.

Of course, Mr. Lucas will surely strike back and clear away many of the non-essentials detrimental to the true progress of our national development and which are now under Government favor and protection, and not the least of these reforms will be the clearing away of much expensive court procedure. It is surely time the Attorney-General of this province would see that much of his so-called "doctrine of dissatisfaction" that has arisen in rural sections is caused by autocracy in the administration of the affairs of the people of Canada and it is also time for Mr. Hatton, the local Crown Attorney to realize that there is nothing useful in his persisting in fighting the representatives of the 19,000 people of the County, that will be elected year after year to transact the County's business.

Knowing that Mr. Hatton was in need of some kindly awakening as to the better way to meet the Council, was one reason for the meeting.

The other purpose of the meeting was for the committee to consider and determine where they stood with Mr. Hatton, as a result of the judgment recently handed down by Mr. Justice Latchford.

In part the finding was: "It is plain, I think, that what the plaintiff really desired, was not offices in the Court House, but an allowance toward maintaining his offices down town." "I find that there has been a demand by the plaintiff for performance by the defendants of their duty, to provide him with proper offices," etc.

Now with Mr. Hatton making a demand for offices, and the County seeing plainly that he only wanted money, there was nothing left for the committee to do, but deliver to Mr. Hatton an ultimatum. Accordingly, to safeguard the position of the county, the following resolution was passed.

That Mr. Hatton be offered the use of the three north-east rooms on the ground floor of the court house, the two northerly rooms to be connected by a doorway (at the expense of the county) with the two vaults therein, and that the rooms and vaults be furnished with necessary and proper furniture and fittings, in accordance with the provisions of the Municipal Act.

And that Mr. Hatton be requested to state in writing, within one week, whether he will accept the same, and to designate in writing what furniture, fittings, etc., he considers should be furnished.

W. A. ANDERSON,
Warden.

Good Word For Religion.

This is a broad minded age, and the gentleman on the last tram, who was in what one may define as the talkative stage, shared the characteristics of the times. "I've nothin' to say against 'im even if he does belong to a P. S. A. I'm no bigot, not a bit of it. An' I say this—that, considerin' all things, I've not found these religious chaps to be worse than ordinary fellers like you an' me."—Manchester Guardian.

Planning a Future.

"Do you think you can support my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?"

"Yes," replied the slangy young man after some hesitation. "But don't you think I'd better stick around with your family a few years so as to get accustomed to it?"—Washington Star.

Nothing Doing.

"Can I interest you in an attachment for your typewriter?" asked the agent as he entered the office.

"No chance," replied Mr. Grouch. "I'm still paying alimony on the strength of the attachment I had for my last typewriter."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Archaisms In the Authorized Version.

In the real authorized version of 1611, King James' Bible, are a good many archaisms which the printers have since modernized, such as "ought him a hundred pence," "yer" for "ere," "bles" for "bolls," "fet" for "fetched," "gin" for "grin" in traps, "moe" for "more" and "all to" should be one word at Judges ix. 53, "all to brake his head," where, however, the printers have resisted the temptation to substitute "break." In Psalm cxlv. 3, "Great is the Lord and marvelous, worthy to be praised," there should be no comma after "marvelous," which is an adverb qualifying "worthy." This correction has been made in recent prayer books.—London Saturday Review.

Germs on Playing Cards.

Quite a game is spreading through our bridge whist circles over the discovery in London that playing cards are great distributors of germs. Microscopic tests of cards used during one afternoon, it is said, reveal the presence of millions of malignant bacilli enough, if taken internally, to kill off an entire community. It would be financially disastrous to use a brand new deck for every deal, and the use of camphor counters as a means of sterilization is suggested. Of course no hostess would think of producing a soiled pack of cards, but after a few deals and shuffles you can easily see the germ possibilities for yourself.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Of course I will, darling."

"Will you permit me to go home to mamma whenever I want to?"

"I should never think of being cruel enough to keep you away from your mother when you wished to see her."

"And may I have a regular allowance to spend just as I like?"

"Certainly. I shall be as liberal in that respect as possible."

"And you will not scold if I sometimes have my breakfast in bed?"

"Of course I should prefer to have you sitting across the table from me at breakfast, but if you prefer to have it otherwise I shall not object."

"You are awfully nice, dear. And may I call you up on the phone whenever I wish during business hours?"

"I should be unhappy if I did not hear your sweet voice every little while."

"I'm afraid you will forget your promises after we are married."

"No I won't. Is there anything else you want me to promise?"

"I can't think of anything just now. Oh, yes! There is one other thing."

Changed the Bidding.

Some excitement was caused at Christie's recently by the peculiar nature of the bidding for a Rembrandt portrait. It is a picture of an old man in a dark dress trimmed with fur on a panel, and the first bid was only £21. No one seemed anxious to secure it at first, and the bidding advanced very slowly to £100 10s. At that figure the hammer was about to fall when a newcomer suddenly hurried into the salesroom and offered a higher bid. Competition at once set in, and by rapid bids the price was carried up to £902 10s., when it fell to Mr. Permain.—London Answers.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

A. A. FOWLER

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having now served a two-year term on your Board of Education, receiving the highest vote on the occasion of my being selected for the honour, I again allow by name to come before you for re-election.. My two years service, and particularly that of the last year when I was Chairman of the Property Committee, has given me the experience necessary to more intelligently attend to the important duties of the Board. Having accepted the honour of the ratepayers confidence, I gave the same care and attention to the affairs before the Board as I did to my own private business, and if again entrusted with the work will give the very best service of which I am capable. Knowing that greater School accommodation is becoming necessary especially in the South and West sections of the city, and in order to obtain all the knowledge possible, I visited, in company with Dr. Neal, and at our own expense, the Technical and Public Schools of London and Hamilton.

This Board will in the next two years, be obliged to dispose of considerable business, involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and my two years' experience on the Board, and long business training, should fit me especially for the duties at this crucial period.

I am an enthusiast along educational lines and want Peterborough to have the best Educational Advantages, and I consider that our equipment and Staff are of the high efficiency necessary to properly apply the magnificent System as outlined by the Provincial Authorities.

If elected it will always be my aim to guard the interest of the ratepayers and keep down expenses, endeavouring at all times to see that every dollar spent was properly applied. If my past Service, and future willingness are considered worthy of your support, you can show it on election day by endorsing my Candidature with your vote.

Yours faithfully,

A. A. FOWLER.

For Board of Education

MRS. KATE MORRIS

TO THE ELECTORS:—

The Board of Education in this city, up to the present time, has consisted of men only. Cities as small as Orillia and as large as Toronto, have had women school trustees for Some time—and their usefulness has been recognized by the men with whom they work and by the citizens whom they represent.

Sixty-five women teachers are employed in the schools in Peterborough, influencing more than 2,500 children every school day in the year.

Since the care and development of the children of the city depends so largely on women, in the home and in the school, is it not reasonable to think that the woman's point of view should be valuable on the School Board.

It is with the hope of being of some service in a work that surely requires the co-operation of men and women, that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

W. H. PRETTY

A.M., INST. C.E.

Candidate for the Board of Education, respectfully invites your Support & Votes at the Civic Elections on New Years Day

Board Of Education

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have been again honoured with the nomination for member of the School Board for the City, and respectfully ask your support if you think my work in the past warrants it, and that my experience is of value to the Board in dealing with the very important matters that are coming up for consideration during the next two years.

With best wishes for the New Year, I am.

Yours faithfully,

INFLUENZA STILL CLAIMING VICTIMS BY THE THOUSAND

Epidemic Breaking Out Anew From One End of Country to the Other.

Warning to the country that the Influenza epidemic is by no means ended, and that all possible precautions against the disease should be taken has just been issued by the public health authorities at Washington.

Late reports show that the disease is breaking out anew in its very worst form from practically one end of the country to the other. Already there have been over 300,000 deaths from the disease and one prominent health official predicts that there will possibly be 750,000 deaths in this country next year from Influenza and the ailments which follow it. The disease has been very baffling to the medical profession and health authorities frankly admit that ordinary preventive measures such as wearing of masks and closing public places seem of little avail.

Persons who are weak and rundown, and who have not the strength to throw off the Influenza germ, are the earliest victims. Those who catch colds easily or who are suffering from catarrhal troubles are also early victims, as the inflamed mucous membrane linings of the nose and throat are an open door to the germs. If you are suffering from any of these symptoms, nothing will build you up and fortify your system against attack like Tanlac, which contains the most powerful tonic properties known to science. This statement is easily proven by the fact that this celebrated medicine is now having the greatest sale of any system tonic in the history of medicine. It has been accomplishing remarkable results during the present epidemic and hundreds of thousands who have used it are enjoying the best of health. One prominent physician in Texas frankly stated that he had found Tanlac to be the finest tonic to be had for building up his patients who had had Influenza.

Actual experience has shown that the best way to keep from taking Influenza is to keep the system in good shape as it is a well known fact that the powers of resistance of the human system can be so perfected that it can throw off almost any infection, not even excepting Spanish Influenza, which is one of the most contagious diseases known.

Tanlac increases your strength and weight and creates a good, healthy appetite for nourishing food. It keeps you physically fit and makes you strong, vigorous and well, and in this way fortifies you against deadly disease germs. In connection with the Tanlac treatment be sure to keep the bowels open by taking Tanlac Laxative Tablets.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

JACQUES DU PRE A BELGIAN HERO

Captured Carload of Germans Single-Handed.

BREAKING MORALE OF HUN

This Soldier Has Been In the Struggle Ever Since the First Days of the War, and Is Now a Hero Among His Compatriots, Having Been Decorated for Many Daring Exploits.

ONE of the Belgians who did his full share towards helping to win the liberty of his country was Jacques Du Pre. He is one of the Belgian soldiers who has made an outstanding record for himself. Sometimes the Canadian fighters who were overseas right from the start do not speak very highly of the Belgian civilians, especially that section of the peasantry who would sell themselves for German gold. There is nothing but praise, however, for the Belgian soldiers, and a great deal has been written about the gallantry of Jacques Du Pre. He is a burly and handsome fellow, say the war correspondents, with a strong face and intelligent head. Early in the war, he joined the army, and he has seen service almost constantly since the terrible days of August, 1914, when the devastating Huns swept over devoted Belgium and laid waste the beautiful country. Jacques Du Pre took part in the retreats, and he soon won attention by his bravery. In a more democratic army, he would have risen quickly to the top, but he was content to do his duty in the ranks. He is now ranked among the most popular heroes of his compatriots. One of his most daring exploits took place in the early days of the German retreat during the past summer. He succeeded, singlehanded, in capturing an entire carload of Germans and marching them to a detention camp behind the Belgian lines. It was this incident, and several others like it, which indicated to the Allied commanders as early as the first weeks of last September that the morale of the German army was going to pieces and that the men in charge of the troops were inclined to be panicky. Jacques Du Pre has been decorated several times for exceptional valor. Fresh honors will doubtless be showered upon him now that the Belgian nation has been restored.

JACQUES DU PRE.

Switzerland's Coast.

Shakespeare's "break" in speaking of the "coast of Bohemia" is familiar. But in these days of huge artificial waterways neither that, country nor any other inland region has any excuse for remaining isolated from the sea. Switzerland is already connected with salt water through the Rhine, and the question of reaching the Mediterranean through the French river system after the war has been thoroughly discussed of late. A Swiss association for navigation from the Rhone to the Rhine has been formed, and its president, Paul Balmer, has just been addressing a body of French engineers and business men at Paris under the auspices of the French naval league. A writer in the Scientific American Supplement is of the opinion that this problem is of great interest for the economic future of the two countries. It is also intimately connected with the project for making the Rhone navigable upon the whole or most of its course, which has been occupying the attention of engineers of both countries.—Literary Digest.

Canada's Big Forest.

The largest forest in the world is in Canada. It is in the Labrador and Hudson Bay district and is, roughly, 1,000 by 1,700 miles.—London Express.

Monetary Collapse In Germany.

"It is held here," says the London correspondent of the New York Evening Post, "that the extreme inflation of German currency is bound to cause a monetary collapse when defeat is fully realized, especially as the note circulation is partly backed by plundered gold. It is too early to determine the ultimate effects of the war in German finance. Even temporary isolation after the close of the struggle would mean utter ruin, because of the necessity of restocking with raw materials. Germany's greatest problem will be her damaged reputation, which will affect her credit."

Iceland's Flag.

Hannes Hafstein, Danish minister for Iceland, is sure of a warm welcome when he next visits the island, for King Christian of Denmark has granted the petition presented by the Icelanders through him for a national flag. Henceforth Iceland will fly the blue and white beside the Danish colors, which are red and white.

IS PROMISED IMMUNITY FROM FURTHER PROSECUTION

FIRST "CROOKED" TURN

Says His Entire Boodle Amounted To Only $2,300

Vancouver, Dec. 26.—Walter C. Findlay, former commissioner under the prohibition act in British Columbia is back in Vancouver. He will be the principle witness at the inquiry before Mr. Justice Clement into the operation of the alleged whiskey ring. He may possibly be called as the first witness when the investigation opens to-morrow.

Findlay, it is understood has agreed to lay bare everything on a promise of immunity from further prosecution. He will tell the whole story, according to a report from Victoria.

If Findlay had not voluntarily returned he would probably been arrested. Leaving Victoria nine days ago, he stayed several days in Seattle, and then went to Portland, where it is said he used the name of "J. Z. White."

To intimate friends, Findlay is said to have declared along with an admission of his guilt, that he had been caught at the first "crooked" turn he made. He is said to have declared that he knew nothing of the importation of more than the one carload of whiskey, in which he was interested. The $2,300, which was found on his person when arrested at Blaine on the night of December 11, was the entire wealth, he stated to friends. Out of this, he paid his fine, his lawyer's fee, and left some money with his wife. In Seattle he had only a few hundred dollars left, he said.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Ruth Returns—Brian Meets Her at the Station.

CHARTER LXXIV.

Ruth was to be away still three more days. Brian had spent every evening, save the first one, with Mollie King—seven in all. He had been very contented, although sometimes when he reached home late he would feel just a bit conscience stricken. Then he would mumble:

"She's having a good time staying at expensive hotels, why should I stick around this stuffy flat alone?" That the flat was anything but stuffy, he knew, also that both the Roberts and the Curtis' would be delighted to see him, or to have him come in and play cards.

The idea of learning to do his own typing under Mollie's tutelage, appealed to him. So, for the next three evenings, he appeared at the little studio with several parcels under his arm.

"I'll bring in the grub and we'll cook it together," he had said when Mollie asked what he had. "We'll have more time than if we go out." So in the intimacy of a kitchennette and a two-burner gas stove, Mollie cooked beefsteak or chops, and made coffee, while Brian fixed the salad and old Rachel wondered where "Mars'e' Brian don' eat his dinners when Missy Ruth was away."

Mollie was, as she had said, a good typist. She insisted that Brian learn the latest method, although with his usual indolence he said that "any old way would do, so long as he could write his letters."

"Indeed it won't! what kind of a teacher would I be to let you have your own way like that?"

So, their heads close together, they spent the evenings over the machine. That is, they worked until ten o'clock. Then Brian would insist upon stopping, and they would talk or go to some neighbouring cafe for a bite of supper, and gossip with the villagers for an hour or two.

"I won't be down to-morrow night," Brian said on the night before Ruth was expected.

"I shall miss you," Mollie answered. Knowing Ruth was coming, she said no more.

"I'll come the next night—for my lesson."

"I understand," Mollie said to herself, after the door had closed. "He can come for his lesson, then must get back or she'll find fault." Had she known that Ruth scarcely ever objected to anything Brian did, Mollie would have been surprised. She supposed he lived in an atmosphere of almost constant nagging. And that was the reason he sought her companionship

That night, as he prepared for bed, Brian said:

"No one can find fault if I am with Mollie because it is necessary," and "I hope Rachel won't tell Ruth I was out every night. I guess I better tell her myself. I'll tell her I am learning typewriting, and it was too far to come way up here when she was away. She has no business to leave me alone, anyway," ending by throwing the onus of his defection upon Ruth, as usual.

And she, in the cheerless hotel room, was counting the hours, almost the minutes, when she would be with Brian. She had determined to ask Mr. Mandel not to require her to stay away so long again. This time it had been unavoidable. But she was so lonely for Brian, and so afraid he would be unhappy.

"I do hope Rachel has cooked nice things for him," she had said to herself every day she had been away. She had written daily a short account of her work, and how lonely she was without him. He had also written often, but his notes told her nothing. He had not mentioned Mollie King, neither had he told of how his evenings were spent. Ruth consequently took it for granted that part of them at least had been spent at home.

Her work had gone very satisfactorily. It had been an expensive job, and she couldn't fail to be pleased at the result. She had wired Brian that she would reach New York at five-thirty. He had told Rachel they would be at home to dinner, then had ordered some flowers.

"She likes them," he had muttered, knowing he was salving his own conscience rather than catering to her love for flowers.

He had gone to meet her. The train was a little late, but Ruth, almost the first one off, had spied him at once, and with one glad little cry had run to him.

"Oh, Brian!" she said, snuggling to his side, "how good it is to be home again. To be with you."

"It's time you came back," he said as he kissed her again, "I had almost forgotten I had a wife."

Ruth looked sharply at him. Could he be speaking the truth? But no! he was gazing at her with pride. Could she have seen herself, she would not have wondered. She had taken especial pains with her toilet and looked very chic and young. Her eyes were bright with love-light. Her face full of animation. Any man would be proud of her.

"I shan't let you forget again. I'm going to ask the firm to keep me in New York after this,—as much as possible. I can't bear to be away from you so long again."

To-morrow—Brian Tells Ruth He Is Going To Learn Typewriting.

A CANINE TRAGEDY

Trouble Came In Bunches With the Purchase of a Watchdog.

ONE NIGHT OF WILD RUCTION.

It Taught the Battered Master of the Wrecked Home That Under Some Circumstances a Burglar May Be Better Company Than a Mastiff.

"If a man is afraid of burglars," said Quackenbush, "he can't have a better safeguard than a good watchdog."

"But where is he going to get the good watchdog?" inquired Clinkenbeard. "Such animals don't grow on trees, and they are not advertised by department stores.

"Of course, if you go around telling that you are in the market for a watchdog every man who has a chicken killing pup he wants to get rid of will tell you that his critter is just what you are hunting for. But you'll try out a million dogs before you find one that will get down to brass headed nails and do police duty.

"Two or three years ago there was a burglar scare out in our suburb. Several houses had been entered and some false hair and things carried away. So my wife, not so nervous she couldn't sleep at night. She was sure some masked bandit would break in and steal the 'What Is Home Without a Mother' chromo from over the mantel, and just to give her a sense of security I bought a big mastiff and took him home and chained him to a tree in front of the house.

"Along about 12 o'clock at night that dog got to thinking over his misspent life, and remorse gnawed at his heart-strings, and he began lamenting the past. He had the most bloodcurdling voice I ever heard. Every yell he let out froze the marrow in my bones. He'd begin with a sort of plaintive wail and wind up with a howl that would remind you of a hyena in a graveyard on a rainy night. My wife said the uproar would have to be stopped and I'd better bring the dog into the house. He'd probably be quiet there.

"So I slid into a few rags and went downstairs and into the yard. Just as I approached the dog old Billshaw, who lived next door, opened his bedroom window and threw an old frying pan. Of course he meant it for the dog, but his aim was poor and it caught me in the bread basket and knocked the wind out of me.

"I sat down on the grass and gasped for breath, and a shower of bottles and bootjacks and stove wood came from Billshaw's window, and every blamed item hit me in one place or another. When I finally got my breath I yelled to Billshaw to let up, for he was murdering me, and he said it was just what I deserved for keeping such a menagerie where it would give the whole neighborhood the horrors.

"After I had rubbed my bruises for half an hour I took the dog into the house and went back to bed. I was just dropping off to sleep when I was roused by the allfiredest racket. It sounded as though the side of the house was falling in. My wife was shrieking that the dog was upsetting all the furniture and ruining everything. So I went downstairs again, quoting a few passages from Webster's Dictionary.

"I had forgotten about the cat when I took the dog into the house. But the dog had discovered the pet and was chasing it through the house, and you never saw such a scene of wreckage. Everything that wasn't nailed down had been overturned, and nearly everything was broken. The gas light was burning, and there was the cat hanging to the gas fixtures and the dog standing on his hind legs trying to reach her.

"My memories of what followed are rather confused. I seem to recall grabbing the dog by the scruff of the neck to take him outdoors, and he bit a sample from my shin, and then we mixed things on the floor. I managed to stuff the pincushion into his mouth so he couldn't bite, and we resorted to Greco-Roman wrestling.

"Then the cat came down from the gas fixture and took a hand and clawed most of my scalp off, and my wife came to the rescue with the poker. She said afterward that she was trying to hit the dog. I reckon I'd have been on ice next day if the neighbors hadn't come in with shotguns and pruning hooks and such things and pried us apart.

"That experience was enough for me. I'd rather have forty burglars on the premises than one watchdog."—Walt Mason in Chicago News.

Stationers.

When pens and ink and other writing materials came into common use a great many years ago they were sold by peddlers from house to house. After awhile a few dealers in writing materials opened stalls and remained stationary at their place of business. To distinguish the two classes of paper sellers the man in the stall was called a stationer, and the goods he sold came to be known as stationery.—Wisconsin State Journal.

First Aid.

"A woman can be just as self reliant and independent as a man," said Mrs. Flason defiantly.

"Mebbe she can, Louisa, mebbe she can," said her husband, "but not while she wears frocks that hook up the back!"—London Telegraph.

Seemed All Right.

"Mamma, why don't you want me to play with that Kudger boy?"

"Because, dear, I know the family. He hasn't good blood in him."

"Why, mamma, he's been vaccinated twice, and it wouldn't take either time."

END OF THE WAR SPECIAL

The inhabitants of Nova Scotia, along the line of the Dominion Atlantic Railway, were much indebted to the Halifax, "Herald," who immediately on the declaration of peace chartered a special train to carry the good news to them. The "Special" was photographed at Digby Station. The train covered 600 miles distributing free copies of the special edition. The distribution throughout the territory covered by this newspaper entailed a cost dangerously near $2,000. The enterprising spirit of the newspaper was fully appreciated by its patrons, who kept telephone and telegraph wires warm with messages of congratulation.

THE BEAR PEN AT BANFF

SEVEN years bring developments. The twin grizzlies in the bear pen at Banff tell it with every move of their muscular body and every twitch of their glossy and vitalized coats. As specimens of the wild animal life of the Canadian mountains they are perfect in form, vigor, muscles, and temper. They stand high in the shoulders, on great piano-leg limbs and when they quarrel their heads drop low and swing menacingly while the roars of fury re-echo to the highest cliffs and scare the tame deer back to the inaccessible crags.

They are seven years old, and they have been Banff citizens for seven years. One day a scratched and bandaged Indian hunter stepped off the C. P. R. train from the west carrying a bag that wiggled and snapped and snarled. He had killed a mother grizzly without any personal injury and had proceeded to capture her two cubs, aged about a fortnight. The cubs stood by their dead mother and fearless as bulldogs snapped and growled in battle array. The Indian approached and dropped the noose from a rawhide lariat on the cubs, drawing them tight together. Oh! then they cursed and struggled and bit and scratched! The man took cords and noosed the fighting feet, binding each little pair together. Then he looped a slip over the jaws and tied the muzzles harmlessly together. But before the job was done his feet and legs, hands and arms were torn and gashed and bleeding.

Arriving at Banff he sold the cubs to the government and retired to the hospital to have his wounds attended. The cubs were placed in an empty cage between the mountain lion and the wolves.

The Bears are sometimes tame as dogs.

When the two young scions of the lords of the mountains had been freed by a sweating, scratched and nervous English gamekeeper they stood side by side, twin threats of vengeance. High-shouldered, with bristling manes and stiff, low hung heads they rumbled in their baby voices of battle. They were not more than fourteen inches tall yet their dispositions were those of their parents and they swaggered about, looking for someone to cross their paths. The big wolves came to the separating screen and sniffed curiously, the cubs charged and raged against the wires. The wolves, catching the odor of the attackers, retired respectfully. The mountain lion arose from his bench, opened his great eyes, shuttled his claws and stepped lazily to see what the row was. The cubs whirled to face him and scrambled against the partition. The lion growled, stopped, caught a dread scent—and shrank back.

That night, while the forests roared before the wind and the iron crags echoed back the crash of thunder one of the little cubs, made restless by the storm, climbed the rocky wall of his cage and ripped an opening in the wire meshes of the top. Then he scrambled along the edge of the pits until he came above that of the black and cinnamon bears, and here he lost his foothold and rolled inside. The gamekeeper, hearing a disturbance in the storm and darkness investigated and found one of the new cubs had escaped. Feeling no confidence in his own ability he went with all speed to the hospital where he aroused the Indian and persuaded him to [illegible] and capture the stray animal. [illegible] the way they picked up a dozen [illegible] men, and with ropes and lanterns proceeded to recover the outlaw. They found that small terror swaggering, swaying, rumbling deep in his tiny chest, strolling around the big bears' cage while two full-grown blacks and a mighty cinnamon were huddled in a corner, longing to get further from the scent of the bullying king of the wild lands.

Since then the cubs have grown, as one can well see when he visits their cage. They are lusty, crusty grizzlies, domineering, quarrelsome. But they are very desirable specimens of the race, and as such are prized by the government and the thousands of people who annually visit their homes and watch them walk and build, and sometimes play.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

King Bonverd II.

A Legend of a Lost Kingdom.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Since the dawn of history the map of Europe has been changing. Many years ago there was a nation the very location of which has been lost, but it is supposed to have occupied a part of Austria and a part of northern Italy. There is a legend connected with this country which has been handed down by word of mouth for many centuries. Traces of it have been found among German speaking people and among Italians.

There was a king of this country—so the story goes—who was at continual war with a people living to the east of his territory, supposed to have been Slavs, whose descendants now occupy the Balkans. He appears in different versions of the tradition under different names, but usually Bonverd. The name of the nation he governed was Thungaria, supposed by some to have been the origin of Hungary.

While King Bonverd was hard pressed by his enemies a son was born to him. There was a prophecy that the Serbs would overpower Thungaria, but that a Bonverd born at the time of the conquest would re-establish the kingdom and subject the conquerors. This prophecy, which reached the Serbs, filled them with a desire, should they succeed in fulfilling the first part of it, to nullify the second part by either killing the infant who was, when grown, to work their destruction or make him a captive.

At the birth of the heir to the throne (Bonverd II., if he lived) his mother was unable to nurse him, and a peasant woman who gave birth to a man child at the same time was called in to give suckle to the prince. She was assigned rooms in a wing of the palace and brought her own child with her.

The woman, whose name was Josepha, was dark and her child was of like complexion, while the heir apparent to the throne was fair, with blue eyes. The king, when Josepha and her son, who was called Herman, were brought to the palace, called upon his councilor to make an inspection of the two infants in order that the peasant boy could not be substituted for the prince. They reported to the king that, since one was light and the other dark, any one who had seen them, knowing which was the prince, would always be able to judge correctly between the two. This satisfied the king, and he made no objection to Josepha having her own son with her.

Meanwhile the Serbs were slowly approaching the capital of Thungaria, their king, Boris, being a great general and matched against a commander who was his inferior, for King Bonverd was not a warrior and was obliged to yield the command of his troops to another. This man risked all on one battle and was defeated, and the whole of Thungaria was open to the enemy, who had advanced rapidly on the capital. Indeed, they came as fast as the news that they were coming.

One morning Josepha heard a din below and, looking through a window, saw the street filled with the enemy's troops. The prince was asleep in his cradle, covered with drapery of the finest texture and bearing the royal arms.

Josepha's own son was in his own cradle, made of oak and unadorned. Hearing a noise in the corridor and believing that the Serbs had broken into the palace and would murder the prince, she laid him in her son's cradle and put her son in the place of the prince. Then, passionately embracing her off-spring, she went into an adjoining room that she might not see him killed.

She had scarcely done so when the nursery door was thrown open and armed men entered. In a few minutes they were gone, and Josepha went back, expecting to see the body of her murdered son. The cradle was empty, and the prince was lying where she had placed him in the oaken cradle.

King Bonverd was killed fighting at the head of his bodyguard, and all his courtiers who outlived the taking of the city were scattered. Josepha, carrying the prince, who was supposed to be her child, escaped from the palace and made her way to her home in the country. She dared not let it be known that the babe was heir to the throne of Thungaria lest the fact reach the conquering king and he should be killed. She therefore kept her secret.

Twenty years passed. Thungaria was a province of the kingdom of Boris, governed by a viceroy. Bonverd was brought up by his foster mother under the name of Joseph Bernstein and, unlike his father, manifested a predisposition for a military life. At an early age he enlisted in the army of King Boris in a corps stationed in Thungaria. Being a fine soldier, he was rapidly promoted till at twenty years of age he was made a captain.

A few years later a young man came to Thungaria and announced that he was Bonverd II., king of Thungaria. He declared that when the Serbs had conquered the country he had been taken by order of King Boris from his cradle in the palace and carried to the [illegible] who had turned him over to [illegible] to be dismembered.

The officer, not relishing the work of killing an infant, had turned him over to a common soldier, who in turn commissioned his wife to strangle him. The woman reported that she had done so, but instead had concealed him and afterward brought him up as her own child.

Great changes had taken place since the conquest of Thungaria. King Boris had died and had been succeeded by his son, Boris IV., who was a weakling. The young claimant to the throne of Thungaria called upon his people to rise and throw off the yoke. It was quite likely that he would have succeeded in putting himself at the head of an army at once had not several of King Bonverd's councilors, who had been commissioned to inspect the prince and his foster brother when they were babes, still lived. They at once visited the claimant to the throne and pronounced him an impostor. He was of dark complexion, while the true prince was fair.

Joseph Bernstein was at the time serving with the army and had risen to be colonel. He seldom saw his foster mother, and she had never revealed to him the secret of his birth, fearing that he would attempt to lead a revolt which would surely fail, and in stead of gaining a crown he would lose his head. Bernstein heard of the pretender and espoused his cause, thinking it better that even a false pretender should lead the Thungarians to liberty than that they should remain subjects of their conqueror.

A secret meeting took place between the two men. Bernstein reported that the corps he commanded was largely composed of Thungarians and he could begin a revolt with it. The offer was accepted, and suddenly the viceroy and all the Serb civil officers of the government were arrested. The news spread rapidly, and the people sprang to arms. Not only was a sovereign at hand in the claimant, but a military chieftain in Bernstein. The army through a long term of years—a quarter of a century—had become largely Thungarian and only needed a leader. Bernstein therefore found himself at the head of an army almost immediately.

But a force composed entirely of Serbs was sent to put down the rebellion, and many battles were fought. At first it was a losing game for the Thungarians, but under Bernstein's leadership they held their own until, gaining strength, they were able to meet the enemy under more advantageous circumstances. Finally when their general found himself in a position to strike he sent his adversaries back in a rout, dictating terms of peace in their capital which restored the independence of Thungaria.

When Bernstein returned with this treaty at the head of a victorious army one of the first persons he met standing at the foot of the steps leading up to the palace, where he was going to report to the pretender, was his foster mother.

"Hail King Bonverd!" she said, kneeling before him.

"What do you mean, mother?" he asked.

Before the throng that were crowding upon the young victor she told the story of how she had been his nurse, how she had put her own son in his place when the Serbs broke into the palace and how she had taken him away and brought him up as her own son.

At that moment an old man who had been a member of King Bonverd's cabinet came forward to congratulate the man who had freed his country, arriving in time to hear Josepha's story. He remembered Josepha and, looking from her to the man she had saluted as king, dropped upon one knee and kissed his sovereign's hand. The crowd, recognizing in the old man one prominent as a minister of their last sovereign, rent the air with loud huzzas for King Bonverd II.

The claimant, as became a sovereign, was waiting in the palace to receive the homage of his general, when, hearing the shouts, he directed an attendant to go and learn what they meant. He man returned and said:

"Please, your majesty, they have acclaimed General Bernstein king."

The pretender, rising from his seat, hurried out and appeared with clouded brow before the king and the group about him. Josepha threw her arms around the pretender's neck, exclaiming:

"My son, my son; I believed they had killed you! Happy day that both my children are restored to me! Salute your king!"

The proof that the blue eyed general was king of Thungaria was so complete that he who had believed himself king was convinced and gave his adhesion to the true sovereign. King Bonverd made him his prime minister and treated him as a brother. As for Josepha, the king had always believed that she was his mother and loved her as such. He insisted that she occupy quarters at the palace and be treated with the respect due a queen dowager.

When the Serbs heard the story of how their late king had failed in his attempt to thwart a prophecy it became a universal opinion that what fate had decreed it is useless to oppose.

They were very much dissatisfied with their own king, and when their King Bonverd, yielding to his subjects' clamor for revenge at their long subjection, marched at the head of an army to their country they declined to make any opposition. For had not it been foretold that he would conquer his father's conquerors? So Bonverd entered their capital, took possession of their government and made his foster brother their king. Since their new sovereign had been brought up among them they were well satisfied.

GREEKS LOATHE THE TURKS.

An Incident That Shows How Deep Seated Is the Hatred.

The extent to which the Greeks' hatred of the Turks goes is illustrated in "A Child of the Orient," by Demetra Vaka. The author's Aunt Kalliroe was an old Greek woman, whose feelings were the most anti-Turk. She had bought a large Greek homestead, for which she had no use and which she could not at all afford, solely to keep it from falling into the possession of a Turk. The author writes:

"The next time we visited Aunt Kalliroe she was installed in the Spathary homestead. Just within the front door stood a small table, covered with a white linen tablecloth, such as an orthodox Greek woman spun herself for the purpose of putting on the table where the ikons were laid—a tablecloth always washed by the mistress herself in a basin kept apart from the other dishes. On the table lay a Greek ikon, a brass candlestick holding three candles, all burning, and a brass incense burner, from which a column of blue smoke was rising, filling the house with the odor of incense.

"'Why, it isn't Easter, and it isn't Christmas!' I cried. 'It isn't even a great saint's day. Why are you burning the candles and the incense, great-aunt?'

"'They have been burning since I moved into this house, and they shall burn for thrice forty days, to cleanse it from Turkish pollution.'

"'But since Baky Pasha never bought it and never lived in it'—

"'No, but a Turk coveted it, and that is enough to pollute a Christian home.'"

Children and Sleep.

A medical expert declares that much of the present increase in insanity in the young is due to the prolonged deficiency in the amount of sleep which is drained. Children under five should sleep at least twelve hours a day and from that age to fifteen years at least ten hours.

JUST BEFORE THE WEDDING.

The bride:
"I wonder if Tom's mother will like me
Or if she will poke fun at all I do.
I wonder if the nice things she will say
About me that her son professes to.
I wonder!"

The bride's mother:
"I wonder if at home he'll nightly stay
And if he will continue to adore her.
I wonder if she'll manage him the way
I have her dear old doting dad before her!
I wonder!"

The bridegroom:
"I wonder if Jeanne's mother will turn out
To be a ma-in-law to conjure fear.
I wonder if she'll often be about
And if she'll always be so sweet and dear.
I wonder!"

The bridegroom's mother:
"I wonder if Tom's wife knows how to cook
And if she'll think I'm very queer and prim.
I wonder how her house is going to look
And if she's really good enough for him.
I wonder!"

The fathers (in chorus):
"We wonder how much money it will take
To keep them going for a year or two.
We wonder if those kids will really make
A fortune, as they're planning now to do.
We wonder!"

France Will Remain Faithful to Countries That Helped in Defense

"I Would be Lying if I Said I Agreed With Wilson on All Points," Said Premier Clemenceau.

THE BRITISH NAVY

By John De Gandt.
(United Press.)

PARIS, Dec. 30.—"I would be lying if I said I agreed with President Wilson on all points," Premier Clemenceau declared in addressing the Chamber of Deputies.

"President Wilson's ideas are not the same as those of a man whose country has been devastated for four years, and which in justice must be restored."

"The Tiger" declared that President Wilson congratulated him on his statement to Premier Lloyd George that he would have no objection to the British fleet rendering the same service in the future that it did in this war.

Clemenceau expressed confidence that the Allies would enter peace conference in the same united spirit they displayed in the war. He said present conversations between Allied leaders are vitally important as they will have to begin over again if no agreement is reached.

At the conclusion of his speech, the Chamber passed a vote of confidence in his government, 398 to 93.

"I remain faithful to the countries which have defended France with their armies and navies," Clemenceau said.

France Has Right.

"France has a right to vindications for the wrongs she has suffered. I will not divulge my ideas as to the vindications at this time, however, as it is possible some of them may have to be sacrificed. The peace preliminaries will be submitted to the Chamber for confirmation. "President Wilson came to Europe to defend several principles. He said to me: "I will try to convince you, and perhaps you will convince me."

"Premier Lloyd George said to me one day: 'Do you admit that without the British fleet you could not have continued the war?' I replied 'Yes.' Lloyd George continued, 'Then under these conditions, would you be disposed to do anything to prevent us from rendering the same service?' I replied 'No.' I recounted to President Wilson this conversation. He congratulated me on my loyalty to Great Britain, saying that each of the Allied nations might retain its own viewpoint on this question.

"This was the beginning of the conversations which must be regarded as vital, because if no agreement is reached everything must be begun all over.

Great Nations.

"I am sure that great nations like Great Britain, the United States, Italy and France should fly to help one another when one is attacked. The war was fought under this spirit and in this spirit we will go to the peace conference. Nothing must separate after the war the four great nations which the war united. I am ready to make the greatest sacrifices to preserve this union.

"We owe to our soldiers and their chiefs the great victory which was won. We aim to have all mankind enjoy the great fruits of this victory. Guarantees are necessary to prevent this. President Wilson's ideas are not the same as those of a man whose country has been devastated for four years and must, in justice be restored. But he is an honourable man, of great intelligence and noble spirit.

"It is the desire of all, especially the Socialists ,to introduce new elements into the building of nations. We must begin it by having it at home."

The President In Manchester

Wilson Was Given An Enthusiastic Reception—Final Public Address.

Robert J. Bender,
(United Press.)

MANCHESTER, Dec. 30.—President Wilson carried his peace message into the heart of England's industrial centre to-day when he addressed several thousand workingmen in the Free Trade Hall. He was received with the wildest enthusiasm.

The President had run the gauntlet from the Royalty of London to the homely piety of Carlisle and the humming activity of Manchester. The quality of his welcome was unchanged in any of these widely divergent atmospheres.

From early morning the streets were thronged in anticipation of the President's appearance. He and his immediate party arrived here from Carlisle late yesterday and spent the night as the guests of the Lord Mayor. He rose early and started for the hall at 9.30. Accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, the Lord Mayor, the latter's wife and the Town Clerk, he went to the canal, where they boarded the White Star liner "Majestic," on which they rode to the docks. Leaving the canal the party proceeded to the Town Hall, where Wilson was made an honorary citizen of Manchester. From there he went to the Free Trade Hall and delivered his second and final public address in England. He was given a great ovation as he rode through the streets.

The President appeared to enjoy the freedom from the semi-restraint of the Regal atmosphere in London. His adaptability was never more apparent than to-day.

President Wilson's visit to his mother's former home in Carlisle, brought him into contact with the inner spirit of the British people.

The Old Church.

Picture a church in a small town, with it ordinary congregation, mostly old people. Picture the front pews occupied by the President, his wife, the King's secretary and other dignataries, who joined in singing the usual hymn and knelt on the wooden floor in prayer, and finally picture the President, in response to the pastor's appeal, paying tribute to his mother and grandfather, with many of the congregation in tears.

From this humble scene, after a visit to the Cathedral, the President returned to the King's train with its magnificent white enamelled woodwork and gorgeous fittings, each car a Regal suite.

Apparently the route and the time of the train's passing were known to all the country people, as the track was lined at every station with men, women and children, who waved and cheered. Upon his arrival in Manchester the president was greeted with a cheering throng, which made his progress to the Mansion House a veritable march of triumph.

There will be a special general meeting of the Peterborough Branch Great War Veterans Association on Monday night, December 30 at headquarters. Every member is urged to be present as very important business in connection with the municipal elections will be taken up. 3T

JOHN NOBLE WILL SPEAK

At Labour Rally to be Held To-night at the Labour Hall—Candidates Will be Heard.

CAMPAIGN NEARING END

Mr. John Noble, of Toronto, arrived in the city this morning for to-night's meeting in the Labour Hall, which he will address in the interests of the Trades Council's four candidates for the Aldermanic Board. The meeting is under the auspices of the Trades and Labour Council, and every workingman and other citizens are requested to attend. Mr. Noble is a forceful speaker, he knows the labour platform and is by no means a stranger in Peterborough.

With to-night's meeting the Labour Council's campaign is expected to redouble activity until the last vote is in. Handbills with the reproductions of the protographs of the four Labour candidates, and a statement of Labour's platform, were distributed throughout the city to-day with the assistance of representatives of the Great War Veterans' Association. The last of the canvassing will be completed to-night and to-morrow, and the scrutineers and other helpers will be ready for Wednesday, when Labour goes over the top for the first time in Peterborough in many years.

Memorial Service at Knox Church

Permanent Honour Roll Will Be Erected.

A memorial service to the members of Knox Church, who gave their lives to the Empire during the war, was held last evening at which the following list of those who fell, was read by the pastor, Rev. A. J. MacKenzie: Alfred Black, Leroy Chambers, Gordon Carter, William Briggs, Herbert Cunningham, Leslie Howden, Horace Hill, Percy Mann, John McGregor, Jas. Newhall, Jas. Smith, Peter Smith, Edgar Smyth, Robert Thompson, William Toms, Richard Wedlock and Thos. Dyer. Besides these the names of Sam McKinley, who was for some years associated with Knox Church, Herbert Edwards, a member of All Saints', but whose family belongs to Knox Church, and Angus Louden, a personal friend of Rev. Mr. Keith, were read.

At the service Mr. McKenzie, using as his text Hebrews 12, verse 1, spoke of the undying honour the heroes have won in upholding the principles for which the war was fought.

A permanent honour roll will be unveiled in the church in a few weeks.

FIRST CURLING WILL BE PLAYED TO-NIGHT

The Curling season opens to-night with two ices, six and seven, ready for the stones. Numbers one and two are also in fairly good condition, and with another freezing or two should be available for New Year's. The committee of management will meet to-night to select the rinks for the annual games between the President and Vice-President to be played on Wednesday. The weather hasn't been cold enough for rapid freezing, and the open winter has already cut down the playing period.

Pacifism and Bolshevism Given Short Shrift by British Electors

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Commenting editorially on the British elections, the New York Times this morning says: "The most notable thing about the British elections was not that Asquith or Henderson or Christabel Pankhurst were defeated, or that coalition is victorious, or even that it won by a landslide. The most notable thing is that wherever the British voter could detect the faintest smell of pacificism or Bolshevism or any of the ugly monsters that have given the world so much trouble, he joyously tracked the smell to its place of origin and trampled to death whatever he found there. He put down all those things with the soles of his boots. If no other nation has taken its stand on Bolshevism and pacifism and more pestilent types of Socialism, Britain has, and she has served notice on them all where they can find her when they want her.

The World says: "By voting down pacifism, defeatism and Bolshevism in some constituencies they have given the Cabinet a hint as to the kind of peace they want."

"There is one fly in Lloyd George's pot of ointment, and this is the Irish vote, which is overwhelmingly Sinn Feinn," says the New York Herald.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION NOTES

Both Alderman Saunders and Mr. James Garside have been ill during the past week, but are reported to have recovered and will be out for New Year's elections.

Mr. Alex. Murray, one of Labour's four candidates, will celebrate his silver wedding to-morrow night, and on the eve of election day will probably forget for the moment the turbulence of campaigning in the happy recollections of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding.

It is generally understood that the chairman of the Board of Education next year will be either Mr. Roland Denne or Mr. G. N. Gordon. Both are candidates for re-election, and their friends are confident that they will be returned.

Because of the restrictions governing the importations of coal, there has been only veiled reference in the press during the past six months to the work of the City's Fuel Committee. This silence was requested by the Council and the committee, and of necessity it has obscured the work of Alderman Dobbin, Alderman Taylor and Mayor Duncan, who with the support of the Council, have more than 1,400 tons of coal in reserve for any emergency this winter. The purchasing and storing of this coal entailed a great deal of work that deserves mention.

Ashburnham is represented by only one candidate, Mr. Harry Gainey of the Labour slate. Alderman Weir decided that his uncertain health precluded his candidature, and Alderman Malcolm McIntyre retired in favour of his brother, Alderman A. A. McIntyre.

The Council and the citizens, too, are "in the air" on the bridge problem, and there is a decided vagueness in the suggestions as to what step shall be taken next. The facts are simply these, that the city is committeed to an overhead bridge on Hunter street, and the money voted by the people is insufficient to meet even the lowest tender received. The solution resolves itself into a question of how to obtain the additional money, whether to raise the deficit taxation next year, or submit another by-law to the people.

The War Veterans have invited the fifteen candidates for the Council to attend their meeting to-night. The visitors will be given an opportunity of declaring themselves on a general policy for the city, with explicit reference to the proposed war memorial and veterans' club.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS ARRIVE

Canadian Press:

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 30. — The troop ship "Carmania," with three thousand returning soldiers and civilians, docked here at nine o'clock this morning and the work of disembarkation began immediately. On Ontario soldiers, those for Kingston and London military districts were handled for documentation here, and those for Toronto district were rushed to Quebec. It is expected that the Carmania will be cleared for New York to-night, and the majority of the passengers will be on their way west before midnight.

NOTICE TO LABOR MEN.

AN OPEN MEETING IN THE INTERESTS OF THE LABOR CANDIDATES WILL BE HELD IN THE LABOR HALL THIS (MONDAY) EVENING AT 8 O'CLOCK. THE CANDIDATES WILL OUTLINE THE PLATFORM UPON WHICH THEY SEEK THE SUFFRAGE OF THE ELECTORATE. PROVINCIAL ORGANIZER NOBLE OF THE ELECTRICAL WORKERS' UNION, OF TORONTO, IS IN THE CITY, AND WILL DELIVER AN ADDRESS. ALL ARE INVITED TO ATTEND.

PTE. HEBER ROGERS

Mr. R. B. Rogers has been notified that his son, Pte. Heber Rogers, has reached London, after nearly four years' imprisonment in a German prison camp.

Christmas Festival at St. John's

St. John's congregation concluded the keeping of the Christmas festival with a fully choral Evensong, followed by hymns, carols and anthems, instead of a sermon. A large congregation assembled for this annual event and followed each number without a suspicion of weariness. Vincent Novello's arrangement of "Adeste Fideles" was splendidly sung. The boy choir sang excellently in a number of their own, "See Amid the Winter Snow," and the programme ended with a beautiful rendering of "Sleep, Holy Babe," a dramatic effect being produced by shutting off all the lights in the nave.

St. John's choir is one of the largest voluntary choirs in the Dominion of Canada, and their work, year in and year out, second to none. In the vestry, Canon Davidson heartily thanked the choristers for their faithful and arduous services, and Mr. R. J. Devey thankfully acknowledged the unselfish spirit of service which was the keynote of the work in St. John's choir. He was very proud of them all, not alone for their magnificent singing during this Christmas festival, but for their regular attendance winter and summer, thus exemplifying the true position of a choir as a handmaid of the church.

Good Work.

The church Woman's Association and the Chancel Guild accomplished splendid work in the decorations, a prominent and unusual feature of which was a magnificent arrangement of naval flags, suspended from pillars, windows and arch, indeed from every position where a flag could be used with advantage. Hearty appreciation of the kindness of Turner and Sons in lending and fixing such a unique display was heard on every hand. Holly from British Columbia was the result of kindly thought of Mr. Hopwood, who is over there at present on business.

A spirit of deep thankfulness for the conclusion of the war has helped along this year's celebration of Christmas, and that spirit will surely help along the anxious times of reconstruction which must be bravely faced.

Smith Council Is Re-elected

The Smith Township Council was re-elected by acclamation today as follows:—

Reeve—George Nicholls.
Deputy-Reeve—Bert Middleton.
Councillors—Mr. Douglas, William Grant and Wiliam Brown.

EXCEEDED ESTIMATE

British Press Review of the Election Returns—Co-operation of Labour.

HUGE MAJORITY

LONDON, Dec. 30.—(Canadian Press Via Reuter's.)—Discussing the results of the general election, the Daily Mail says that Premier Lloyd George is now at the mercy of his old enemies. The question will be, "Will he cajole them or they him." The Daily Mail, referring to the progress of Labour, says that the Labour party selection bureau in Paris proved that the majority of the soldiers were for labour, but were anti-pacifist.

The Times says that the country voted for the men whose war record was beyond reproach. It asks whether Premier Lloyd George will succeed in welding from his gigantic following a compact party, imbued with his own ideals of progress. It further says: "We should be more hopeful if the Premier's majority were smaller. Co-operation of Labour is immediately necessary, and the Premier should make a supreme effort to secure it. It would be a real safeguard against re-action."

The Daily Telegraph says the election verdict is the most complete triumph for the Prime Minister in the history of Parliamentary government. The average estimate of coalition majority was half the actual result.

The Daily Chronicle contends that the country was never more democratic, progressive and patriotic. The Chronicle thinks that the fact that the Premier's majority includes a Unionist majority need not disturb anybody because of his great personal strength.

SKATING SEASON OPENS TO-MORROW

Brock St. Rink Open to the Public for Skating To-morrow, New Year's Eve—Band.

So far as indoor skating is concerned, the season of 1918-19 will go on record as one of the very slowest in getting ice in years. Last season was an exceptionally good one for making ice and there was good skating almost three weeks in advance of this.

However the skating season is on to-morrow night and it is hoped will continue without interruption throughout the season.

A big band has been secured for to-morrow night and a good time is assured.

MR. JAS. HAMILTON'S FATHER ON COUNCIL THAT BUILT BRIDEG

An old-time citizen talking over the coming municipal elections became quite reminiscent Saturday evening. One of the big things in the 1919 programme of the City Council will be the building of the Hunter Street Bridge and one of the candidates for alderman is sentimentally linked up with the past when the construction of a new Hunter St. bridge is undertaken as a civic improvement.

At the time the old wooden bridge over the Otonabee at Hunter St, collapsed and a new bridge was proposed the late Peter Hamilton of the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Co. and father of Mr. James Hamilton of the same company and Aldermanic candidate in the present elections was a member of the council and gave a great deal of attention to the building of this bridge.

It is rather coincident that at the present time the son of one of those who was so active in the building of the bridge years ago should be a candidate at the time just when the old is to be replaced by a most modern structure.

Mr. Hamilton is a very energetic and enthusiastic young business man and as a candidate his entry into the civic arena will be followed with interest by his own many friends and by those who supported his father for a similar position years ago.

Public Meeting To-morrow Night

To-morrow evening a public meeting will be held in Victoria Hall for the benefit of the electors. All interested in the forthcoming elections are invited to be present. Addresses will be given by the candidates and others.

ADDRESSED THE WORKMEN

Woodrow Declares That America Will Join No Combination or or Alliance.

GREAT COVENANT

(Special to Examiner)

MANCHESTER, December 30. — President Wilson to-day gave warning that America would join no combination or alliance except a "league of all nations."

Addressing five thousand workmen in the free trade hall, he declared that the league of nations must be a great covenant by which all nations unite "for the maintenance and triumph of right." The statement was greeted by wild applause.

Presentation at All Saints Church

Sunday School Classes Elect Officers for the Year.

On Friday evening the "Buds of Promise" of All Saint's Church entertained the R.U.I.'s at a successful social evening at which the annual installation of officers of the R.U.I.'s was made.

MADE SPEECHES

Appropriate speeches were made by the following newly appointed and retiring officers:

Retiring Pres:—Mr. H. Ashmore.
New Pres:—Mr. O. Crowe.
Retiring Sec:—Mr. Ralph Turner.
New Sec:—Mr. Cecil Lebar.

and by the convenors of the class, social and membership committees, Mr. R. Runnels, Mr. W. Brodewelt and Mr. R. Turner.

PRESENTED CLOCK

After the election of officers and speeches, Mr. H. A. Sisson, the teacher, was presented with a handsome mahoghany mantel clock and at exactly one minute to eleven, Rev. Mr. Grobb wound and started the clock.

THE ADDRESS

In making the presentation the following address was read:—

Mr. H. A. Sisson,
Peterboro Ont.

Dear Mr. Sisson:—

We, the members of the R.U.I. Organized class of All Saint's Sunday School desire to express to you our appreciation of your work as teacher and leader of our class.

Our interest is to interest the young men of the church to join the class so that they may be brought more directly under the influence of the church and her teachings, thereby encouraging them to practice in their lives and conversation, those Godly virtues that they may be the means of leading others to become active members and workers, not only in the Sunday School but in the church as well.

We thank you, sir, that through your earnest efforts it has been possible for us to accomplish some of these things and we desire to convey to you our willingness to pray that God will ever bless your efforts in this good work.

We ask you to accept this clock as a slight testimony of our thanks.

Wishing yourself and Mrs. Sisson the Compliments of the season.

Signed on behalf of the R.U.I. Club,
A. E. Ashmore, Pres.
J. R. Turner, Sec'y.

The evening was concluded by a few words from the superintendant of the Sunday School Mr. C. E. Sisson and Rev. R. B. Grobb.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY DECEMBER 30TH, 1918.

HOW TO VOTE.

There seems to be considerable misunderstanding about the vote for aldermen and Board of Education at the municipal elections on Wednesday. This is caused by the anti-plumping regulation in the election for Council, which provides that an elector, must vote for at least four candidates. He may if he likes, and—if he has a real conception of his duty as an elector—should vote for ten candidates for the Council, but the main point is that his ballot will be declared spoiled if he does not place a cross opposite the names of four candidates at least. He cannot, of course, vote for more than ten.

"Plumpers" are allowed for the Board of Education. There are six candidates running, of which four are to be elected. It is permissible to vote for one, two, three or four of these, as the fancy of the voter dictates, but the elector must not vote for more than four candidates.

AGAIN, RED TAPE.

The failure of some officials to realize that there are times when red tape should be cut and technicalities forgotten is illustrated by a case which has come to the notice of the Examiner. A young Peterborough soldier who was only fifteen years old when he enlisted for overseas and who, in spite of his youthfulness, eventually proceeded to France, where he was wounded after considerable service, and where his gallantry won him a decoration, the Military Medal, has recently returned from overseas. He has been informed by officials of Military District No. 3 at Kingston that he is not entitled to receive any portion of the new war gratuity announced a few days ago by the government, because he is still under military age. The official order-in-Council in regard to the gratuity allowance has not yet been published, so that it is impossible to say whether or not the officials are technically correct in their statement, but be that as it may there can be no doubt of the moral claim of this very gallant youngster to share in the war gratuity. No matter what the regulations may be it was surely never intended that any soldier, be he sixteen or sixty, who went to France and served in the front line, in this particular case served so bravely that he was decorated, should not receive the recompense offered by the government. It is possible that there may be something in the order-in-Council to prevent boys who were not allowed to go to France and were eventually discharged because of their tender years from being eligible for a gratuity, but in the case of a youngster who was manly enough to go to France and fight until he was wounded, there does not seem to be a shadow of a logical reason for declaring that because he is still under eighteen years of age, he has no claim to a gratuity. The view that the Kingston official has taken will not stand analysis, and the case should be taken up by the Great War Veterans and fought through to a finish.

CANADIAN COLONIZATION.

Plans for colonization like most other "reconstruction" ideas are kept well hidden under the bushel of blundering mole-ishness at Ottawa. Canada has less than one-tenth of its arable land under cultivation, and millions of hard-earned Canadian capital is tied up in western land schemes, capital that may never be wholly recovered, but which will again become in some degree active when a forecast of future settlement is proclaimed.

The country cannot afford to go on borrowing money unless population is attracted, and while the immediate problem is one of resettling the returned soldier (if conditions are even as favorable as before the war, this is not going to be such a tremendous one), the Minister of Immigration should have ways and means of capitalizing the good feeling all over the civilized world toward Canada. In Britain, in France, in Italy, in the Scandinavian countries, in some parts of Russia, are the most fertile fields for the development of Canadian colonization plans. While it may be argued that there will be work for all in the home countries of prospective immigrants, there can be no serious doubt that thousands are going to "trek" for the new western world, a world where no wars have been in one hundred years, and of which they have heard stories of hope and wonder.

The United States has its hundred millions. It is doubtful if it will again extend its powerful magnet upon the far-flung shores of the old lands. Uncle Sam has just about as many children as he knows what to do with, and his task will be carefully to select and grade at his great sieve on Ellis Island. In any event it is not likely that his country will attract the Britisher as Canada will attract him. And the men and women of British stock are those whom Canada should first invite to become residents and citizens. They have a common inheritance and a common interest in the welfare of the Dominion. We want them in all branches, English, Irish, Scotch and Welsh, and we want them in all grades, business-men, professional men, engineers, artisans and farmers, most of all farmers.

The solid peasantry of France would make great citizenship material for Canada, and there are sturdy branches of many races that would occupy our lands. Vast areas filled means vast cities and many factory wheels.

Canada, if it sees clearly, if it has men who can learn to love it for its trueness and clearness and great latent power for world good, may certainly come to claim the twentieth century for its own. The real, the last, the greatest opportunity for nation-building is to come to us.—London Advertiser.

THE COMING ELECTIONS.

Peterborough suffers, in common with many other communities, from a lack of mutual trust and faith. Many a worthy movement is held back and its progress retarded because of the suspicion and want of confidence among different factions in the city's life. It is hard to understand why this condition of affairs should exist, but failure to appreciate the reason for its presence in Peterborough does not alter the act that this undercurrent of suspicion is to be found here and is dogging the advance of this city.

Many people seem to have a difficulty in understanding why their fellow-citizens should do something for nothing. The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is an example. It has not been an uncommon thing to hear people say, after seeing the huge crowds that in later years have attended the Exhibition, "The Fair Directors are not in this thing for their health. They must be getting something out of this or they would not work so hard." And yet the directors of the Peterborough Industrial, far from making any pecuntary gain as a result of their efforts, give not only of their time and energy freely, but also of their money in order to ensure the success of the Exhibition. If those who are inclined to criticize would take the opportunity that presents itself of themselves serving as members of the Exhibition committees, it can readily be conceived that their ideas would undergo a sudden and radical transformation.

Exactly the same state of affairs exists in connection with the City Council. The eagerness with which some men place their services at the disposal of their fellow citizens because they really desire to serve, or because the spirit of the municipal game has gotten into their blood, has created in different quarters in Peterborough, an impression that there must be some advantages in civic life that are hidden from the public eye, but are potent enough to make men overlook the apparent self-sacrifice and inconvenience of serving the public in their anxiety to get their share of these concealed benefits. Such an impression is not a healthy one; it is a feeling that should be crushed, and for that reason it may perhaps be taken as a welcome sign that in the present municipal election there are representatives of different groups in the field. While it is not perhaps an ideal way to select a City Council— because after all the most efficient aldermanic board is the one that is chosen on the individual merits of the candidates themselves, regardless of what particular faction or interest they represent—yet in view of the existing feeling referred to at the beginning of this article, it might be a good thing, after all, for Peterborough to be governed next year by a Council representative of as many interests as possible. The representation in a 1919 Council of citizens who are greatly interested in the Baord of Trade and believe this body and the Council should work together in the public interests should result in a more effective and concerted effort. Added to this Labour representation and we should have a fairly representative Council, recogizing their duty as citizens of the city. They would be able to convince themselves and those whom they represent, that there is not much difficulty in getting ttogether on common ground, and that municipal government, like many other things, looks widely different from the inside.

MISS GRACE FISHER, WITH "MISS BLUE EYES," HARVEY ORR'S BIG MUSICAL COMEDY AT THE GRAND NEW YEAR'S DAY MATINEE AND EVENING.
The Seat Sale opened this morning.

The advance plan of tickets for the big New Year's Day attraction at The Grand, "Miss Blue Eyes," a sparkling new musical comedy, opens to-day at the Box Office. Special holiday prices have been arranged for and lovers of good clean entertainment and tuneful music should reserve their seats at once.

"Miss Blue Eyes" comes here highly recommended from the surrounding cities and should prove to be a gala holiday attraction.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The German sailors do not seem to be much better fighters on land than they have proved to be on the sea. They have surrendered the Royal Palace in Berlin.

Returned soldiers do not think very highly of ex-Ald. Crowe's suggestion that the armouries should be turned over to them. "We saw enough of that place during the war," one Veteran remarked.

The London Advertiser points out that the greatest difficulty about the proposed League of Nations will be the umpiring.

CUT THE ARMY RED TAPE.

Willich Knew His Men and They Knew Him and That Settled It.

There are times when the so called "red tape" of the army gives way under the stress of circumstances. At the battle of Chickamauga General Willich, who was commanding a brigade, incurred the displeasure of General Rosecrans, the commanding general, by some slight omission. General Willich was sent for and informed by the general commanding that he must consider himself under arrest for the present.

"You may leave your sword here," added Rosecrans, "until your case is tried."

"Yes, general, I will consider myself under arrest," was the reply, "and just as soon as this engagement is over, I'll come and fix up the matter."

"But, sir," said the astounded Rosecrans, "I want you to consider yourself under arrest now."

"Of course I do," responded Willich promptly, "and just as soon as this fight is over I'll see that the matter is arranged."

"But, sir," expostulated the commanding general, "I can't let you go into this fight. You are under arrest. I will assign an officer to your brigade."

"You send an officer to command my boys!" cried Willich indignantly. "He can't command them! They don't know him! They know me—I can teach them. None of my boys would know how to fight or what to do unless I was with them. My boys belong to me. Yes, me, General Willich! I command the brigade, and I must fight the brigade!"

General Rosecrans gave it up. General Willich was requested to return "and fight his boys," which he did most successfully. And that was the end of the matter.—Washington Star.

THE FIRST TEACUPS.

They Had No Handles, and Saucers Were Used as Covers.

In the middle of the seventeenth century tea was introduced into England, and with it came the Chinese or "china" teacup. Strangely enough, the men who imported it from the orient did not themselves understand the method of its use.

The Chinese put a pinch of tea into a large cup without a handle, filled it with boiling water and then inverted a saucer over the receptacle, within whose rim it closely fitted. The object was partly to retain the heat, but chiefly to prevent the escape of the fragrance of the herb, which the Chinese found most delicious. The infusion was permitted to stand for five minutes, when it was decanted into a second cup without a saucer and daintily sipped.

John Bull, however, emphatically declined to take his tea in Chinese fashion. He liked the appearance of the ornamental ware upon his table, but he insisted on placing the cup in the saucer, like a miniature flowerpot, and used it exclusively to drink from, preparing the beverage in a common instead of an individual receptacle.

In course of time England began the manufacture of cups and saucers, and pictures which have been preserved from the days of the Stuarts show big, daring cups, four inches across the top, with saucers less than three inches in diameter. By degrees one dwindled and the other expanded, until in the middle of the nineteenth century the opposite extreme was reached, and fashionable tea services had cups only an inch and a half in diameter, accompanied by five inch saucers.

The handle of the teacup came from Mediterranean lands. Originally it was made of thick and strong earthenware and applied to heavy jars and lamps. Its decorative possibilities popularized it with Greek and Roman potters, who extended its use to small amphorae and flagons; but, as the word "amphora" indicates, the handle was double. Single handles crept into use by slow degrees and were probably applied to drinking cups about the time that coffee came into vogue in southern Europe, the beverage being taken almost at the boiling point, so that some device for lifting the cup without burning the fingers was found desirable.—London Tatler.

Damp Room Test.

To ascertain whether a room is damp or not place a weighed quantity of fresh lime in an open vessel in the room and leave it there for twenty-four hours, carefully closing the windows and doors. At the end of the twenty-four hours reweigh the lime and if the increase exceeds 1 per cent of the original weight it is not safe to live in the room.

Mr. W. H. Pretty For the Board of Education

Candidate for Election to School Board Submits Statements of Views on Educational Matters.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough:—

As a candidate for election to the Board of Education, it has been suggested to me, that, in common fairness to my friends who are supporting me, I should place before you a few words being upon myself and my experience, also a brief statement of any views I may have upon educational matters generally. This note is in response to my friends' wishes.

I am confining my canvassing to the press and such friends as may voluntarily undertake to do this for me, not wishing to embarrass my fellow-citizens in their actions, so kindly do not misunderstand this action on my part. Your votes are invited.

To Our Soldier Citizens:—

In the years past I have spent three continuous years, on land and sea, in connection with the Coast Defences and Submarine Mining Defences of the Mother Land. I also qualified for a Commission, from the Ranks, in the Corps of Royal Engineers, while engaged in this work. On the declaration of war by Great Britain against Germany in 1914, I volunteered (four days later) for Active Service with the Canadian Forces. The privilege of going over the top with you was denied to me, but I invite you to go over the top with me with your votes on New Year's day, if you think I can be of any service to you and yours, in the Vocational and Technical Training, which must sooner or later be taken in hand in Peterborough. I offered to fight along with you then, I am willing to work for you now.

To Our Clergymen:—

I am in favour of some Code of Ethics being included in our Public School Curriculum, one sees the need of this each and every day of our lives, the world would be brighter and happier and more prosperous for it. I have yet to find a basis superior to the teachings of the Great Teacher of Nazareth.

To the Teaching Staff Generally:—

I believe in maintaining the standard of our teaching staff throughout, and, having in the past been sometime occupied as a Lecturer in Engineering Science and Technology, know somewhat of the tasks and difficulties of the teacher's vocation. The fact that the Dean of my College was Professor Thos. H. Huxley, and that my College Diplomas carry his signature, will, I trust, be sufficient introduction.

I am an advocate of the Teaching Staff having a direct representative on the Board of Education, elected by themselves, and independent of, and without disfranchising any teacher in any Public Election whatsoever. If you approve of these views, express your appreciation through your votes on New Year's day.

To Our Captains of Industry:—

I have been associated with undertakings, chiefly of an Engineering nature, involving the economic and profitable expenditure of large sums of money, also the economic equipment and development of works and their interdependent industries, and have some knowledge of the needs of both Capital and Labour, for happy, successful, and profitable results. I have also taken an active part, in past years, after the day's business was over, in the organization, equipment, and development of Technical Institutes for artisans and students.

If you think this experience of any service to you, answer in your votes on New Year's day.

To Our School Children:—

I am in favour of the abolition of Friday evening home work from our Public Schools, and your entering school every Monday morning ready to work hard, and help both your teacher and yourself, after your free-from-care week-end. Ask your parents and guardians if they approve of this to say so through their votes on New Year's day.

To Our Trades and Labour Men and Craftsmen:—

I served my apprenticeship or pupilage of some seven years to Mechanical Engineering in the old-fashioned way, and had the privilege of passing through the machine shops, smithy, boiler, and girder shops, foundry and pattern shops, but spent most of my time in the fitting and erecting shops. I afterwards gave some three years to following that "then" new and wonderful industry, called, Electrical Engineering, going later to College for three and a half years or more. I have been engaged in Engineering work involving a knowledge of Mechanical, Electrical, or Civil Engineering ever since. I have taken an active part in Technical School and College Development in the Old Land, both in an advisory capacity and as a Lecturer in Engineering.

I trust I need no further introduction to you.

I am an advocate of remunerative Technical Scholarships being offered by the Provincial and Dominion Governments, which will enable some of our Craftsmen sons to take advantage of the Higher Technical Training available in Canada or elsewhere, as the successful Student competitor may desire. That these Scholarships be open to all Technical Students in all Provincial Technical Schools, irrespective of creed or class, that the examinations be based on merit, the candidate being unknown to the examiners, who are in turn unknown to the Scrutineers who number the identification tags and examination papers, as they are received in the examination room from the Students' hands, the identification tags being then removed and placed in bond under Government Seal, until the successful numbers are announced.

If you think the above worthy of your approval express your appreciation through your votes on New Year's day.

To The Public Generally:—

I do not believe that our Educational advancement can be carried on without the expenditure of money but I do believe that money properly spent on the education, environment and healthy development of our children and young people, is the best investment in "Futures" the Canadian Public can make in the interests of Greater Canada. Every cent spent properly in this way is an insurance against the otherwise unavoidable waste involved in building up Reformatories, Penitentiaries, Prisons, Farms, Hospitals, Lunatic Asylums, Armies, Armaments, etc., etc., and the very necessary accompanying maintenance of an expansive organization of Law Courts, etc., etc., many of the gentlemen who follow vocations with the latter, would, I feel sure, be valuable addition to our industrial field if they could be relieved from his work.

Whoever heard of a millionaire begrudging the expense of the education of his children, and Canada is a thousand times a "multi"—millionaire, if her natural resources are handled and developed as they should be developed, and Canada can and should not do less for her sons and daughters.

To My Sporting and Club Pals:—

I have always been as fond of a holiday and sports as any one, but there was a time when I felt in honour bound to choose between the ties of pleasure and business emoluments and the Public Service. Those the latter course, and, for over eight years of my life, gave the whole of my spare time, after business hours, to the advancement of Technical Education among artisans and students, at a rate of remuneration less than my out of pocket expenses.

If you think this a sufficient excuse for my apparent shortcomings, express your approval in your votes on New Year's day.

To Those Whom I May Have Overlooked:—

If you find no reference to your own particular case in the above, speak to me when meeting, I shall be delighted to discuss matters of mutual interest, but please do not ask me to write long letters to the press.

Believe me,

Yours very truly,

W. H. PRETTY.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir:— behalf of the Children's Aid Soc ty, I wish to thank all those w helped to make the children at Shelter happy for Christmas. joy shown by the little ones amply repay for all generosity. eral of the children overseas and when these have fathe y will find their children well for,

Joseph Wearing,
Secretary

December 30th, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir:—In fairness to the public in gener nd myself in particular, will you nt me space to set some matters t—

1st:— rumoured that the Independ der of Oddfellows are behind m this election. My answer is this though an active member of the ve order, and proud of it, yet I osely kept away from even the C Room for fear some member m think I was endeavouring to us membership in the order for el n purposes.

2nd— Because I have not made rash mises to support labour to the sion of everything else, I am accu by some labour enthusiasts of b against labour. My answer is th wear a union button, carry a uni ard, have the honour of holding office in a union and am in good standing—does this surprise so But let me add I try to be broad minded and remember that my views are not necessarily infallable, therefore I have as much respect for a non-union man as I have for a union man, providing he is honest in his convictions. But I abhor what is known in the vulgar vernacular as a "scab." While in the contracting business I never cut a man's wages in order, always paid top-notch wages and used my men as men—my reference is any man who ever worked for me and there are scores in Peterborough—I resent the accusation that I am not a friend of labour—But in justice to myself and the public I refuse to make wild election promises such as endorsing all that the Trades and Labour Council proposes, or to vote for support grants to the G.W.V.A., or recommend bathing stations, or the two-platoon system, and the dozen other matters for the purpose of catching the votes of some particular body. If my judgment sincerely and honestly is in doubt then far better defeat. But if I am to be trusted to represent my fellow-citizens unselfishly, impartially, and loyally and they think me worthy, there will be no need for me to pledge myself to any doubting faction in order to win a few votes. With me "Jack is as good as his Master," but no better.

With regard to the Examiner's invitation to the Aldermanic candidates to declare themselves with reference to "A definite proposal" in connection with the matter of "providing suitable headquarters for Peterborough returned Soldiers." I think it most unfair to ask a prospective alderman to pledge himself to support a motion for $10,000 for the above purpose, when perhaps $20,000 is necessary, or another and better proposal may be made. My regard for the returned man and the City's obligation to him in my humble opinion, should not ebb and flow during pre-election and normal seasons. But I am willing to go on record as an ardent supporter of anything that is decided the most acceptable and adequate reward to our veterans. There is nothing too good. But let us be rational—I for one will not say $10,000 or $50,000, Armouries or Old West Ward School, and I give the G.W.V.A. the credit of being too honourable a body to ask a man just before election for "a pledge or we won't vote for you."

If honoured with election for the City Council my only promise is I will do my duty as I see it unselfishly, impartially and loyally.

Thank you Mr. Editor,

Respectfuliy,

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE.

Peterboro, Dec. 30, 1918

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir:—Allow me the use of your columns to give my views on two very important issues that we, the citizens of this coutry, will be looked upon to decide in the near future. The most judicious way of doing all we can for the returned soldiers, and the perpetuating of the memory of those who will not return, but who lost their lives in the great struggle against an unfair enemy.

I have already given my views on the "first issue." I cannot see any way possible to connect the two into one, and do either justice, because of the wide difference in the two. One is wanted right now, the other can be done later on and improved upon if necessary.

Let us take a glance at what the past teaches us in perpetuating the memory of heroes. If we go to London, we see the great monuments to Nelson, Wellington and many other illustrious heroes, never to be forgotten as long as those sublime monuments survive.

Then we have in this country many of which none is more inspiring than Gen Brock's on Queenston Heights.

I consider there is none more worthy of such a monument than those soldiers who have volunteered to fight for us, whose memory would be handed down to posterity for ages.

Have a monument 200 feet high erected in Victoria Park in front of the Court House on the "Brock monument lines," illuminated from the bottom to the top, which could be made a blaze of light on special occasions and holiday nights, and would eclipse the magnificent Quaker Oats display, which can be seen for many miles around. When, as years go by can be improved on for the foundation is laid and the monument will always be there.

Not like a building to be occupied with a tablet, in it where the elements and danger of fire, and several other accidents might occur to destroy it, and any event would soon be forgotten, for the purpose intended. I have not the slightest idea of what the cost would be, but no matter it would be money well spent, even if it takes ten years to build it. This county and city owes it to those men as a fitting tribute to their memory,

Yours Truly
Joseph Crowe,
376 Brock St.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—At a meeting of the Commercial Travellers on Saturday, they selected a slate for the coming municipal election. On looking over the list I was very much surprised to see that they had overlooked one of the most useful men we have in civic affairs. Ald. F. H. Dobbin is one of the most useful citizens, and who has given us four years of most helpful and satisfactory work in the City Council. We feel that he may be relied on to have careful and judicious view of our affairs, enterprising where enterprise should be shown, and careful that we be not carried away to involve the city in obligations that cannot be carried out. His handling of the department entrusted to him, his care and work in our coal enterprise commend him to the ratepayers as a safe man to have in the Council.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I was asked by friends this morning to state the position I would take, if elected, with regard to the Housing Problem, so called.

And my conviction is just this. We need houses. We need at least a fair percentage of houses intermittently vacant, that can be had for people coming to live in the city.

The manufacturer needs that houses be built to afford houses for men to serve the enlargement of the factory operations. We trust that such will be made.

We need houses that the manufacturer proposing to come and locate in the city will see that those whom he brings with him can be reasonably housed.

We need houses that the buildings will share in the city revenue and assessment. Otherwise our assessment will stand.

But the proposition, now supported by Federal and Provinciala money, at the security of the City, will be such that one man shall not have to help pay for the other fellow's house.

That no extension of city boundaries shall be made to provide cheap lots. That the function of the lands and lots speculator be eliminated.

That houses be built on streets and in parts of the city already provided with sewers, water, sidewalks and light service. That the city shall not be put to the expense of building and providing where these things are already at service.

That early in the year the proposition be taken up, by Council, if you like, Board of Trade and others, and a safe and sane proposition evolved. If such proposition will meet the needs of the man looking to own his own house, well and good.

But that houses shall not be constructed under and plan or proposition for rental.

That the committee shall be a thorough dispassionate one, not interested personally in the project and with no axes to grind.

Respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

A BRIDE FROM THE TOMB.

Odd Romance of Benedello Marcello, the Venetian Composer.

Benedello Marcello, one of the most famous Venetian composers, fell in love with a beautiful girl named Leonora Manfrotti, who married Paolo Seranzo, a Venetian noble. She died a short time after her marriage, a victim to the harsh and jealous treatment of her husband.

Her body was laid out in state in one of the churches, and her lover actually succeeded in stealing the corpse and conveying it to a ruined crypt in one of the islands, and here he sat day and night by his lost love, singing and playing to her, as though by the force of his art he could recall her to life.

Leonora had a twin sister, Eliade, who was so like her that her closest friends could scarcely distinguish them. One day Eliade heard a singer in a gondola singing so exquisitely that she traced the gondola to the deserted island, and there she learned later the fate of her sister's corpse and the identity of Marcello. Aided by a servant, Eliade substituted herself for her sister's body, and when Marcello returned and called Leonora to awake he did not ask in vain, for apparently she rose alive from the coffin. Marcello when he found out the delusion was quite satisfied and married Eliade, but his happiness was short lived, as he died a few years afterward.—London Telegraph.

The Bishop's Place.

The bishop of London, speaking at the annual meeting of the bishop of London's fund at Grosvenor House, said that churches did not drop down from heaven any more than bishops, though a little girl in his congregation, evidently under that delusion, had recently said to her mother during a tiring sermon: "I am tired now, mother. Can't the bishop go back to heaven?"—London Standard.

The Still Alarm To-day, Tuesday and Wednesday

The Greatest Melo-Drama of All Times—The Climax of Sensationalism.

For three days, commencing to-day, "The Still Alarm" will be the attraction at the Empire Theatre in this city. Pursuant to his progressive methods manager Robinson is offering this story, which is a screen interpretation of Joseph Arthur's celebrated stage play by the same name.

The picture was produced in one of the largest studios in this country. It is a super-picture, in all that the term implies; enacted by a notable cast of players including Thomas Santchi, Fritz Brunette, and Bessie Eyton. The story is of the melodramatic type, embracing all of the romance and dramatic situations of the play, but besides this it is a spectacular film of supreme importance owing to the gigantic fire scenes which surpass any in magnitude which have ever been seen on a motion picture screen.

A Famous Trio Coming to the Grand

Bill, Bert and Alf, Bairnsfather's Creations, Are Anxious to Meet the Peterboro Public.

At the Grand Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 2nd, 3rd and 4th, patrons will have the pleasure of witnessing "The Better 'Ole."

Competent critics assert the film version is at least equal to, if not finer than the play which has figured at many of the leading theatres in London and New York. Certainly most has been made of the grim realism at the front, together with the jests by which they boys make their lives bearable. The photography is superb and altogether the piece should attract crowded houses. With the alternative title of "The Romance of Old Bill" "The Better 'Ole" was adapted from the well-known Bairnsfather-Eliot play by Mr. George Pearson and Mr. T. A. Welsh, with a number of new scenes and characters and a linking love story, which have the cordial assent of the authors. The pictures are admirable, the humor is abundant without any traces of coarseness, and the pathos always passes safely the perilous shell hole of the maudlin. One is perhaps tired of the declation that such and such a play or picture "has a high propagandist value," and no object of pointing the moral or adorning a tale was in the view of the adapters when this film was planned. Yet it undoubtedly does make a popular appeal to those right sympathies, which all eloquence, whether spoken, written or pictorial is directed to arouse on behalf of the armies that so nobly suffered for the cause of righteousness and freedom. In all respects the two hours which the film takes to show are time well spent by all who like a clean, fresh and stimulating entertainment.

When Captain Bairnsfather created Old Bill he builded surer than he knew. The walrus-mustached figure of this Old Contemptible, together with his satellites, Alf and Bert, is part of the imperishable history of the war, and will typify for centuries the matchless bravery and the dauntless good humor of the men who saved Europe. Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's creations are always welcome, and his three best figures, Old Bill, Bert and Alf, are sure of a cordial greeting in Peterboro when they make their bow in the film version of "The Better 'Ole" at the Grand Opera House the last three days of this week.

Captain Bairnsfather's cartoons of the British Tommy at the front have become world famous and will go down through the ages as typifying the spirit of the British soldier who has done so much in winning the war. Their cheery optimism under all circumstances, their unflagging sense of contempt for danger, are shown in "The Better 'Ole."

Stiff Sentences For Safe-Crackers In Kingston Prison

DONNELLY AND GORMAN GET 12 AND 14 YEARS AT WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, Dec. 30.—Stiff sentences were meted out to the two safe-crackers, Donnely and Gorman by Magistrate Ball here.

The men who were caught in a barn here a week ago and on whom were found the $7,100 Victory Bonds and other articles secured when they blew the safe in Arthur Smith's store at Wyecombe, near Delhi, were sentenced to fourteen years and twelve years respectively in Kingston penitentiary.

Following the sensational arrest of the two men, Chief Moore got in touch with the Dominion authorities and ascertained that the men were hardened criminals. The one who gave his name as Gorman is no other than Burke, a noted safe-cracker, who some years ago was sentenced to 26 years in Jackson prison for a job in North Michigan. He had served six years of the sentence, when he was paroled.

The other man, who gave his name as Donelly, turns out to be a Rochester man named McDonald. He has no lengthly record so far as the police could learn.

Three charges were registered against the men. They were charged will carrying explosives, concealed weapons and breaking into the Wyecombe store. On the first charge each was sentenced to seven years. On the second each was sentenced to five years in Kingston, and on the third charge of cracking the safe the sentence was fourteen years for Burke and twelve for McDonald. The sentences are to run concurrently.

The portrait of many a distinguished man shows up in the newspapers—with full details of what curedr him of his otherwise fatal ailments.

Heroic France to Ask Allies For Peace Aid

With 2,500,000 Men Killed or Maimed, She Will Need Reconstruction Assistance.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 30. — With 2,500,000 of her youngest, ablest and most spirited men killed or maimed, and upwards of half her industry and shipping destroyed by the war, France's appeal to her allies during the period of rehabitation will be for help in rebuilding the factories and farms which the Germans wrecked and for assistance in constructing or purchasing ships, Edward De Billy, Deputy High Commissioner of the French Republic, declared here.

Admitting his country's gain by the conflict, in the revitalizing of the French spirit of self-confidence, subdued by the defeat of 1871, and in the regaining of Alsace and Lorraine, with their coal and iron deposits and rich agricultural districts, Mr. De Billy said the war's losses were far greater. He denied that France is "bled-white," but said the handicap imposed as a result of her sacrifices in resisting the invader could not be overcome except without outside aid.

Resorting to figure, he declared that 26,000 factories in the French districts occupied by the Germans were destroyed or stripped of their machinery; that almost 12,000,000 head of cattle were seized; that thousands of miles of farm land, devastated by shells, was made unfit for cultivation; that the net loss in ships tonnage, through sinkings and enforced curtailment in production was 670,000 tons, and that the money cost of the conflict, in appropriations and public debt aggregated 158,000,000,000 francs.

BOARD of ALDERMEN

Ald. A. A. McINTYRE

As a candidate for re-election to the City Council for 1919 I respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The coming year will be marked by a number of outstanding questions of grave importance that will have to be dealt with my the incoming Council. These include the proposed overhead bridge on Hunter street, the sewage disposal plant, the two-platoon system for the firemen, and also the question of a suitable war memorial and better and more adequate attention to the many problems connected with the soldiers who are already home and those who will return in the future.

This year it will be necessary for the electors to mark their ballots for at least four aldermen and not more than ten. I hope to be favoured with one of these votes and if elected will give the same impartial and undivided attention to civic affairs that has characterized by efforts in the past. If you vote for less than four aldermen the ballot will be counted as a spoiled ballot, and if you vote for more than ten the same conditions will apply.

Yours for a greater and more prosperous and progressive city.

A. A. McIntyre.

As Candidate for Alderman

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having had your confidence for the past five years as a member of your City Council, I again ask your approval.

I have, in looking after your interests, tried to be useful, helpful and practical. Such details as have been entrusted to my care have been attended to efficiently and carefully.

There has been little opportunity in the past four war years for what is termed "progressive enterprise" for the city. If the coming term affords such you will not find me lacking in furthering that which is best for both your interest and that of the municipality. I can only ask you to take my past record as an assurance for the future.

I believe that thoroughness of attention to detail in our city administration is the only sure way to success. All else is but a flash in the pan. We must grow as we grow. Careful management, reasonable economy, faithful service are the basis of your municipal progress. I will, if elected, work earnestly for all.

Very respectfully,

To the Municipal Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

In compliance with the urgent request of numerous friends I have consented to stand for election as Alderman for the city for 1919.

"Now is the Time to Change Your Pilot," Said Clemenceau

Premier of France Was Given a Vote of Confidence in the Chamber of Deputies After a Stormy Debate—"I Am Ready to Resign," Declared the "Tiger."

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Dec. 30. —Premier Clemenceau was given a vote of confidence, 380 to 134, in the Chamber of Deputies on Sunday after a stormy debate, during which the war aims of France were outlined by Stephen Pichon, Foreign Minister, and the Premier had indicated his adherence to the "old system of alliances called the balance of power." It was indicated by the Premier that a formation of a League of Nations might be carried out coincidentally with the drafting of a treaty of peace.

"Whether this Chamber gives me a vote of confidence or not, I am ready to resign office," he continued. "If you have a minute's hesitation, now is the time to change your pilot. You cannot do it when we are under way. The question of peace is terrible. It is one of the most difficult questions ever submitted to a nation at any time. In a few days, a conference of delegates will meet at Paris which will settle the fate of nations in all parts of the world. France was in an especially difficult situation. It was the country nearest Germany. America was far away and took her time to come into the war. England came at once at the call of Mr. Asquith. We suffered and fought, our men were mowed down and our town ands villages were destroyed."

Orientalism and the Winter Coiffure

Eastern Influence Also Felt in Frocks and Wraps.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The opening night of the opera always marks the opening of the formal season in town. And this year the audience was just as brilliantly clad as ever and there seemed to be no relaxation in the pomp and ceremony that one invariably connects with the first night at the opera. As the curtain rang down on the first act and the lights blazed glaringly, many gorgeous costumes came to light, and it may be said that the many precious stones were worthy of rivaling the intensity of the electric blaze.

My attention, however, was attracted by the many new and startling headdresses that most of the women wore. Although the contours were all different, the one similar point was in the orientalism that influenced them all.

Ecclesiastical in Design.

One that bespoke all the mystery of Egypt was of violet chiffon with a band of pearls laid lightly around the head over the chiffon. A tall, defiant plume of the palest of turquoise colouring, rested with abundant assurance on the forehead and sprouted up to a rather unheard-of altitude.

Type To Be Considered.

Of course the type of women to wear this must be over average height and be a bit arrogant in manner. How absurd to see a petite, pouty little thing in this regalia! The little person, however, is not to be refused the privilege of an oriental headdress, so for her is the low cap shape arrangement of pearls. A wee bit of chiffon peeps beneath, falling over the eyes, and the entire effect is delightfully and distintively Persian.

To have one's coiffure truly oriental and to wear a gown of the Renaissance would, of course, in its incongruity, be a tragedy unworthy even of mention. So Dame Fashion very thoughtfully created some gowns for our smart women that fairly brought the Far East within the stately portals of the Metropolitan. The beautiful straight line of the Eastern mode makes the costume entirely dependent on the material and workmanship.

Materials Gorgeous.

Some of the materials that I saw far surpassed any dreams that one could have of harmonious colours and fantastic designs. For the most part the fabrics were heavy brocades and velvets, with luxuriant satins holding their own. One gown that was the centre of the line of vision of many was enveloped in dark blue silk Georgette and blue-green velvet. The Chinese atmosphere that enveloped this creation was perhaps the cause of the tremendous sensation that it occasioned. Let me mention that the person that wore the dream of the East was a lovely blonde with the skin of a lily.

G.W.V.A. Secretary Appreciates Gratuity

Gives Soldiers an Independent Income Long Enough to Ensure Them Employment

OTTAWA, Dec. 30.—R. M. St. Mart, Dominion secretary-treasurer, Great War Veterans' Association, when asked for his opinion of the war service gratuity created by Order-in-Council, made the following statement:

"I consid the Government is to be congratulated upon having taken such generous action, which means that the men of the returning army will be placed in an independent position for a sufficient length of time after their discharge to enable them to find the employment for which they are most suited, and which is most suitable to them.

"A married man, or a man with dependents, will be in receipt of an income of not less than $100 per month, for a period of six, five, four, or three months, after his discharge, according to the length of his service. A single man will be in receipt of an income of not less than $70 per month for a period of six, five, four, or three months after his discharge, according to the length of his service. Men already discharged, who have seen service in an actual threatre of war, also benefit fully by the provisions of the Order-in-Council.

"Therefore without taking into account the considerable balance of deferred pay, which a majority of the returning men have to their credit, it can safely be said that no returned soldier, who is willing and able to work, will suffer any hardship whatever upon his return to Canada. He will not be a suppliant for labour, forced to accept unsuitable employment at low wages, in order to ward off starvation. He will be able to choose employment where the remuneration will be commensurate with his ability and the services he performs.

"In this matter Canada has treated her soldiers and sailors more generously than any other nation and no one can complain of unfairness.

"The allowance is, in fact, much more generous than we ever anticipated it would be."

Experience in U-Boat Sinking Wins Skipper Colorado Bride

Captains of Two Torpedo Ships Become Fast Friends While Captives on Submarine—Escaping Man Discovers Companion's Family "Back Home" and Marries Daughter.

DENVER, Colorado, December 30. —When a German submarine sank the Mary Jane, commanded by Captain Carl Nelson, an adventure was started which culminated in the skipper's marriage by Chief Justice S. Harrison White in the Governor's office at the State House.

Instead of cursing the Huns, as he did when he lost his ship, Captain Nelson now is thankful that fate treated him as it did for had the U-boat left him and his ship alone he would still be a bachelor instead of a happy bridegroom.

The Huns sank two tramp ships, the Mary Jane and the Jimmie Murphy off the Irish coast in 1915. Captain Edward M. Lawhead, in command of the latter, suffering from smallpox, was rescued by Capt. Nelson and the two skippers were taken on board of the submarine. There they became fast friends and each promised that should he escape the Huns he would search for the other's family.

Later, when the U-boat was cruising about near where the Lusitania was torpedoed, Nelson dived from the stern of the submersible and was picked up by the liner St. Louis. He returned to America and spent many months searching for Captain Lawhead's family. Finally he learned that the Captain's daughter, Miss Charlotte, was visiting Lady Alice Kerruish, at No. 26 West Thirteenth avenue, Denver.

Captain Nelson came here, met Miss Charlotte, and fell in love with her. Five weeks were spent in the wooing and finally the young woman learned that her father had been released by the Germans, and had returned to America. When Captain Lawhead was told of Captain Nelson's desire to wed his daughter, he readily consented and the wedding in the Governor's office was ranged by the State officials who had become interested in the pretty romance.

BOARD of EDUCATION

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

To some I am not as well known as I might be, and feeling that for this reason I might not receive your support at the polls, I am taking this means of bringing before you (I hope in a modest way) my claims to your endorsation.

Practically my whole life has been spent in school, either as a student or teacher. For three years I served as a Public school teacher, and during the past 12 years have been engaged in Business College work. I have been on the staff of the Peterborough Normal school for seven years and my connection brings me in touch with school affairs every day of my life.

I have long since learned the value of a practical education for our young people, and am therefore in favour of a technical school; the sooner the better.

If you consider me worthy of your support, and if by your votes you elect me, I shall endeavour to serve you during my term, faithfully and well.

Sincerely,

J. A. McKONE

A GREAT STOMACH BRACER

Makes You Feel Lively and Young—Removes That Tired Feeling

At some period in our lives there is sure to come a time when the stomach is "off"—not working well—failing to enjoy and digest its food. The main thing then is to get the right remedy. You really want a soothing medicine, one quick to act, sure on results, combining the virtues of a gentle laxative with a tonic effect upon the stomach, liver and kidneys.

Certainly the world affords no better medicines, for the stomach than Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Their laxative effect is ideal—can't be beaten! But in addition to their helpful action upon the bowels, these pills contain certain ingredients that strengthen and invigorate the muscles of the stomach, thereby relieving all sorts of stomach misery, indigestion, sourness, rising gas, headache and biliousness.

Just try Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they will make you full of energy—brimming over with snap; they bring and maintain robust, sound, vigorous health, and isn't that just what you have looked for these many months? REFUSE A SUBSTITUTE FOR DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS. 25c per box, all dealers.

SERGT.-MAJOR WILFORD BACK FROM OVERSEAS

After having been twice wounded in France where his gallent conduct won him the Military Medal, Sergt. Mayor Harry Wilford, formerly of the 59th Battalion and the 5th C.M.R. returned to Peterboro from overseas this morning. Sergt. Major Wilford who before the war was a member of the 57th Regiment, went overseas with the 59th Battalion in 1915 and was transferred to the 87th Canadian Grenadier Guards in France. He served with the 87th during the battle of Vimy Ridge and in the hot fighting around Lens during the summer of 1917 and was finally wounded at Passchendaele. After recovering from his wounds in England, Sergt. Major Wilford returned to France, this time joining the 5th C. M. R., with whom he fought during the Amiens "show" in August last. Later on he was buried by a shell during the fighting at Monchy and two days after was wounded in the leg, being invalided to England. He was one of those who came over on the Northland reaching Halifax last week.

It takes a self-made man a lifetime to correct his bad grammer.

Germany to Pay Damages

So Says Erzeberger in Berlin—Belgium and Northern France will be Re-built.

(Canadian Press.)

AMSTERDAM, December 30.— Mathias Erzeberger, chairman of the German armistice commission, declared in a speech in Berlin that Germany will pay for all damages caused in Belgium and Northern France, according to a despatch received here to-day. He said that the Allies and Germany have agreed on the general question of war damages.

"The Allies and Germany are completely agreed regarding the general questions of the war damages," Erzberger said. "Each nation will pay its own war bill. Germany will pay for the damage done in Belgium and Northern France, as well as allied civilian losses. The details will be settled at the peace conference."

GLOVES AT THE POLICE STATION

A collection of gloves and gauntlets are awaiting owners at the Police Station. The sergeant intimated that if the owners would kindly leave the mates at the station they would be much appreciated and some of the donors might be handled with kid gloves in the future.

U. S. MAY GO BONE DRY.

Indications Are That 21 States Necessary to Carry Prohibition,, Will Vote For Amendment.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — War-time prohibition will strike the nation July 1 next, and according to figures gathered by the United Press, the country will then go into a dusty condition from which it is not likely to recover. Indications are the proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution making the nation bone dry will be ratified by the 21 States necessary to make it law within a very few weeks.

Practically every State's Legislature will meet next month and nearly every one of these bodies which will vote on ratification of the Federal amendment, is pledged to vote for it.

SWEEP SEAS OF MINES

British Vessels comb 40,000 Miles of Sea Every Month—Hazardous Occupation!

London, Dec. 30.—British minesweepers will have their hands full for sometime to come in carry out clause 24 of the armistice, which provides that the associated governments shall have the right to sweep up all mine fields and obstructions laid by Germany outside German territorial waters, the position of which are to be indicated by the Germans.

Around the British Isles alone about 700 vessels have been used. Each month the mine-sweepers have combed 40,000 miles of water. To do this they steamed a total of 1,132,000 miles. In 1916, 21,000 mines were removed with a loss of 51 mine-sweepers. In 1917, 43,000 mines were swept up and 89 mine-sweepers were lost. In 1918, up to the end of Sept. 1,400 mines were swept up and 18 mine-sweepers lost.

GRIMSBY YOUTH WHO "LAID OUT" CONSTABLE IS LANDED IN JAIL

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 30.—Chas. Kemp, of Grimsby, who bashed Chief Konkle over the head Christmas morning, relieved him of his bank roll and revolver, and escaped from the Grimsby lock-up, was brought to the county jail here. As he had carried away the key of the lock-up it was some time before Konkie could be released when he was missed. Kempt was found asleep in a barber shop at Beamsville. He drew the revolver which he had taken from Konkle, but not before one handcuff had been snapped on his wrist.

THE APOLOGY.

Jennie looked so debonair
That Tom kissed her then and there
Without warning;
Sought her lips and caught her cheek
Moving by the left oblique,
Caution scorning.

She was wary, he was bold,
And he would not be controlled,
Fate defying.
And he left her, knowing not
If for good or ill he'd wrought,
Fearing, sighing.

Hoping much, but fearing all,
Tom requested leave to call
On the morrow,
And in very humble guise
Offered his apologies,
Fraught with sorrow.

Words, it seemed, would not suffice,
So he kissed her once—yes, twice—
Sin repeating.
But, alas, her lips moved too!
Now it happens sans ado
At each meeting.
—Columbus Dispatch.

Planning For the Future.

Elsie (aged five)—I do hope some Dutchman will marry me when I grow up.

Aunt Mary—Why, my dear?

Elsie—'Cause I want to be a duchess.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Canceled Obligations.

Little Everett was a member of the Band of Mercy society and was proud of the membership. He wore his badge, a small star, as if it were a policeman's insignia and was often heard reproving other boys and girls for cruel treatment of dogs and cats.

One morning a woman of the neighborhood heard a commotion outside Everett's home and, going to the window, was surprised to find Everett in the act of tormenting the cat.

"Why, Everett," she called, "what are you doing to that poor cat? I thought you belonged to the Band of Mercy society?"

"I did," replied the little boy, "but I lost my star."—Lippincott's.

A Puritan Jury.

That the Puritan fashion of nomenclature produced some very odd results is very generally known. The London Chronicle recalls that James Brome, in his "Travels Over England, Scotland and Wales," published in 1700, gives a copy of a "Jury Return, Made at Rye, Sussex, in the Late Rebellious Troublesome Times."

The names of the twelve good men and true were: Meek Brewer, Graceful Harding, Kilsin Pimple, Earth Adams, Weepnot Billing, More Fruit Fowler, Hope-for Bending, Return Speiman, Fly Debate Roberts, Stand Fast on High Stringer, Be Faithful Joiner and Fight the Good Fight of Faith White.

The Scare of Their Lives.

Thinking soldier guards pacing the station platform at Brantford, all wearing "flu" masks, were a reception committee of the Ku Klux Klan, 1,300 negro soldiers in transit got the fright of their lives, according to the Brantford Expositor.

Metallic Magnesium.

A Canadian company is manufacturing metallic magnesium of a higher quality than that manufactured in Germany. The magnesium is being produced in the form of wire, ribbon, ingots and powder.

German Government May Leave Berlin to Its Fate

Considerable Disorder Prevails in German Capital—Insult to American Flag.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 30.—As a result of riots and general disorder in Berlin, it is declared the government is considering abandoning the city to the Spartacides and establishing headquarters elsewhere, reports from Berlin declared to-day.

Street Fighting.

Bloody street figiting has taken place in Posen between Germans and Poles, despatches reaching here today asserted. German officers fired on an allied automobile bearing the American flag. The Polish Guard was ordered to disperse the Germans who resisted. Fighting lasted for hours. Thirty-eight women and 100 men were killed. The Germans were disarmed with some resistance.

British authorities protested to the German commander-in-chief, who declared he had no control over the soldiers regarding the insult to the American flag. He said the Germans could not allow enemy flags to be hoisted in Prussia.

Have Retired.

All Independent Socialists have retired from the German Government which now consists entirely of Majority Socialists, according to a despatch received from Berlin to-day.

This is in direct contravention to previous despatches which declared the Ebert-Scheidemann coalition ministry had been overthrown and that a new cabinet would be formed by Karl Leibknecht and George Ledebour, extreme radicals.

The Majority Socialists, of which Philip Scheidemann is leader, are comparatively conservative, and supported the old government throughout the war.

TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ARE TO BE DUMPED INTO BRINEY DEEP

T.N.T. and Picric Acid, Some Worth $1.00 a Pound, To Be Destroyed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—By order of the raliroad administration some hundreds of thousands of pounds of high explosive material, including T.N.T. and picric acid, the property of the French and Italian governments, is being towed out to sea from South Amboy, N.J., and dumped overboard, 37 miles from the Scotland Neck lightship.

This plan has been adopted as the only practical and immediate method of getting rid of 220 carloads of the material which has been parked outside of Wilmington, Del., for some time awaiting transportation. Some of the material is worth more than a dollar a pound, but practically none of it can be utilized for any other purpose than the manufacture of shells. The dumping of the explosives from South Amboy will not be finished until to-day.

BIG BERTHA WAS LEFT TO HER FATE

Giant Gun Lies in Open Air, Protected Only by Fence.

COBLENZ, Dec. 30.—Dismembered and with its war worn parts already beginning to rust, the big Bertha which startled the world by its long-range fire upon Paris in the early months of this year, has been left to its fate in an old German artillery yard in West Prussia.

According to information reaching the third army, the famous big gun is lying in the open air, protected from the eyes of the curious only by a board fence. Other guns of large calibre are also within the yard, a few German soldiers acting as a guard.

Worse Than Retribution.

"Pa, is retribution the worst thing a man can have?"

"No; it isn't half as bad as the feeling a man is likely to have after he has confessed and then become convinced that he would not have been found out if he had kept quiet."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An obedient wife is a real power behind the domestic throne.

HOMER BURGOYNE DIED AT HOSPITAL OF WOOD ALCOHOL

Homer Burgoyne, a young married man living on Lafayette avenue, died at St. Joseph's Hospital this morning at 11:30 o'clock from the effects of drinking methylated spirits or wood alcohol. Burgoyne was unconscious when Dr. Wood called at his home this morning. He was immediately removed to the hospital, and it was reported that there was little chance of his recovery. Chief Thompson was notified by Dr. Wood, and it may be that Coroner Greer will hold an inquest. The deceased was fined in police court last summer for a breach of the O.T.A. Detective Newhall at that time seized a quantity of raisins, high wines, grain and other ingredients of the home-made "firewater."

First Appeal Since the War

NEW YEAR'S DANCE UNDER AUSPICES OF KING'S DAUGHTERS

The "bal poulre" which is to be held in the Conservatory of Music Hall on New Year's night promises to be one of the brightest social events of the year. The dance which is given under the auspices of the King's Daughters is the first appeal which has been made by that society since the beginning of the war and should be well patronized especially on account of the good work for which the funds raised will be devoted.

CODE MESSAGES PERMITTED.

Cables to England may now be sent in code, according to reports given out by both telegraph companies here. There are five different standard codes, the bank codes which may be used. Private codes are still under ban. Registered addresses also may be used again after being under the ban since the beginning of the war.

ROOSEVELT WAS MOST COURAGEOUS BUT INEXPERIENCED PILOT—FIRED THIRTY SHOTS AT AMERICAN, PLANE.

Canadian Press:

WITH AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, Dec. 30.—A description of the fight in which Lieut. Roosevelt, son of former President Roosevelt, lost his life in an American airplane, was given here to-day by the man who killed him, Christian Donhausen, a German ace. Donhausen was one of the aviators sent to test surrendered German machines.

Donhausen said Roosevelt was an inexperienced, but most courageous pilot. The German was placed at a disadvantage several times during the encounter. Roosevelt sent twenty shots through the German machine without destroying it. Then Donhausen gained the advantage, he declared, and fired thirty shots into the Roosevelt machine from a distance of twenty-five feet. Roosevelt, he asserted, was dead before his airplane began flaming.

The American could have flown to safety several times, the German continued, but chose instead to return to the attack.

American flyers as a whole, Donhausen claimed, were too reckless many times penetrating as far as thirty miles behind the German lines.

Donhausen is a diminutive man standing four feet in height and weighing but ninety-four pounds. 23 years old, and is credited with having shot down thirty airplanes since July. He has relatives, he said, living in Michigan.

WEDDING BELLS

STEWART—MATHER.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Mather, lot 10, con. 10, Otonabee, was the scene of a pretty wedding on the evening of Thursday, Dec. 26th, when their daughter, Mary Jane, was united in marriage to Mr. William Howard Stewart, of Otonabee. At six o'clock, following the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Letitia Drummond, cousin of the bride, the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. W. E. Honey, of Keene, in the presence of about fifty guests. The bride was charmingly attired in blue silk, and carried a bouquet of carnations. After a sumptuous supper, the guests spent the evening in social converse. The bride was the recipient of numerous useful and costly gifts. The groom's gift to the bride was a muskrat muff, and to the organist a pin set with amethysts. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart will reside at his home near Keene, in Otonabee.

PROUTY-JONES

A very pretty wedding took place Monday, Dec. 23., at 11 a.m., at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Prouty, Avenbrook when their son Percy was married to Miss Laura Jones of Apsley. The bridal couple stood under a handsome arch of evergreens decorated with flowers from which was suspended a white bell.

The bride was handsomely attired in white face and silk chiffon. The bridesmaid, Helena Prouty, sister of the groom was dressed in grey silk.

The groom was supported by Mr. Bruce Post of Oak Lake, a returned soldier who saw service in France, with the 4th, C.M.R.

Rev. A. Poulter, Methodist minister of St. Ola officiated, assisted by Rev. W. Hall of Coe Hill.

After the ceremony, the guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding breakfast after which a toast to the happy couple was proposed by Rev. Poulter and given by Rev. Hall, the groom making a very appropriate reply.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. P. Prouty will reside at Avenbrook.

BOARD of EDUCATION

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

To some I am not as well known as I might be, and feeling that for this reason I might not receive your support at the polls, I am taking this means of bringing before you (I hope in a modest way) my claims to your endorsation.

Practically my whole life has been spent in school, either as a student or teacher. For three years I served as a Public school teacher, and during the past 12 years have been engaged in Business College work. I have been on the staff of the Peterborough Normal school for seven years and my connection brings me in touch with school affairs every day of my life.

I have long since learned the value of a practical education for our young people, and am therefore in favour of a technical school; the sooner the better.

If you consider me worthy of your support, and if by your vote you elect me, I shall endeavour to serve you during my term, faithfully and well.

Sincerely,

J. A. McKONE

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

A. A. FOWLER

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having now served a two-year term on your Board of Education, receiving the highest vote on the occasion of my being selected for the honour, I again allow by name to come before you for re-election... My two years service, and particularly that of the last year when I was Chairman of the Proper Committee, has given me the experience necessary to more intelligently attend to the important duties of the Board. Having accepted the honour of the ratepayers confidence, I gave the same care and attention to the affairs before the Board as I did to my own private business, and if again entrusted with the work will give the very best service of which I am capable. Knowing that greater School accommodation is becoming necessary especially in the South and West sections of the city, and in order to obtain all the knowledge possible, I visited, in company with Dr. Neal, and at our own expense, the Technical and Public Schools of London and Hamilton.

This Board will in the next two years, be called to dispose of considerable business, involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and my two years' experience on the Board, and long business training, should fit me especially for the duties at this crucial period.

I am an enthusiast along educational lines and want Peterborough to have the best Educational Advantages and I consider that our equipment and Staff are of the high efficiency necessary to properly apply the magnificent System as outlined by the Provincial Authorities.

If elected it will always be my aim to guard the interest of the ratepayers and keep down expenses, endeavoring at all times to see that every dollar spent was properly applied. If my past Service, and future willingness are considered worthy of your support, you can show it on election day by endorsing my Candidature with your vote.

Yours faithfully,

A. A. FOWLER.

For Board of Education

MRS. KATE MORRIS

TO THE ELECTORS:—

The Board of Education in this city, up to the present time, has consisted of men only. Cities as small as Orillia and as large as Toronto, have had women school trustees for Some time—and their usefulness has been recognized by the men with whom they work and by the citizens whom they represent.

Sixty-five women teachers are employed in the schools in Peterborough, influencing more than 2,500 children every school day in the year.

Since the care and development of the children of the city depends so largely on women, in the home and in the school, is it not reasonable to think that the woman's point of view should be valuable on the School Board.

It is with the hope of being of some service in a work that surely requires the co-operation of men and women, that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS.

Central Europe Fears the Spread of Bolshevism

Breakdown of Government in the Defeated Nations Causes Dread as Chaos Increases Large Amount is Reported Spent in Berlin and Even More Sent Here.

REDS' PROPAGANDA GROWS

(By Harold Williams).

GENEVA, Dec. 31.—History is turning strange somersaults. Italian prisoners in Galicia are fighting with the Poles against the Ukrainians, German troops in Southern Russia are selling or giving arms to the Ukrainians; are fighting and plundering, now leaguing themselves with the Ukrainians and Bolsheviki and now opposing them. Further north some of the German troops are thoroughly Bolshevist, while others are trying to retire, only to find themselves attacked in the rear by Lenine's Red Army.

Europe is strewn with guns, machine guns, bombs and ammunition, all the leavings of a great war, and every one and no one is master of these instruments of destruction.

Frontiers and lines of demarkation are swaying. Agreements are made to-day and broken to-morrow, and save for a few cases there is not a Government from the Rhine eastward that is not desperately beating the air to-day and is liable to be swept away to-morrow.

Broken Up.

In the war the democratic maritime powers are victorious, and the great blocks of despotism in the European hinterland have been broken up into their component atoms without any visible binding will or controlling purpose.

I have no hesitation in saying that the spectacle of European ruin is simply appalling. Nineteenth century civilization has broken down.

I do not mean merely that dilapidated trains crawl dismally; that postal and telegraphic communication is hardly better than in Napoleonic times; that famine and pestilence are creeping over Europe, but that there is a collapse of human, moral energy, a revival of the primitive, barbaric instincts, and the fierce endeavour to have one's little private will by force.

The general sense of the purpose of life is lost in the chaos of petty warring impulses. People eagerly repeat the shibboleths of democracy and equality, hoping that this will dispel the terrible dread that lurks in their hearts. Little men, often well-meaning and sincere, devise shallow plans for coping with the menacing forces of destruction.

In Germany the soldiers make chaotic politics while the upper class looks on unrepentant, arrogant, resentful, and helpless; and amateur governments of a day spend their little strength in torrents of speeches while they have no power to stay the inevitable course of events. Through all this seething chaos run evil currents of intrigue after intrigue, monarchical, Bolshevist, financial, imperialistic, particularist, clerical, atheist

Russian prisoners in hundreds of thousands are on their great trek homewards, starving, in rags, dying like flies on the way, and the revolutionary German Government has provided them with copies of periodicals in Russian, Socialistic, and full of invective against England and praise of the German Soviets.

Up through the European chaos is surely creeping the menace of Bolshevism, not Socialism, but that Bolshevism which is the revengeful shadow of reckless, modern materialism.

I don't wish to appear to be preaching, but only the igamery of the Apocalypse can do justice to the present state of Europe. It is not a political but a spiritual crisis. The victory of the Maritime Powers is an immense moral responsibility because on the victors lies the task of saving and reconstructing all that is worth saving in civilization.

I hope that I may be forgiven for telegraphing in this way; but no one who has closely watched the present ruin of Europe can help feeling that all purely external discussion is futile unless the moral foundations of peace are powerfully laid.

That is why the League of Nations is supremely important. If the League of Nations is a Utopia, then our spiritual strength is exhausted and civilization will go down in a welter of barbarous slaughter.

Nearly Every Girl Can Make Herself Pretty and Attractive

SOME WHOLESOME TRUTHS EVERY GIRL SHOULD THINK ABOUT.

Probably you know just such a girl.

Perhaps she is sixteen — good to look at, and pretty —quite interesting because she reflects the graces and charm that give promise of happiness to herself and others. But she is not strong. The colour in her cheeks, once so rosy, has faded away —her eyes are listless—the buoyancy of spirit and vigour she once possessed are sadly lacking. Parents, friends, this girl needs Ferrozone — needs it that her blood may be renewed — needs it to restore the nerve force that growth, study and the development of her fresh youth have exhausted. The girl will become a queen with Ferrozone—which will restore her colour—bring back her old-time energy—give brightness to her eyes and vivacity to her spirits. In Ferrozone every girl finds strength—then she can do things. In Ferrozone there is endurance—that drives away morning tiredness and languor. For the girl or woman that wants to be happy, healthy, winning— who values rosy cheeks, laughing eyes and abundant good spirits, nothing can compare with Ferrozone. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50. Get it to-day from any dealer in medicine, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A girl doesn't always make a noise like a belle when she dresses loudly. The wife of a man of few words usually has a monopoly on the vocabulary.

In some churches they pray for the widows and the orphans—but, as a rule, more wives are in need of prayers than widows.

Occasionally we meet a man who is proud of the fact that he never belonged to the uniform rank of a lodge and wore feathers and a tin sword.

NOMINATIONS IN NORTH MONAGHAN AND ENNISMORE

Ennismore Council Re-elected by Acclamation.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Tells Ruth He Is Going to Learn Typewriting.

CHAPTER LXXV.

When Ruth was busy with her interesting, well-paid work, she was happily forgetful of many things that, when she was idle, came home to her with a rush. So now when Brian said that he almost forgot he had a wife, she determined immediately to impress that fact more strongly than ever upon him.

"I should think they might let you take it easy for a while, and rest up," he had said when she leaned back in the taxi with a sigh of content at being with him.

"Oh, I'm not so tired! that was a happy sigh," she smiled lovingly at him.

"I have a surprise for you," it was a good time to tell her.

"What is it?" she was all interest at once.

"Your lazy husband is learning typing. I am going to type my own letters after this."

"Oh, Brian! how nice," then quickly she added. "Not because of what it will save, alone, but it will make you so much more independent."

"Yes, that's why I am learning. Of course I shall hate to leave you alone; but I shall only go twice a week. I have to go evenings of course."

For a moment Ruth'h heart sank. Then she thought, "here I have been urging him to do more, and the first thing he proposes, I want to object," so she smiled and said:

"I shall miss you awfully, but of course I know you can't learn sitting home with me. You won't be very late at the school will you?"

"Not very! probably ten or half past," she had mentioned the "school," not he, but he took no pains to set her right.

"I'll try to be contented."

"You should be! here you have been gone over a week, and I have not kicked!" then he wished he hadn't spoken. What if she asked if he had been alone all the evenings she had been away? "I hope Rachel will have something good! I expect you are fed up on hotel grub," they were on dangerous ground, so he changed the subject.

"Indeed I am! one of Rachel's dinners will taste awfully good. I hope she gave you nice things while I was away."

Brian was saved the necessity of replying by the taxi stopping at the door. He must tell Ruth he had not been home, before she had time to question Rachel. But first he must pay the man and take her bags in for her.

After Rachel had been hugged and kissed and told gleefully:

"You just wait, Mammy Rachel, until you see what I have brought you." Brian followed her into the bedroom where she laid off her things, and said quickly:

"I shall enjoy one of Rachel's dinners too. Because of the typewriting lessons, I haven't been home to dinner except the first night. I thoughts I would get along as far as I could while you were away."

"That was right, you weren't lonely then. No wonder you said you almost forgot me, if you didn't come home at all," as she replied, Ruth wondered where he DID dine, and a picture of Mollie King flashed across her mind. But she would ask no questions, say nothing to spoil their evenings together.

"I'se got chicken mar'land, honey," Rachel announced, when she called them to come to dinner. "An' co'n fritters an'—"

"Don't tell me any more, Rachel," Ruth said, "keep the rest for a surprise," then in an aside to Brian: "I expect she has tired herself out getting a big dinner for us."

Rachel heard.

"'Deed I ain't tired, Missy Ruth! I ain't had nothin' to do sence yo been gone, I ain't! no dinners to cook, an' it has ben turruble lonesum, fer ole Rachel."

"Thank goodness I told her I had been out," Brian thought as he saw Rachel disappear into the kitchen, "I knew she'd tell."

"Poor Rachel," Ruth laughed, "I expect she thinks you should have stayed at home and entertained her instead of learning to typewrite. I imagine it WAS lonely for her."

"I told you she would be out of place in a New York flat," Brian replied, rather glad to have what he had told Ruth confirmed, "She'll be leaving you, then you will have a hard time to find a maid as good as Crawford."

"Oh, mammy won't leave. She likes to grumble. Did you ever see a darky that didn't? But I'll bet a pair of gloves you couldn't get her to go, now that we are together again."

Brian said nothing further, but he thought that he would just as soon have kept Crawford, even if Rachel were the better cook. Rachel would be sure to tell Ruth whenever he remained out when she was away and more than likely would tell the time he came in. He had nothing to worry about for a while, however: Ruth herself had prevented that by saying he would be in "school."

To be truthful, Brian had a shamed feeling as he wondered what Ruth would say if she knew the "school" was in Mollie's flat, and that Mollie herself was his teacher."

"Regular as Clockwork"

You can foretell the future

You say "The man who could fortell illness would make a fortune!" Of course no man can—in the sense you mean. But you can tell pretty accurately what to expect your own body to do.

How?

Get this simple physiology:

Your body machine has to be repaired. It also must have fuel to supply heat and energy. Your food supplies both repair material and fuel. But a furnace always produces ashes and clinkers. If these accumulate, the furnace becomes clogged and cannot work properly.

If your bowels become clogged—you suffer from constipation.

Perhaps you hurry to work or play and neglect to obey Nature's call. Waste matter stagnates in the bowels. You go right on eating, drinking, working. What happens? The consipation becomes established. Waste matter undergoes decay, fermentation and germ action. Poisons are formed, absorbed, carried all over the body. They attack the weakest part of you first.

Then you know you're sick. In reality you've been getting sick since you missed that first movement.

If you want to keep well—wholly well, all the time, so that you're on your toes every day, remove the waste.

Many people take pills, castor oil, purgative mineral waters to force the bowels to act.

These act, but they irritate, tire out the intestinal muscles, make the trouble worse.

Others take "salts" which attract water to the intestines and flush the bowels—about as gently as a fire hose. A re-action follows that makes the intestines dryer than ever and aggravates the constipation.

You needn't do this and weaken your system just because all of your ancestors did.

The Nujol Treatment moves the waste regularly, and easily. It is a purely mechanical process, absolutely harmless, based on a simple principle—that you can move a softened mass out of a tube more easily than a hard, dry one. It doesn't gripe—you won't know you have taken anything until after a few days your bowels move at the regular hour. It makes you "regular as clockwork."

Don't try to foretell illness. Forestall it. Don't wait until you are sick. Keep well now. Your druggist has Nujol.

Warning: Nujol is sold in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Insist on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes.

The Reindeer Industry.

"To engage in the commercialization of the reindeer industry in all its branches in Canada and elsewhere," is the object of the North American Reindeer Co., Ltd., incorporation of which is announced in the Canada Gazette. The corporation, whose head office is to be at Montreal, is capitalized at $100,000. It proposes to acquire herds of reindeer to raise the animals for the market and to market reindeers meat products.

Some years ago an experiment in raising and utilizing the reindeer in Canada was carried on by Dr. Wilfrid Grenfell, first in Labrador and later a herd was moved to Alberta, where climatic and other conditions proved fatal to many of the animals.

M.P. WINS V.C.

Heroism's Highest Honor for Canadian Commoner.

The first—and the only—Victoria Cross won by a member of any British overseas Parliament in the great war just ended comes to Canada. It was won for valor by Lieut.-Col. Cyrus Wesley Peck, D.S.O., Conscriptionist Liberal member for the new constituency of Skeena, British Columbia. Col. Peck was a successful candidate in the general election of last December. He is a lifelong Liberal, and strongly supported the Military Service Act in order to "back up the boys at the front." In his absence on the fighting field he was elected victor over an anti-conscriptionist.

The official description of the action which won the Victoria Cross for Lt.-Col. Peck, now commanding officer of the Canadian Scottish Battalion, is as follows:

"For most conspicuous bravery and skilful leadership when in an attack under intense fire, his command quickly captured its first objective, but progress was held up by enemy machine-gun fire on his right flank. The situation being extremely difficult, Lt.-Col. Peck rushed forward and made a personal reconnaissance, under heavy machine-gun fire, across a stretch of ground which was heavily swept with fire. Having reconnoitred the position, he returned and reorganized his battalion, and, acting upon knowledge personally gained, pushed them forward and arranged the protection of his flanks. He then went out under the most intense artillery and machine-gun fire, intercepted the tanks and gave them necessary directions, pointing out where they were to make for and thus have a way made for a Canadian infantry battalion to push forward. To this battalion he subsequently gave the requisite support by his magnificent display of courage and fine qualities of leadership. He personally led the advance, and caused it to be continued, although always under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, and contributed largely to the success of the brigade attack."

Generals From Old Quebec.

The promotion of Brigadier-General Alain Chartier Joly de Lotbiniere to the post of major-general brings out the fact that the city of Quebec has ten generals who have done duty at the front since the outbreak of the war. They are:

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Ernest Turner, V.C., D.S.O., K.C., M.G., commander of the Canadian troops in Great Britain.

Maj.-Gen. Sir Henry Burstall, K.C.B., C.M.G., commander of the Second Canadian Division in France.

Maj.-Gen. Sir David Watson, K.C.B., C.M.G., commander of the Fourth Canadian Division in France.

Maj.-Gen. Alain Chartier Joly de Lotbiniere, commanding a division of Engineers in France.

Maj.-Gen. Dobell, commander of a British division in Mesopotamia.

Brig.-Gen. Henri Gustavo Joly de Lothiniere, commander of a brigade of Engineers in France.

Brig.-Gen. J. P. Landry, C.M.G., commander of the military district of Quebec.

Brig.-Gen. F. M. Gaudet, C.M.G., former commander of the 22nd Battalion, now Director of Munition shops in England.

Brig.-Gen. T. L. Tremblay, C.M.G., D.S.O., former commander of the 22nd and now commanding the Fifth Infantry Brigade in France.

Brig.-Gen. A. E. Swift, former Brigade Commander in France and now commanding a battalion of infantry in the Siberian Corps.

Soldiers' Savings.

Enquiry at Militia Headquarters reveals the fact that there is in the hands of the Receiver-General a credit to soldiers of the C.E.F., approximately $16,000,000 deferred pay. This represents money saved by members of the C.E.F. since the commencement of the war. In other words, it is pay earned but not drawn, with accumulated interest. Now that demobilization is in sight there is no doubt that great benefits will accrue from these savings, which have been effected under a policy inaugurated by the Government in 1915, under which soldiers serving in France have been required to leave on deposit with the Government a portion of their pay which could not be profitably spent overseas, but would be a useful provision for a rainy day. In the result the majority of the men will have a sum of money which they themselves have saved immediately available on discharge.

Bella Coola Leads Canada.

Bella Coola, a little village of 213 adults, mostly of Norse origin, far to the north in British Columbia, has registered the big surprise of the Victory Loan campaign. Not satisfied with an honor flag, it is in a position to demand seventeen crowns to adorn it, and as the 1,344 square inches available as crown space will not contain the well-won crowns, each being 8 x 10 inches in area, a special honor flag is being made for Bella Coola.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Lesson In Giving

It Came Near Breaking an Engagement.

By CECILIA A. LOIZEAUX.

"Of course I like on to be sympathetic and generous—it's all a part of you. But I do wish ou could be made to see the evils of suc recklessly indiscriminate giving," id Howard.

They had just passed a one armed beggar, who had stopped in front of them with his monotonous whine for coins. Howard, after a sharp glance, had said curtly, Stand aside!" had brushed away the extended hand and taken Beth's arm to guide her past. But with an exclamation of pity the girl had turned back to empty into the man's hand all the change in her little gold mesh purse.

"My giving is not indiscriminate. That man was maimed—he had only one arm—and the other one was trembling from palsy or weakness," answered Beth, with some heat.

"My dear, that man's hand is trembling from drink, and as likely as not he has another arm under his coat. You don't realize what frauds these professional beggars are. Can't you see, Beth, that it's the principle of the thing that is wrong? The money you give so carelessly might better be used for people who really need it, and you seldom find that kind begging on the streets."

They had reached Beth's home by this time, and, as usual, Howard went in with her for the afternoon tea Beth always made by the living room fire. When they entered the house the subject was not continued, though they both felt dissatisfied. Beth busied herself at the little table silently. There was an angry light in her eyes. She told herself that Howard was not quite what she had thought him.

Howard was about to go when the front door opened and shut, and Beth's Uncle John, with whom she had lived since the death of her parents, came in and went up the stairs to his room. Howard settled back into his chair, for he liked Beth's uncle, who was a jolly old man. But Beth looked unaccountably nervous, rattled the tea things and rang the bell for more hot water. She jumped guiltily as an irate voice from upstairs called, "Beth!"

"Yes, uncle, what is it?" she called back, going to the foot of the stairs.

"What have you done with my gray smoking jacket and those black slippers? I can't find them anywhere, and I left them right here in my room. I wish Mary wouldn't have cleaning up streaks."

Beth darted a queer glance at Howard and then ran up the stairs. She spoke so softly that Howard could not hear what she said, but her uncle's voice was farreaching, and the young man listened shamelessly, for he guessed what was the matter. Now he grinned silently to himself as the one sided conversation went on.

"What the deuce!" he was fairly roaring. "That jacket is the only one I've ever had that's any good. And I look like a peeled onion in that purple thing, and you know it." There was a silence. Then the voice in somewhat softer tones went on:

"Well, if you can't rest unless you're giving things away and my things are attractive to you, you just make it a point to ask me what I can get along without. Well, then, give me my old slippers."

Another silence.

"Do you mean to tell me that you gave away that pair of slippers that I've been breaking in for a year and just got adjusted to my feet? By George! Who got those?"

Silence.

"Well, he didn't need them as bad as I do. He couldn't feed my smoking jacket to a starving baby, and those slippers will fit his sick wife to perfection, I suppose. What else did you give him?"

Another silence—then a snort.

"There! That's enough! Don't tell me too much at once! I'm liable to get mad!" When he heard Beth's heel taps on the stairs Howard strolled to the farthest window and turned innocently around to speak to Beth as if nothing had happened. Her face was red and her eyes wet.

"Uncle's cross tonight," she said airily. "I—he acts as if he had lost something." She did not speak again, but began to make fresh tea, and in a minute or two her uncle appeared in the doorway. He had on a purple silk jacket and a purple cap stuck jauntily over one ear on his bald head.

"Look like the shah's butler, don't I?" the elder man said as he carefully lowered his heavy figure into his easy chair and stuck his feet out before him. "Your turn will come. You'll live to see your best shoes tripping down the street, and you'll meet your hats and coats and trousers strolling about the city until you won't know whether you're dreaming or whether there are two of you."

Howard was a little uneasy. He looked at Beth and smiled, and she looked back coldly, thinking that she read "I told you so" in his face. She disappeared when she had given her uncle his tea and did not come down again until Howard was gone and dinner was ready.

The next morning Beth spent in overhauling all her clothes, piling into a great heap on the floor everything that she did not like or was a little soiled. And on the top she put the spring suit that Howard liked so much. It was a little dirty around the edge of the skirt, though that was not why she added it to the pile.

"That's mine at any rate," she said to herself as she gathered the garments into her arms and carried them to the basement, where she bestowed them all upon the new laundress. That woman left in a hurry before her day's work was done, fearing that Beth would change her mind.

Two days later Howard started up to Beth's in his car to take her out for a long drive, as arranged with her over the phone. What was his amazement, therefore, as he drove slowly through the downtown streets to see Beth in her gray walking suit and toque just disappearing around a corner. He called to her, but she did not hear, and the young fellow stopped the machine. With set chin and tightened lips and hurt eyes he drove slowly on up the hill and past the house, where Beth in a blue dress waited in the hall.

When she saw Howard whiz by, never once glancing at the house, she was first indignant and then angry. And after an hour of deliberation, during which her wrath increased, she rang for a messenger and put into his hands a note and a little sealed packet which contained her ring.

She came down to dinner pale and wan. Her uncle looked at her sharply, seeing traces of tears, and decided that he would act.

"I'm sorry to speak about this again," he said, clearing his throat, "but if you must go slumming I insist that you take some escort with you. I'll go if Howard will not. I was amazed to see you down there among the secondhand stores in that part of town after what I told you the last time. I don't care why you go; it is not safe nor respectable, either."

Beth was staring at him open eyed. "I was not down there this afternoon," she said indignantly.

The doorbell rang, and Howard was ushered into the dining room by the maid. He came up to the table and put a little packet down on the cloth.

"Beth," he said, "you don't mean it, do you? I can't let you break our engagement like this without telling me what is the matter. What have I done?"

Beth stood up, looking like a fawn at bay. Her eyes were dilated with fear, her hands clinched. She looked from Howard to her uncle, but did not speak. Finally her uncle went over to her and put his arm around her.

"What is it, little girl?" he said as one would speak to a child.

Beth began to sob and then to laugh. "It's all so funny," she sobbed. "I—I guess it's mostly my fault. I gave that gray suit away and the hat too." The men glanced at each other and then laughed. Howard made a step forward, but Beth ran behind her chair.

"And I was at home," she said to him—"I was at home, and you did not stop—when you had asked me to go. And I was all ready and waiting for you."

"But, Beth, I met that gray suit downtown. I was sure it was you, and I didn't know what to do. I didn't know until afterward that I had gone by your house. Don't you see, dear"—But this time he came around behind the chair, too, and Uncle John sat down and pretended to eat his cold dinner.

When Uncle John reached home the next night he found the old smoking jacket and slippers laid out for him. He smelled the sulphur with which they had been fumigated and asked no questions, though he didn't really need to be told where they had come from. He had seen Beth and Howard in the big green car steering toward the secondhand district in the morning, and he had had his hopes aroused.

Not long afterward, while Beth was busy with her trousseau, her uncle came in softly and heard her saying to a caller: "But there's nothing so unwise as indiscriminate giving. I had a lesson, and I know."

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

THEY FOUGHT AND WON...

Battles In Which Boys From Canada Took Part.

The following statement, showing what has been accomplished, from a military point of view, by the Dominion since the beginning of the war, was issued by the Militia Department.

When Canada entered the war on Aug. 4, 1914, she had a permanent force of only 3,000 men, and an active militia of 60,000. When hostilities ceased on Nov. 11, 1918, Canada had sent overseas 418,980 soldiers.

At first Canada supplied a division. This was increased until by 1916 she had in France an army corps of four divisions, a cavalry brigade, and numerous other services, such as line of communication troops, railway troops and forestry corps. On Sept. 30, 1918, the Canadian troops in France numbered 156,250. The cavalry brigade included a strong draft furnished by the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

The Canadians engaged in the United Kingdom and France in constructing and operating railway lines, and in cutting down forests and milling the timber number about 50,000.

Of the Royal Air Forces, some 14,000 or 15,000 were raised and trained in Canada; in addition many joined the R.A.F. after going overseas in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

On Oct. 31, 1918, the casualties numbered over 211,000. There have been over 50,000 deaths, 152,000 have been wounded, and when hostilities ceased the prisoners of war numbered 2,800.

The roll of Canada is:

1915:
Second battle of Ypres, April-May.
St. Eloi, April 3 to 19.
Sanctuary Wood, June 2 and 3.
Hooge, June 5, 6; 13 and 14.
Battle of Somme, September, October and November.

1917:
Battle of Vimy Ridge April 9 to 13.
Battle of Arieux and Fresnoy, April 28, 29 and May 3.
Battle of Lens, June.
Battle of Hill 70, August 15.
Battle of Passchendaele, October 25 and November 10.

1918:
Second battle of Somme, March and April.
Battle of Amiens, August 12.
Capture of Monchy-le-Preux, August 26-28.
Breaking of Queant-Drocourt line, September 3 and 4.
Crossing of Canal du Nord and Bourlon Wood, September 27-29.
Encirclement and capture of Cambrai, October 1-9.
Capture of Douai, October 19.
Capture of Denain, October 20.
Encirclement and capture of Valenciennes, October 25 and November 2.
Advance and capture of Mons, November 7-11.

Statue of Edith Cavell.

A monument to Edith Cavell and the Canadian nurses who were killed by the Germans in raids on Canadian hospitals will be erected in Ottawa in Major Hill Park. The monument will be erected by public subscription and grants from the Dominion. It is being executed by Hamilton MacCarthy, R.C.A., the Canadian sculptor. The monument will be exceedingly handsome.

There will be an heroic figure of Fame, holding in one hand a trumpet and in the other a wreath of immortelles. The figure will be shown in the act of crowning the bust of the martyred nurse, which rests upon the summit of the pedestal. Draped around its base is the Union Jack.

On either side of the pedestal, in prominent relief, is a panel — one side depicting the nurse attending wounded soldiers, both German and Allied, and the other showing the tragic death of the brave woman. The inscription of the pedestal includes the last words spoken by Edith Cavell. The pedestal is to be cut in granite and the figures are to be in bronze.

THE RETREAT FROM MONS

If the British General Had Blundered During Those Dark Days in 1914, the Result Would Have Been an Overwhelming Defeat and the Ultimate Triumph Could Not Have Been Obtained.

NO one need now praise the First British Expeditionary Force that will be known in song and story as the Old Contemptibles. It were as superfluous as to dilate upon the reckless bravery of the Six Hundred, but the New York Times takes advantage of the official announcement that British troops had captured the fortress of Maubeuge to briefly review some of the problems that confronted Sir John French on the retreat from Mons. A consideration of these events will prove to the military historian of this war that if the British general had blundered in those terrible days of trial in August, 1914, the great unlikelihood of a British army entering Mauberge in triumph in 1918. There were 80,000 British troops engaged at the beginning of the operations which are known as the retreat from Mons. Such huge bodies of men have figured in subsequent battles that one is inclined to think that the fighting of the Old

FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH.

Contemptibles, no matter how glorious, could not in the natural course of events affect the destiny of struggling millions.

Moreover there has been a notion in some minds that the British army was blunderingly led. The truth is that considering the number of men at his disposal, Sir John French gave as fine an exhibition of generalship as this war has produced. We are glad that this should be proclaimed at this time, when the world, as is right, is showering praise upon Marshal Foch, Sir Douglas Haig, Gen. Petain and other military leaders who survive on active service to see the great reaping that was sowed by Joffre, French and others who have been less conspicuously in the public eye for the past year or two. Of Gen. French, now Lord French, historians must say, viewing his career as a whole, and not forgetting the fine spirit he has shown ever since he relinquished the command of the British armies, "There was a soldier."

The Times recalls that Maubeuge figured in that critical retreat when Sir John French, engaged in his battle at Mons, his right resting on Binche and his left on Conde, and the fight going against him, received "a most unexpected message" from Gen. Joffre. It was a belated message: the British commander should have known its ominous tidings hours before. While he was defending the Mons position against a force at least twice as strong as his own, the Germans had thrown back the Fifth French Army on his right and were driving across the Sambre between Namur and Charleroi, at the same time the enemy was making a wide enveloping movement around his left at Tournai. The British supports were gone, had been gone for several hours, and when the message reached Sir John French the Fifth French Army was retreating before Von Below's Second German Army. The British commander knew the terrain in his rear intimately, for he was an authority on the French campaigns of the past. His decision was quickly made: he would fall back upon the line Mauberge-Jenlain, and that very night preparations were made for retirement while he continued to defend the Mons position as if he knew nothing of what had befallen Lanrezac, Langle, and Ruffey.

Back went the heavy transport to clear the roads, and the ambulances carrying the wounded followed. In the morning Haig's First Corps counter-attacked to cover the retirement of Smith-Dorrien's Second Corps. The feint deceived the enemy, who reasoned from the steady fire of Haig's 120 guns that the British had been reinforced. When Smith-Dorrien had fallen back five miles from the Conde Canal he took up a strong defensive position, Frameries-Quarouble, to give the British right an opportunity to retire to Maubeuge, a fortress of the first class on the Sambre. To the left of the British force the enemy had crossed the frontier, but the British right resting on Maubeuge would have been secure if the French had made a junction with it. This, however, was out of the question. The Fifth Army was not in touch with it and had no alternative but to retire to new positions. Von Kluck's design was to outflank the British left and tempt Sir John French to give battle under the protection of the Maubeuge forts. That would have been fatal to the expeditionary force without support. It would have been Sedan over again. The British army was of about the same strength as the French army that surrendered at Sedan in the late summer of 1870.

The British commander, left to his own resources by the irresistible "drive" of the Germans against the French on his right, rejected the plan of giving battle on the Maubeuge-Jenlain line, and ordered a retreat past the great forest of Mormal, the First Corps marching to the east of it, the Second Corps to the west of it, for in its way the forest of Mormal was as dangerous to a small army as the fortress of Maubeuge. The worst was over when the Second Army Corps reached the Somme.

It is not to be doubted that if Sir John French had blundered at Maubeuge in those crowded hours in August, 1914, the British would never have returned as victors in the closing days of the great war.

ITALIAN IS A ROYALIST.

Has No Conception of Anything But a Personal Ruler.

The Italian immigrant when he first comes to America is known to his compatriots as a "cafone." The word is not strictly Italian, but is untranslatable southern dialect, writes Arthur Train in the Saturday Evening Post. If you ask a black-eyed son of the soil spading among the almond groves why he is working there, like as not he will shrug his shoulders and remark "Ca'ffo"—which means "Well—simply because! I'm here because I'm here—that's all! Why not?"

In a word, a cafone is a man who is doing something but does not know why he is doing it. It accurately described the old type of Italian peasant who lived a hand-to-mouth existence, the giornaliere—day laborer—of Apulia, Basilicata and the Abruzzi, heir to all the traditions of Goth, Moor, Arab and Bourbon. To-day the Italians in America refer to all greenhorns as cafoni, irrespective of their place of origin. It is the generic word for the Italian immigrant who has never been to America before—he of the mountain villages of Campania and the Apennine crest of Calabria—the peasant who still lives and rules his life according to traditional customs and stringently patriarchal ideas by virtue of which only the father or whoever may be the head of the clan has the right to sell any of the family property or to select the husband for the daughter.

He is a simple-minded fellow this Calabrian or child of the Abruzzi, essentially a royalist, always ready to follow and to obey. He has no conception of anything but a personal ruler. In Italy he always says "The king has done this or that." After he has landed in America he keeps the same point of view. "Taffe" or "Roosy-velto" or "Welleson is going to do so and so"—not Congress or the Government.

Full of Romance.

Fifty years ago Queen Isabella was dethroned, and Spain threw off the yoke of the Bourbons and inaugurated a new order of things, looking at least to the establishment of a constitutional government, if not a government of the people.

Espartero, Duke of Vittoria, was placed at the head of the state. He had occupied that position on two former occasions. He aided in securing the succession of Isabella, and successfully led her armies in putting down the Carbots. In the insurrection of 1840, caused by the law suppressing the freedom of speech in the town councils (Espartero became head of the Government and was confirmed in that position by the cortes, and was appointed regent during the minority of the queen. He was deposed in 1843 and had to fly to London for safety. In 1847 he was recalled to Spain and by the revolution of 1854, which drove the Queen Mother Christina and Narvaez from the country, he was again placed at the head of the Government, a position which he resigned in 1856. Espartero was born in 1792. He was the son of a wheelwright, commenced life as a common soldier in the Spanish army and gained his honors and titles by his own ability as a soldier and statesman.

MEXICO'S ROYAL GHOST.

Legend of the Rumbling Cave of Las Siervas Hot Springs.

The hot springs of Las Siervas, near Valle de Canizos, in a remote part of the state of Guerrero, Mexico, have been visited by few people from the outside world, but they are famous in the legends and history of the Indian tribes of that part of the republic.

According to the natives, the waters of the springs possess great medicinal properties. In ancient times the springs were the favorite bathing resort of the noble families of the Tepanecas, Alcolhua and other tribes that lived in that region.

On both sides of the chief spring there are huge rocks with hieroglyphics and the figures of women beautifully carved. Judging from the robes worn by the women, their stately appearance and the jewels around their necks, the figures must represent princesses or ladies of very high rank.

The spring is at the entrance to a grotto that has never been explored. From the grotto a rumbling sound resembling distant thunder is to be heard all the time. According to natives, the rumble is caused by the ghost of King Excamina, who ruled over that part of the country three or four centuries before the Spaniards discovered America.

King Excamina, the tradition says, was as bad as man could be. He murdered people merely for the pleasure of seeing them die and committed every crime. He had his palace constructed in another cave, which communicated with that of the spring by tunnel. There Excamina, in company with some of his favorites, had orgies that lasted weeks and months.

When he died an earthquake struck his palace. Since that day his ghost has been haunting the cave of the spring, and none of the natives has ever dared go into the cave.—New York Sun.

VOTE FOR THE LABOR CANDIDATES

Alexander Murray Harry Gainey Robert Morrison James Garside

MRS. MORRIS FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Six Candidates For Council Are Endorsed By the War Veterans

Four Labour Representatives and Ald. McIntyre and Dobbin Will Receive the Support of Peterboro's Returned Soldiers in Tomorrow's Election.

CANDIDATES HEARD

Robert Morrison.
Alex. Murray.
Harry Gainey.
James Garside.
Ald. A. A. McIntyre.
Ald. F. H. Dobbin.

The above names represent the slate that is endorsed and will be supported by the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association in the aldermanic elections to-morrow. The list was selected at a special meeting of the War Veterans last evening at which the six candidates endorsed and Messrs. Harry Phelan and A. H. Stratton, two other aspirants for office, addressed a large attendance of returned men. President H. J. Staunton occupied the chair.

For the War Veterans, the chief interest in the meeting centred in the question of civic aid towards securing more suitable quarters for the use of the Association. This was the point which the members preferred to hear discussed, and all the speakers were pinned down to definite statements in regard to this question, while other civic matters were also thoroughly discussed.

The four Labour candidates, Messrs. Gainey, Morrison, Murray and Garside, while they stated that they stood on the labour platform, which they pointed out included public work to be done by day labour and home labour, were equally emphatic in declaring that if elected they would act in the interests of all the citizens. They promised to support the Veterans in any reasonable request they made of the new Council. If the Veterans felt that they needed $20,000 or $25,000, Mr. Gainey remarked they were ready to stand behind the men who had fought.

The other speakers also promised that they would deal sympathetically with any request within reason that the Veterans might make. Ald. Dobbin advised the War Veterans to be moderate in their demands, pointing out that to erect a new building at the present time would be to make an expenditure for which the full value would not be obtained. He was willing if elected, to introduce a motion in the Council that the sum of $10,000 be placed in the estimates for the providing of more suitable quarters for the Veterans, and thought that by the judicious expenditure of that sum good results would be secured. The Oriental Hotel building was mentioned as the place that might be suitable.

Ald. Stratton in his address covered the different problems that are to come up before the Council next year, and pointed out the need of electing men capable of giving them the consideration they would require.

Ex-Ald. Phelan and Ald. McIntyre both agreed that the city owed a duty to its returned soldiers and promised to support any reasonable request the War Veterans might make.

After the candidates retired there was a short discussion, after which it was decided to add the names of Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Dobbin to the Veterans' slate, the four Labour candidates having been previously endorsed by the special committee of the Veterans.

Bombs Wreck Residences

Series of Bomb Explosions in Philadelphia.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—Federal and local authorities to-day were investigating the series of bomb explosions which wrecked the homes of Justice Robert Von Moschzisker of the State Supreme Court, acting superintendent of Police Mills, and Ernest T. Trigg, president of the Philadelphia Chambe of Commerce at midnight. Although occupants of the houses were hurled from their beds and scores of windows in nearby houses shattered no one was seriously hurt. One man was arrested.

The man taken into custody gave his name as Jan Lafferty. He denied any connection with the affair, but was held for further examination today.

The police say he was seen to pick up pamphlets. Many of the pamphlets which were scattered over the street in front of the wrecked houses denounced organized law and order.

Fearing the attempts would be made to blow up other buildings, special details of police guarded the residences of other prominent citizens throughout the night. Extra guards were also thrown around the Federal Buildings.

EXCERPTS FROM SOME OF LABOUR ADDRESSES

Mr. A. I Bolwell—On Wednesday there should be a light lit in Peterbro that will take a strong wind to blow out.

Mr. W. Stevens. — There is something wrong with the workers of Peterboro if these four candidate are not elected.

Mr. Ax. Murray. — Regarding the coal question, I believe I did more than the whole council put together. When Peterboro was in such straits I went there alone then we stormed them in a body demanding that coal be got for the citizens, and since then the Aldermen have paid more attention to the Trades and Labor Council.

Mr. James Garside. — The Veterans should be highly respected and I believe that they should get anything in reason they want.

Mr. Harry Gainey. — Let us make a start with the Hunter street bridge with the money we have. I am told that a contractor put $60,000 or $70,000 on his price for contingencies. The city could buy its own plant for future use or we could sell it and come out alright. I believe we should start at once and be ready to put the work in the spring.

Mr. Robert Morrison. — The city should give more attention to Ashburnham. It is almost in the centre of the town, and we should take more pains with it. The Hunter street bridge should be started at once. We should try and provide employment for our home labour.

INTERVIEWED POINCARE

President of France Plans to Visit the United States After the Peace Conference.

A BIG TASK

(By William Philip Simms.)
(Copyright 1918 by the United Press.)

PARIS, December 31. — President Poincare is planning to visit the United States after the peace Conference.

He revealed this to-day during an interview with the United Press in which he forecast that France, the United States and the Allies in general, will enter the conference already agreed upon the basis for peace.

No dates have been fixed for Poincare's visit, but June or July has been tentatively suggested to him.

"Naturally,' he said with a smile, "as president of the country where the conference will be held, I will be unable to leave before it is ended."

Reports of material differences among the Allies, Poincare declared—then reiterated—are German among us."

"I do not foresee the slightest trouble in arriving at complete accord, even to the details," he said.

IN HARMONY.

"We are already in harmony on general lines. The details will be settled as soon as the delegates get down to work. It will take some time, of course, as there is a tremendous amount of detail."

'Many problems remain to be solved, not only for western Europe, but for the Near East, Africa and elsewhere. All necessarily will come up at the conference, where we hope at least to have the assistance of President Wilson in the settlement of the principles before his departure."

Poincare smiled and then added: "There is so much to do he may yet have to remain some time time among us."

The president greeted the correspondent at the door of his study in the Elysee Palace and indicated chairs at the side of his desk, a beautiful example of the Louis period. Only one other person was present, a staff captain, who presented the correspondent to the President. The latter seated himself at a small desk, a pile of official documents at his elbow. The whole tone of the conversation was permeated with the President's friendly feeling towards America.

TIME FOR ACTION.

In response to a suggestion that the French are modest to the point of reticence, the President replied: "Since the war Frenchmen have felt this is a time for acts, not for words. Set upon without warning, France was forced to bear the brunt of the fighting. I think the figures of the Under Secretary of State for Pensions, M. Abrami, tell the story more graphically than mere words:

(France's total losses to the end of October were 1,831,000, or nearly five per cent. of its population, making France's casualties the heaviest proportionally of any belligerent.)

"In addition to our losses in men," he continued, "it will take years to recover from the purely material setback. That is why Germany must pay not only important indemnities, but must settle for billions of francs worth of property destroyed or carried off.

DISTRICTS WIPED OUT.

"Entire industrial districts have been wiped out and whole cities razed.

"Germany must not be permitted to get ahead of us by starting up her own factories while we are struggling to rebuild ours, which she destroyed. She carried off our machinery. She must build other machinery to replace it. She destroyed our factories. She must furnish materials to rebuild them. She demolished French homes and took the furniture away. The people cannot wait forever to have their homes rebuilt and refurnished. The Germans must aid in this task."

President Wilson Goes to France

Visit to London Concluded With Another Dinner at Buckingham Palace.

"BALANCE OF POWER"

(By Robert J. Bender.)
(United Press Service.)

LONDON, Dec. 31. — President Wilson left London on his return to France at 9:20 this morning, bringing to a close one of the most momentous events in British history.

There was no doubt that the people, as well as the statesmen, felt the President's visit had accomplished a complete understanding of British and American peace aims.

As the President departed, his sweeping declaration at Manchester against a "balance of power," together with Premier Clemenceau's open advocacy of a return to that ancient form of alliances, filled the public mind.

Real Significance.

While newspaper headlines emphasized Clemenceau's quotation of his conversation with Wilson, interpreting it as showing the President is agreeable toward Britain's retention of control of the seas, private conversation revealed that the real significance in the Premier's speech is attached to the fact that conflicting peace theories are coming out into the open.

Ground for saying Wilson's quoted remark does not admit of unqualified interpretation was given here by friends of the President, while his Manchester speech ended hopes, cherished in some quarters, that he would accept a compromise in the shape of an Angli-American or quadruple alliance, including France and Italy.

Will Go To Italy.

President Wilson will remain in Paris until late to-morrow, when he will leave for Rome. There he will visit King Victor Emmanuel, Pope Benedict, and the Methodist College, returning to Paris the first of next week.

Premier Lloyd George left for his country place to-day for a brief rest before going to Paris.

The final ceremony of Wilson's visit to London was a dinner at Buckingham Palace last night.

A Hearty Send-Off.

Premier Lloyd George left for his country place to-day for a brief rest before going to Paris.

The final ceremony of Wilson's visit to London was a dinner at Buckingham Palace last night. There were thirty-two guests, including the family and personal friends of King George and Queen Mary.

The unprecedented, though simple act, of the King and Queen in accompanying the Presidential party to the train this morning drew an exceptionally large farewell crowd to the vicinity of the Victoria Station. The royal couple spent fifteen minutes on the station platform saying good-bye to each of their guests. The party was given a hearty send-off by the crowds.

Instructions in Voting

There are four members of the Board of Education to be elected, and each elector may vote for either one, two, three or the whole four. If he votes for more than four candidates for the Board, his ballot is spoiled.

An elector may vote for ten candidates for the council, but he must vote for at least four. If he votes for four he need not vote for any more, but he may vote for any number beyond four up to ten, but if he votes for more than ten he will spoil his ballot.

Canadians In Siberia

Morale of Bolshevists is Reported to be Very Low.

(Associated Press.)

Allied Headquarters in Northern Russia, (Sunday.) — December 31. — Throughout the past month it has been generally quiet on all the sectors of the front. The Bolshevist forces attempted recently to raid the allied line of communication in the Shenkursk region, and there are signs that reinforcements are reaching the enemy. The morale of the Bolshevists, however, is reported to be extremely low, the enemy's army being imperfectly clothed for the Arctic winter, in contrast with the Canadian artillery forces, as well as the other allies and the loyal Russians, who are well furred and blanketed. The Russians who were prisoners of war in Germany, and who have returned through the Bolshevist lines, declare that the rations of the Bolshevist troops is a considerable quantity of black bread and three dried herring daily to each man. The allied forces are receiving special winter rations, including quantities of fats, based on the experience of Sir E. H. Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer. The morale of the men is high and though anxiously awaiting a definite statement from the allies as to the policy to be pursued towards Russia, they are reconciled to remaining during the winter in the arctic.

SINN FEIN PRISONERS

(Special to Examiner.)

BELFAST, December 31. — Sinn Fein prisoners here have barricaded themselves in their wing of the jail, and declared their defiance of the authorities, the military officials reported to-day.

The prisoners are said to have accumulated enough provisions for a long siege. They have hoisted an Irish flag improvised from a bed coverlet, and are playing revolutionary tunes on instruments made from the kitchen utensils.

"Labour Candidates Should Head Poll"

John Noble, of Toronto, at Big Labour Meeting Last Night Declared Their Fitness and Worthiness of Receiving Confidence of the Electors.

CANDIDATES SPOKE

Mr. John Noble of Toronto closed a vigorous speech last night with an appeal to the workers of Peterboro to permit no petty side issue to split their vote for the four Labour Candidates in the municipal elections on New Year's Day. Take full advantage of this opportunity to obtain direct representation in the administration of this city by supporting and electing the entire Labour slate, was, in effect, his counsel.

"Go out determined that you will not only cast your ballots for the Labour Candidates," he said, "but get your friends to work and vote for them. If you stand united, I have no doubt of their election. Don't let any petty difference stop you. Each one of these four men will represent you just as much as the others. Let no question of creed or color split your vote. That is the old trick of the politicians. They make these balls and they get some other fellow to fire them. I know your four candidates. I have talked with them and worked with them. They all look the same to me, and I would vote one just as readily as for the others. The real question is the working man for the workingman, and when we all realize that the workingman is going to get somewhere."

The Ability of Labour

Mr. Noble spoke to a large audience that practically filled the Labour Hall. Mr. A. L. Bolwell, who is chairman of the Organization Committee presided.

Mr. Noble made an earnest and striking appeal to the pride and confidence of Labour men in the accomplishments of their comrades wherever the opportunity had been offered them. When he was in Glasgow, he continued, the Municipal Council of that city were nearly all Labour men. They conducted the business of that city as well and as cheaply as possible, and Glasgow had gained a reputation for its civic progress. All its work was done by day labour and it was well done and cheaply.

"We hear many statements that Labour must be taken into the confidence of Capital in the work of reconstruction. Hon. Frederic Nicholls is one of the men who signed the report of the Government's committee on reconstruction in which it was acknowledged that Labour must be consulted."

Elect the four Labour candidates to the Council where they could not only be consulted but also have a vote, was Mr. Noble's advice.

An Example of Ability

Recalling the appointment of a Food Controller for Canada, the Dominion Government had selected the representative of the Standard Oil Company of Canada, Mr. Noble continued. Prices were steadily raised. In Great Britain, Lord Rhondda was appointed, but the work was performed by Mr. Clynes, a Labour member in the House. This was proved by the fact that when Lord Rhondda died, Mr. Clynes, who had been his assistant "got the job."

"He proved his efficiency and he was the best man for the position because he was from the Labour class. Others can't work for Labour because they don't know the aspirations and the needs of Labour, and furthermore they don't want to give them what Labour wants and needs. The

MOMENTOUS CONVENTION

The Next Six Months Will Decide Question of Peace or War Over Irish Question.

SINN FEINERS

By Edwin Hullinger.
(United Press.)

LONDON, Dec. 31.—"The coming six months will decide whether the Irish question will be settled peacefully or bloodily," Edward Shortt, chief secretary of Ireland, told the United Press to-day.

"The Dublin convention next month at which an attempt to form an Irish Republic may be made is expected to be the deciding issue.

"The Sinn Feiners have an opportunity to show their capability," Shortt continued. "Sane, cool action is now of the most vital importance for Ireland. We will not permit any advocates of extreme physical force to gain control of the situation.

"I do not consider that the large Sinn Fein vote in recent parliamentary elections shows a demand for separation from England. I believe that from 60 to 70 per cent. of Sinn Feiners can be persuaded to accept Home Rule."

From other authoritative sources the United Press learned that the Dublin convention undoubtedly will constitute a most important event in modern history. It will be attended by 2,000 delegates, called together from all parts of Ireland by Sinn Feiners. It will consist of Sinn Fein members of parliament and several Nationalist members and the remainder will be Sinn Feiners specially elected for the occasion.

Develop Industries.

It is understood that Great Britain will refuse to recognize a peace delegation which will be elected by the convention. As a result the subsequent action of the convention will be highly important. Government officials declare that any revolutionary movement would not have the slighest chance of success.

Well informed Irish officials say the British government is considering a loan of £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) for the development of Irish industries. Army motor trucks will be provided for road transportation and naval motor ships will be turned over to Irish fisheries. Extensive road building will be undertaken. School teachers' salaries will be increased. Special provision will be made for the development of peat and flax industries.

Sir Horace Plunkett, it is understood, is forming a new Home Rule party to replace the nearly extinct Nationalists.

THE WEATHER

Some of the most severe weather of last winter was experienced about this date. A year ago this morning we had it 22 degrees below zero. A year ago yesterday it was 27 degrees below, and the same figures prevailed on the preceding day. The first week of the New Year was also cold. On Jan. 1st, it was 11 below; 2nd, 15 below; 3rd, 13 below; 4th, 12 below; 5th, 2 below, 6th, 1 below. After eleven consecutive days of below zero weather we then had it milder for a week, but which was again succeeded by severe cold.—W. P.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 31ST, 1918.

GOOD CANDIDATES.

The Board of Trade is urging the election of two of its members to the City Council in the persons of Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board of Trade, and Mr. James Hamilton, of the Peter Hamilton Company. In doing so it is not asked that these candidates should be chosen because they are members of the Board of Trade, but because the Board feels that Messrs. Turner and Hamilton are candidates who have the business training and experience that will be needed in dealing with the many big problems that are to come before the Council next year... Each has been successful in his own business and has shown qualities that should make him a good alderman.

A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE.

In extending to its readers seasonal greetings and expressing the hope that the New Year may be a happy and prosperous one for all of them, the Examiner may be allowed to point out that the year which begins tomorrow brings with it many responsibilities. Since last New Year's Day the cause for which our gallant soldiers have fought so splendidly has been victorious; the dark days of the early months have gone forever. But there are new trials and tasks ahead. We must face them with the same confidence, the same resolution, the same courage as our soldiers overseas faced the enemy. Reconstruction is the problem that lies before us—the making of Peterborough a better city, the making of Canada a more progressive country. Our boys who have so nobly carried the Maple Leaf of Canada to victory will be coming back to us during the greater part of next year.. It will be our duty to see that they are received in a manner worthy of what they have done; it will be our responsibility to see that employment is found for them. There may be housing accommodation to be provided; the next year may reveal other problems that will have to be handled.

These tasks may appear formidable, but the difficulty will vanish if they are attacked with energy and determination. It should be our New Year's resolution as citizens of Peterborough that we will do our full duty to the men who have fought for us overseas.

NOT AN EXPERIMENT.

Although Mrs. W. R. Morris is the first woman candidate in Peterborough, there is nothing experimental about the services that women in other cities have been able to render their fellow citizens on the Board of Education. The three women members of the Toronto Board of Education have done most valuable work, and as the Mail and Empire puts it, "have shown themselves fearless fighters in support of unquestionable business enterprises." So excellent has been the service of the three women that the newspapers are not only urging their return to office, but are endorsing two new women candidates as well.

It is because of the belief that there is a splendid field of service on the Board of Education and because of their confidence that the candidate chosen is qualified in every way to take advantage of the opportunity offered her that the local Council of Women have placed Mrs. Morris in the field. She has been a most progressive and public-spirited citizen, whose work as a member of various local bodies stamps her as being well fitted to serve as a member of the Board of Educaion. The vast mare women, and this is another argument put forward that it would be desirable that their sex should be represented on the Board; yet this is the first time that the ratepayers have had had an opportunity of voting for a woman for this branch of civic service.

THE ALDERMANIC SLATE.

It is the duty of every ratepayer whose name appears on the voters' lists to register his or her vote in the municipal elections to-morrow. There is no excuse for failure to exercise the franchise for the holiday affords every one a chance to get to the polls, and if the electors recognize their responsibility, the total vote should be a record one, in spite of the fact that there is no mayoralty contest and no money by-laws are to be voted upon.

There is unusual interest in the aldermanic race in which fifteen candidates will fight for the ten places on the Council Board. Seldom in the history of municipal elections in Peterborough, has there been so much uncertainty about the result. The citizens generally are unable to reach any conclusions as to the probable composition of next year's Council. The field is a peculiar one, and is complicated by the fact that there are three or four "slates" involved including the Trades and Labour Council's delegation of four candidates. There are six members of this year's Council who believe that their record is sufficient to ensure them a return to office. In addition three ex-aldermen, Messrs. J. J. Turner, Jr., Harry Phelan and A. H. Stratton, are candidates which leaves only six men who have not had previous experience.

The composition of the various slates may or may not furnish a clue as to the personnel of next year's Council. Of four slates endorsed respectively by the Trades and Labour Council, the Commercial Travellers' Association, the Protestant Benevolent Association and the Great War Veterans' Association, the name of Mr. Robert Morrison appears three times, the only candidate to be selected that many times. Ald. Jones, Ald Edgar, and Messrs. Gainey, Garside and Murray are twice endorsed, while Ald. Stratton, Ald. Saunders, Ald. Taylor, Ald. Dobbin, ex-Ald. Phelan, ex-Ald. Turner, and Mr. Jas. Hamilton have each been selected by one slate. There are none of the candidates who have failed to receive endorsation at the hands of one body or another.

THE RULING OF ENGLAND.

A correspondent in the London News Witness has started a subject which has attracted a good deal of attention, that "England is suffering from the domination of foreigners." Various other papers have joined in the discussion pointing out the Peace Conference will consider decisions which may affect Great Britain for generations; but the particular point is that the British representatives at the Conference will consist of one Welshman, Mr. Lloyd George, one Scotch Canadian, Mr. Bonar Law; one Jew, Lord Reading; four Scotchmen, Mr. Balfour, Sir Eric Geddes, Marshal Haig and Admiral Wemyss; and one Englishman, Lord Milner, who was born in Germany, but of British parents.

One paper goes so far as to ask whether this is not a humiliating position for the predominant partner which contributed about 80 per cent. of the British army, 90 per cent. of the navy, and 90 per cent. of the British war expenditure. We should say that it is not, as it appears to us to be only another instance of the greatness and the wisdom of England. Englishmen think Imperially, not parochially; they have been trained to it through the centuries; there is much history and much character in the words of Tennyson:

"We sailed wherever ships could sail,
We founded many a mighty state,
Pray God our greatness may not fail
Through craven fears of being great."

And the greatness of England has been that she has not had the craven fear or the petty mindedness to refuse to accept and support the services of all those from "many a mighty state" who had proved themselves the most capable of filling high and important positions. No distinction of race or creed is allowed to interfere with this great conception of governing the Empire, and England as a part of it. This is a point which it should not be above Canadians to consider, as to whether or not the prejudices of race and creed do not sadly interfere with the true interests and the steady progress of the country.—Kingston Standard.

One Way of Reducing The Tax Rate in Peterboro

Mr. G. N. Gordon Advocates the Establishment in Peterboro of a Technical and Vocational School

TO THE ELECTORS:—

A well-known City Planning Expert has stated that within the boundaries of the City of Peterborough there is enough land to comfortably house 50,000 people, and to do this the same sidewalks, water mains, sewers, electric light system will need little or no extension except service connections. If 25,000 more people are in the City of Peterborough without increasing its boundaries this will be the only way the tax rate will ever be reduced as these extra residents will bear their proportionate part of the burden. To do this, in addition to Peterborough's natural advantages, and natural increase and development of industrial concerns some inducement must be offered to attract residents.

It seems to me a great inducement will be a Technical and Vocational School, the cost of which should be assumed on a fair basis of the Dominion Government one-third, the Ontario Government one-third, and the City one-third.

Dr. Merchant, of the Department of Education, stated that this Department was anxious to develop these schools in industrial centres like Peterborough, and this City being one of the best known industrial centres in Ontario should be thus equipped.

This Technical School would have a night school in connection where boys and girls who had left school in the Second, Third and Fourth books, could follow the plan adopted in a number of United States Cities of going to school at night, and obtaining a thorough education in English, Mathematics and Commercial subjects, to equip them for ordinary commercial life, to take positions such as salesmen, saleswomen, clerks and managers of departments, etc.

The industrial part of the School will give a thorough training in English and Mathematics, Elementary Physics and Chemistry, both at night classes and during the day, for such pupils as could attend, and boys and girls working in factories and in stores would have the advantage of this training without cost.

The School would not teach any trade or business except commercial work, such as shorthand, bookkeeping, and typewriting. There would be taught, however, drafting so that an apprentice, or a boy desiring industrial pursuits could read a plan, or sketch, learn accurate measurements, and everything required to make him, when he finishes his apprenticeship, a well equipped moulder, toolmaker, or other mechanic.

The elementary principles of brass and iron founding, woodwork, such as canoe building; and the principles of textile manufacturing could be taught both at night classes, and day classes, which should give a course of at least ten hours a week each, and furnish a first-class strong foundation for every boy and girl, in the City of Peterborough, who desire to take advantage of it.

The above is briefly what I believe should be the object of the Technical and Vocational Elementary Schools. Students who desire higher degrees of technical education would require to attend the Universities, but if an enducement like this Technical School could be developed in Peterborough, under the directions of the Department of Education, it would bring families to Peterborough, and develop the industrial part of the City in a way heretofore unknown.

I intend, if elected to the Board of Education, to vigorously urge this plan of development for the City of Peterborough, and to obtain from the Department of Education their active and sympathetic support for the development of the City of Peterborough along these lines. I would ask your support to assist in developing this plan of industrial, vocational education. I remain,

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

THE RUGBY CLUB DANCE

The Rugby Club dance last evening was one of the most brilliant social events in several years and attended by the largest number of persons ever assembled at a dance at the Empress. The boys in charge are to be congratulated upon their splendid organization which resulted in such a success. They aimed at featuring nothing but the best of everyting which they accomplished. The dance, which commenced at nine o'clock reached such dimensions during the ensuing hours that the grill room, dining room and rotunda were necessarily thrown open by 'mine host' Mr G. Graham.

THE MUSIC

The music supplied by Mr. W. Staples of the Stand Theatre, Toronto was equal to the best ever heard in Peterboro and delighted the 270 persons who made the best of it until four o'clock this morning.

Labour Candidates Should Head Poll

only way to get anything is to elect your own representatives to the municipal Council and to other offices."

In Direct Touch

Labour Aldermen would know the sentiments and needs of the working men, through contact in the meetings of the unions and the Trades Council. "If you elect those candidates you can give them your ideas at the meetings. Every worker will then have direct interest and connection with the city's affairs. And that's the way it should be with the Government.

"I hope the workers of Peterboro, after Wednesday night will have some say in the government of this city. After all you are the majority and you should have a voice in the Council. This is your opportunity. When you have marked your ballots for the Labour Candidate, your duty is done. The others have their friends. They have not been friends of yours in the past. See that these four are elected irrespective of what the other fellows get."

Labour Is Veterans' Friend

Mr. Noble declared that the Labour men were the only supporters of the returned soldiers. "They have little to hope from the others, for they are not of the same class," he said. "Most of the soldiers who fought at the front and the workers who paid at home are on the same level. Most of the soldiers stepped out of the ranks of Labour. The other fellow is elevated, or thinks he is. Some may say that I am a socialist. I don't think I am, and I don't think my friends say so. Real socialism is a friend of the workers.

Mr. Noble alleged that the word Bolshevik was appearing frequently in the press and some of te papers did not know what it meant. But they were using it as a bogey to alarm and divide Labour, to make the workingmen distrustful of their fellow workers.

"No one can say that our four candidates are socialists. That's why they should head the polls on Wednesday, for there is no such cry to scare away the workers."

Public Ownership Plus

Mr. Noble referred to the Labour plank of public ownership of the street railway and similar public utilities, and declared that Labour should have a voice in the management of such utilities. He mentioned several cases to illustrate his proposition that a public utility might be as unfair to the working class as if it were owned by a private corporation. The electrical workers for the Hydro Electric Commission in Toronto had to go on strike for three weeks to enforce the award of an independent board of arbitration, headed by Judge Coatsworth that had heard their claims.

The Peterboro Street Railway was owned by the Hydro-Electric Commission, but Mr. Noble questioned whether it was operated in the interests of the poor and workers of the city. Hence, they should see that they were represented in that management.

The C.N.R. deal and the Flavelle investigation, the result of which Mr. Noble said had never been heard of, both received his attention. It was time the working men were waking up and seeing what was being "put over them."

Property Qualifications

Speaking of the property qualifications for elections, he stated that he been one of a deputation that waited on Premier Hearst on December 16th requesting that this objectionable legislation be modified or withdrawn. It had been pointed out that soldiers who had fought for this country, who were competent to assume a share of the responsibility of its administration were debarred because of the property restrictions.

"We got very little encouragement" Mr. Noble said, "So you see that after all the soldiers have done, they are not willing to give them a chance to make the laws of the country."

Addresses of the Candidates

The four Labour candidates for the Council, Messrs. Alex. Murray, Jas. Garside, Harry Gainey and Robt. Morrison addressed the meeting. Mr. Joseph Begley, who moved the resolution of appreciation to Mr. Noble seconded by Mr. William Stevens, complimented the candidates upon the speeches they had made, and expressed the belief that they would prove worthy representatives of the working men.

Pte. Peter Perdue Describes Burial at Sea of Soldier From Village of Downeyville

The Late Pte. Alphonse Gosselin Died of Pneumonia—Several Others Were Buried at the Same Time.

DOWNEYVILLE NEWS

DOWNEYVILLE, Dec. 31.—Pte. Peter Perdue was a Saturday visitor to Mrs. Alice Gosselin. Speaking of his last days on board the "City of Cairo" with her son ,the late Pte. Alphonse Gosselin, Pte. Perdue had the following to say:

The influenza was very bad before we boarded the ship, but everybody seemed to be all right until the third day sailing, when the water got so stirred up and the ship began to roll and a large crowd got sea-sick, but Alphonse happened to be one of the unlucky ones and avoided it.

The Fourth Day.

The fourth day he was taken to the hospital and finally got rundown so much that he took pneumonia. He struggled between life and death, with intense suffering, without a murmur until it had him worn out so much that he succumbed.

The Funeral.

His funeral hour was four o'clock p.m. the same day. In the meantime he gathered up his belongings to send to you. At last came the funeral hour. Ambrose and Herb. Crough, Ronald Galvin, James Hurkington, Eugene Maloney and four others and myself were the pallbearers. Phonse was carried along with eight others who were to be buried at the same hour to the grave yard, as you might call it. Ambrose Crough and I were told to be prepared to lower the body to the watery grave, which was a hard task because we thought so much of him. The band sounded a few solemn notes and at last the word came to lower them. We all did, but it was the hardest blow that all of us ever got. It made it so dreadfully dreary for us, because he was so cheery and had such a happy disposition.

Corp. W. J. O'Neil and Pte. Peter Perdue, who returned from overseas on Monday last, were welcomed by their many friends and relatives.

Ptes. Ambrose Crough and Ronald Galvin of Ennismore, chums of the late Pte. Alphone Gosselin, visited Mrs. Alice Gosselin on Monday. Pte. Gosselin died on his way overseas.

Pte. Ronald Galvin, of Ennismore, who returned from overseas on Monday, is visiting his brother and sister here, Rev. Father Galvin and Miss Lottie Galvin, until New Year's.

Miss Hardgrove of Lindsay, is visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Clancy.

Mr. Urban Lucas was a Lindsay visitor on Thursday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Winn, of Toronto, are spending a short Christmas vacation with the latter's moher, Mrs. Crowley.

Miss Anne O'Brien, who had been teaching school in St. Catharines, is home for Christmas.

Mrs. Edward Houlihan entertained a few friends at her home on Friday evening in honour of her nephew, Corp. W. J. O'Neil.

Miss M. O'Brien, graduate nurse of St. Michael's hospital, Toronto, spent Christmas with her mother, Mrs. J. D. O'Brien.

Mr. Patrick Callihan has received a letter from his son, Pte. Victor Callihan, saying that he is on his way home from overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Perdue held a card party and dance at their home on Monday night in honour of the former's returned hero brother, Pte. Peter Perdue. A large crowd attended and also another brave hero, Pte. Ronald Galvin, of Ennismore. Everybody enjoyed themselves highly.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lucas were Christmas visitors to Peterborough to the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Perdue.

Mr. Albert Lucas was a Lindsay visitor on Saturday with a load of hay.

Mr. and Mrs. James Guiry were Christmas day visitors to the latter's mother and brother in Ennismore, Mrs. McCullough and Mr. Mort. McCullough.

Rev. Father Galvin and Miss Lottie Galvin were Ennismore visitors to their relatives the latter part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gosselin spent Sunday afternoon and evening with the former's mother, Mrs. Alice Gosselin.

BOARD of ALDERMEN

Ald. A. A. McINTYRE

As a candidate for re-election to the City Council for 1919 I respectfully solicit your vote and influence.

The coming year will be marked by a number of outstanding questions of grave importance that will have to be dealt with my the incoming Council. These include the proposed overhead bridge on Hunter street, the sewage disposal plant, the two-platoon system for the firemen, and also the question of a suitable war memorial and better and more adequate attention to the many problems connected with the soldiers who are already home and those who will return in the future.

This year it will be necessary for the electors to mark their ballots for at least four aldermen and not more than ten. I hope to be favoured with one of these votes and if elected will give the same impartial and undivided attention to civic affairs that has characterized by efforts in the past. If you vote for less than four aldermen the ballot will be counted as a spoiled ballot, and if you vote for more than ten the same conditions will apply.

Yours for a greater and more prosperous and progressive city.

A. A. McIntyre.

As Candidate for Alderman

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having had your confidence for the past five years as a member of your City Council, I again ask your approval.

I have, in looking after your interests, tried to be useful, helpful and practical. Such details as have been entrusted to my care have been attended to efficiently and carefully.

There has been little opportunity in the past four war years for what is termed "progressive enterprise" for the city. If the coming term affords such you will not find me lacking in furthering that which is best for both your interest and that of the municipality. I can only ask you to take my past record as an assurance for the future.

I believe that thoroughness of attention to detail in our city administration is the only sure way to success. All else is but a flash in the pan. We must grow as we grow. Careful management, reasonable economy, faithful service are the basis of your municipal progress. I will, if elected, work earnestly for all.

Very respectfully,

ONE GOOD TERM DESERVES ANOTHER

To the Electors

of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having again been nominated for Alderman for the city for 1919, I again ask your support in favour of my election.

My record in the Council during the past year is before you, and I can safely leave it in your hands. If again elected I pledge myself to continue to give my close attention to the best interests of the city as a whole.

Compliments of the season.

Yours faithfully,

BOARD of ALDERMEN

To the Municipal Electors Of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

In compliance with the urgent request of numerous friends I have consented to stand for election as Alderman for the city for 1919.

Having the benefit of several years' experience in the City Council and occupied important positions such as Chairman of the Board of Works and other influential committees, I would endeavour, if elected, to give my best services in assisting to conduct our civic affairs in a prudent, economical, and business-like manner.

I, as well as every other intelligent ratepayer, fully realize the fact that the city is faced with large responsibilities during 1919. Anything I can do, therefore, to serve the electorate at this critical period will be cheerfully undertaken to the best of my ability.

Soliciting your support and influence, and hoping the very best men may be elected for the Board of Aldermen for 1919, permit me to wish one and all the compliments of the season.

Yours faithfully,

JAS. HAMILTON

OF THE PETER HAMILTON COMPANY, LIMITED

There are other good men to select from, but the Board of Trade particularly ask for your support in favor of their two representatives.

Both these men have been energetic workers on the Board of Trade in the interests of the city, and both have "made good" as business men.

Both these men are pledged, if elected, to see that the masses are not bled white financially by high taxation, the result of mismanagement of civic affairs.

Both these men will not expend one dollar more of your money than is absolutely necessary. Peterborough's business is BIG business—send BIG men to handle it.

United action is wanted to secure their election. Don't stay away from the polls. Early voting is advisable, and constant effort until the last vote has been cast, will bring the deserved victory. Let this be your resolve. PULL TOGETHER AND WIN.

Women Who May Vote On New Year's Day

The Voters' List is Considerably Longer This Year.

The voters' list for Peterborough for the municipal elections is considerably larger than in former years, owing to the fact that the qualifications have been extended, and many women previously unable to vote may now have a voice in the city's welfare.

The Qualifications.

In order to vote at the coming municipal elections a person must have his or her name on the voters' list. This list—compiled from the assessment records and carefully revised—was compiled on December 6th last, and may be seen at the City Clerk's office.

Any person, man or woman, married or single, who is 21 years old and a born or naturalized British subject, and who at the same time has one or other of the following qualifications, is eligible to be put on the voters' list::

1. Who owns or leases property in the municipality assessed to the value of $400.

2. Who has a taxable income of $400 or more (i.e., after deducting from the total income $600 exemption in the case of non-householders and $1,500 for householders.

Voters' Rights.

Every qualified voter has the right to place:

Ten votes for aldermen, and must at least poll four for such.

Four votes for the Board of Education, and not more than the stated number to be elected.

The voter must vote in one place only for either aldermen or School Board.

The Polls.

There will be a returning officer in charge of each polling booth. He will explain any points which may puzzle the voter.

The polls are open from 8 o'clock in the morning utnil 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Wednesday, January 1st, 1919.

U. S. Occupying Army Sets New Health Record

Illness Among Troops Along the Rhine Less Than in Times of Peace.

COBLENZ, Dec. 31.—The percentage of sickness among the occupying American troops is unusually low, according to the estimates of the Third Army medical officers. The number of cases in the eight evacuation hospitals within the occupied area is about 1,000, most of them being influenza.

Figuring the approximate number of occupying troops as 300,000, the sickness amounts to less than one and a half per cent. In peace time the sickness among soldiers averages from two to three per cent.

The excellent condition of the men is due partly to good billets. There is just enough drilling to keep the soldiers in condition, and there is no overcrowding or illness from fatigue or exposure.

The Third Army has five hospitals in Coblenz, two at Treves and one at Mayen. Most of these were formerly German hospitals, and the equipment is modern in every detail.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS

"I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

Public 'Hangs' on to Victory Bonds

MARKET FOR LONG TERMS 1917 ISSUE IS STRONG—PREMIUM IS OFFERED

Victory Bonds, particularly the long-term bonds, are in demand and the market is strong. This sums up the opinion of a number of representative bond men in the city today.

The 1917 issue of 1937 bonds are much in demand and are selling around 102, which is at a considerable premium, and on the whole the market has remained steady.

Very wisely, the purchasers of the 1918 bonds are, in the main holding on to their purchases, realizing that the investment is the best they are ever likely to make and one that is not likely to de duplicated in the future.

"Interest at the rate of 5½ per cent on a long term bond which is income tax free is a more attractive investment. We strongly advised the salesmen to urge the public to buy the long-term bonds on this account," said one bond man in giving his opinion.

No reason is given for the fact that the 1917 bonds are on the market more freely than the 1918, except that the educational campaign for the latter issue was the more complete and the purchasers taught the value of the security.

"Will it be long before interest comes down?" one of the men was asked, to which he replied that it will not be very long, but that other bonds of the high rate of interest will go on the market in the near future in view of the fact that some financing must be done and the time has not been long enough to allow of the spread yet.

Prices High In Old Mons

Driver Johnston Says Spool of Thread Costs $2 40.

Mr. Bruce Johnston, township clerk of North Monaghan, has received the following interesting letter from his brother, Driver P. G. Johnston, of the Canadian Army Service Corps:

Mons, Belgium, Dec. 1st.

In reply to your letter of Sept. 29th, I must say I was very pleased to hear from you and that you are all well. It took exactly two months for your letter to reach me. I suppose the people there are tickled that the war is over. The boys are all anxious to get home. It seemed funny when all the guns quit firing. Everything seemed so quiet. I was with the Imperial Engineers during the Cambrai drive, which was quite a hard fight. We have been living in the city for some time back and it is certainly a great change from dug-outs. We are still billeted in private houses and have real homes. The Belgian people are awfully good to us and do everything they can to make us comfortable. We expect to go through to Germany soon, and from there we will likely pull for home—at least I hope so. This has been a beautiful city before the war, but of course it has been neglected by the Germans in the last four years. It is awful the price everything is here, neck of beef $1.00 a pound, boots from $20 to $75 a pair, a spool of thread $2.40, and everything else in comparison. The poor people have had an awful time getting along, and they are all very pleased to get released. The prisoners are coming in quite fast and they are a pitiable looking lot. Clothing of all descriptions and nearly starved to death. Some of them tell such awful tales and I guess it is right. It is expected here to-day that the King of Beligum was assassinated this morning, but don't know yet whether it is correct. He visited Mons a few days ago and got a great reception. He is well thought of and was a great fighter. He used to lead his troops over himself. This is a great mining country from Denan up to here. In France the Huns destroyed all the machinery in the mines, so it will be some time before they are in running shape again, but they were not touched in Belgium, and it is a great help for the people. The people here are lucky to what they were in France. Nearly everything is wrecked there. Big towns are in ruins, blown to pieces. I met Bert Bell a short time ago. He is looking well and we had quite a visit.

I am putting some German money in the letter—just a souvenir that I got off a prisoner in the Cambrai drive.

There is always something coming to us that we should like to see sidetracked.

To all our Friends and Customers who have favoured us with their patronage during the past year, we extend our sincere Thanks and Hearty Good Wishes for a Very Happy and Prosperous New Year.

VICTORY LOAN FLAG DESTROYED IN LAKEFEILD FIRE

Several Other Important Flags Were Lost—Links With the Past.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 31.—Among the smaller losses in the fire at the Town Hall on Friday morning were the curtains belonging to the W.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church, which were loaned to the curlers for the season; also the flag given to B Company, 46th Regiment, nearly four years ago, by the Soldiers' Comfort Club. It is thought that the Soldiers' Comfort Club will replace this flag to welcome home the lads of B Company who responded so nobly to the call of King and country.

Another flag which was destroyed was the honour flag of the Victory Loan, with two crowns, won by Lakefield and Douro in the recent campaign. The village flag also was destroyed, but it was no longer new and would soon have to been replaced.

A link with the past which was destroyed was the charter of the Red Cross Society, which was formed in Lakefield the time of the Boer war.

The A.Y.P.A. honour roll was also lost. It was presented to the society by Miss Hilliard, in memory of her brother, Lieut. Geoffrey Hilliard, and the brass memorial tablet, just arrived on Thursday, and was affixed that night.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION NOTES

The polling booths will be open to-morrow from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

There are 6,067 qualified voters in Peterborough. It will be interesting to learn how many of them fail in their duty of using the municipal franchise.

The "Kickers' Club" at the Curling rink concede two seats to Labour.

The Labour sentiment in Peterborough will be put to the test to-morrow, and there certainly has been a strong appeal to the common interests of the workingmen to stand together, in other words to put their precepts into practice.

The uncertain quality is what will the shops do. George street's opinion is sometimes a contender, but not always. The vote lies in the outskirts, and it is an unquestioned fact that the workingmen are the majority in the city. Their class spirit will be reflected in the count on New Year's night.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre is one of the senior members of the Council, having qualified for that position by reason of his nine years' service on the Council. He is one of the old guard, and the lone representative of the North Ward, having in previous years shared the North Ward representation with ex-Alderman W. J. Johnston, William Langford, and others.

A telephone is being installed at the Labour Hall this afternoon, and will facilitate to-morrow's "field work."

Adjustment of Labour Questions

BRITISH WAR CABINET HAS NEW PROPOSAL

(Special to the Examiner)

London, Dec. 31.—The British War Cabinet is considering a proposal which may have an important bearing on future labor questions throughout the world According to the Express. The proposal is to ask the Peace Conference at one of its earliest sessions to appoint a commission to inquire into the question of an international ment and to submit plans for a permanent international court and organization to secure joint action in such matters.

When two cats fight in the dark they merely scratch a match.

MY REASONS

1. Because I have made good as a business man in Peterborough.
2. Because I have the time to attend to your Municipal Business. I am not employed by anyone, have no factory hours and rules to adhere to.
3. Because for many years I was foreman then Manager of one of Toronto's oldest firms. This experience alone is a valuable asset—add to that my Peterborough record which is absolutely clean and above board.
4. Because I represent no faction, sect or organization, religious or otherwise. But if elected will impartially, loyally and fearlessly represent all classes, creeds and bodies by the same standards. I am absolutely free and independent of any string, but the string of clean citizenship.
5. Combine the above and you have a CLEAN EFFICIENT SERVICE.

FLYER DELIVERING GIFT TO "HIS GIRL" "STUMBLES" ON ROOF

After Dropping Parcel, Knocks Off Cornice, Strikes Tree Top and Lands in Street.

New York, Dec. 31.—The man who in his youth, tripped on a rug and knocked over the tea table, when he called on his sweetheart for the second time may appreciate to some extent how John G. Stoll, sergeant aviator of the Forty-eight Aero Squadron felt on Christmas. Sergeant Stoll stumbled on the top roof of a house, been choped off the top of a tree and finally landed in the street when he was paying a Christmas call on his "best girl" and when she was standing in a back yard and looking up at him, too. He had just dropped her a Christmas present from the air. It was something light, not a phonograph or a baby grand, and Miss Catherine Kohl caught it in her apron.

It all hapepned over and about the Kohl home, at No. 93 Nichols street, Brooklyn. Sergeant Stoll had been calling by airplane almost every day, flying to the Cyprus Hill section of Brooklyn from Mitchel Field No. 2, at Mineola, L. I. So the neighbors were all out yesterday morning to see the fun. Miss Kohl by appointment was in the back yard. The airplane swooped low and down came a little parcel into her lap.

Sergeant Stoll, of course, had been invited to dinner, So just as an appetizer he began to do a little "hedge hopping" which is aviation slang for just missing things on the ground. But something went wrong with the airplane mechanism and the engine stopped. Sergeant Stoll suddenly found he could go down but not up.

It was then that those who dwell in No. 88 Grant Street realized that something was trying to push the home. There he telephoned the aviastreet to find that the house was minus a piece of cornice. From the house the airplane veered against a tree and clipped off the top of it. There was nothing further to strike except the street.

They pulled Sergeant from the debris with care and misgivings. But the aviator shook himself and trotted around the corner to Miss Kohl's home. There he telephoned theavnation field to send over the airplane ambulance. None was needed for him personally for he was unscratched.

Christmas dinner was ready, but Sergeant Stoll did not stop to partake. Instead he took the next train for Garden City to report in person the mishap to the airplane.

Coal Labour Invited to Resume Old Jobs

SCRANTON, Pa.—The anthracite industry is grateful to the United States Employment Service for aiding in disclosing the whereabouts of mine workers who have drifted away from the region and for paving the way for them to return to their old occupations at the highest wages ever paid in the hard coal field.

The industry is offering jobs to all former employees. Robert A. Quin, general manager of the Susquehanna Collieries Company, has sent letters to 799 former workers now in the army and navy on their way overseas, to army cantonments and to all men who have been located in other industries now about through with war work. This company has thirteen collieries and five washeries in the Luzerne and Schuylkill regions. To all these men Mr. Quin writes:—"Now that the war is over we assume that you are looking forward to the time when you will be home again. We are also looking forward to that time and want to assure you that we have not forgotten you and that your old job or position is being held open for you, awaiting your return."

There are now 34,000 fewer men in the anthracite fields than when the war began. With the return of even half this number the output can be materially increased.

The United States Fuel Administration reports show that 1,017 men formerly employed in the anthracite fields will soon be released from military camps.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In yesterday's issue you had a letter signed by "Commercial Traveller," in which it was suggested that Alderman Dobbin had been overlooked, when the question of a civic slate was brought up at a meeting of commercial travellers on Saturday last.

Permit me to say that Alderman Dobbin was not overlooked and if he was left off the slate in question, it was for very good reasons. Alderman Dobbin is somewhat late in expounding his theories on the housing question, the needs of the War Veterans and other matters which he is wont to dilate upon on the eve of an election. The housing question was up before the Council months ago, and like many other important matters, was allowed to die a natural death, only to be resurrected now that an election is at hand. Let us elect a Council that will give us more action and less talk.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER.

Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir:—Not for several years has there been such activity in municipal matters. To-morrow will show whether this is merely "patty-pan ebullition" or a real movement toward first class municipal representation. Certainly the call is clear and insistent for the best representatives which it is within our power to elect. These are some of the problems facing those who receive our support: Big civic leadership, involving large expenditures; adequate facilities for the Great War Veterans; better accommodation for industrial workers; new school buildings in certain parts of the city; the development of technical education. To insure a solution of these and other problems which will cause our city to progress while removing solvent and to develop along the lines which will add contentment to our citizens generally, we must have representatives with broad minds, clear vision, sound judgment, and adequate knowledge. If it is your desire to see such representatives elected do your part by going to the poll to-morrow and voting for what you truly believe are the best of those nominated.

Yours Truly
Joseph Wearing.

LABOUR AND RECONSTRUCTION.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Labour is going to stand for election on all legislative assemblies, wherever possible in this Dominion, because the problems of Reconstruction demand it. Labour realizes the phrase "Problems of Reconstruction" are deliciously vague and may mean anything. The facts are that it really means: That the war has revealed the emptiness and hollowness of our old social system, and that at last, we are about to put our house in order. We must see that Reconstruction is Reconstruction, not merely an election stunt. The policy of reconstruction, should be summed up in the word stability, which means security. To obtain this you must have what labour stands for—A healthy, prosperous, and progressive working class, with happy home conditions. These conditions you politicians; will find the best buffer against revolution. France would not have stood up four and a half years under the horrors committed on her own soil, if she had not possessed those conditions.

Russia had not these things, she toppled into ruin, and blank despair. We must realize that you cannot build a great State on dishonesty, every man must pay full value for what he wants.

Labour indeed has a great battle to fight against vested prejudices, quite as much as against vested interests.

Labour, like Lloyd George of Great Britain, is in favour of cutting a high road for the people to arrive at better conditions, and to see slums, inhuman conditions and wretchedness sailing one after another, to surrender like the German fleet, and to be sunk at the bottom of the sea, where no human eye, will rest upon their degradation.

Labour stands for the education of our children, to adopt them for the proper discharge in after life of the duties and responsibilities most compatible with the welfare of the country. It really does not bother most people when Queen Anne died, etc., etc.

Organized Labour of Peterborough, follow this line of progress, and asks for the mandate from the working men of this city to introduce legislature for the benefit of the community and a Greater and more Progressive Peterborough.

Don't forget these facts on election day (to-morrow.)

Yours truly,
T. TOOMS.

ALDERMAN F. H. DOBBIN
Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, who is seeking re-election on the strength of his service in the Council.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven as successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up and the skin is left soft and velvety.

Street Railway Extension Progressing

Road Will Soon be Completed to Patterson Street.

The Street Railway extension from the end of the Charlotte street line down Monaghan Road to Paterson street, is progressing rapidly. The digging and grading of the roadbed has reached Paterson street and the rails and ties have been laid past the corner of Sherbrooke street, although the ballast has not been thrown in to that point. Sherbrooke street at this point is the summit of a small hill and from now on the work will be down grade to Paterson street. Another week should see the laying of the rails and ties and the throwing in of the balast completed to Paterson street.

AN EMINENT ENGLISH JUDGE

...interesting correspondence ... running in the Canadian ... as to the career of one of ...'s greatest judges, Sir ..., who was for many ...ster of the Rolls. It is ...d note that he was a Jew, ...any of England's eminent ...e been. As a matter of ...ert the following is a letter ...cal lawyer taken from the ...mber of the Canadian Law ...

...Sir I add just a word to the ...able article by Dr. Alward in your June issue, and the letter of Mr. Swanson in the October issue, as to the late Sir George Jessel.

I well remember the great Master of the Rolls. My early student days go back to the old practice before the Judicature Act, and the old "Bear Garden" of Staple Inn, and I well know Sir Horace Davey (afterwards Lord Davey) and Chitty (afterwards Chitty, L. J.) when they were counsel practising in the Rolls Court.

Sir George Jessel many times ...uld sit on the Bench, his right ...d supporting his chin and his ...ssistant as if he were asleep while ...udicial went on with his argument, ...t a ... he would sit up and blurt ... of question quite foreign to the ...gument—a question going ...to the root of the case, and ...had perforce to stop right ...d deal with the point, and ...is elaborate argument the re...rhaps, of hours of toil, became ..., for the keen insight of the ...had got at the very kernel of ...ter, and his question decided ...

...e many times seen cases stop...the middle and the defendant ...e trouble of putting in a ...t all by Sir George's quick ...into the crucial point. He ...ver read the pleadings be... He would read them ...look at authorities when ...ry (and his great memory ...ally made it unnecessary) and never cease to hear all that counsel had to say. I have seen him write a dozen letters during the hearing of a case, but his mind seemed to be in duplex, for he could hear the case without the two currents of thought interfering.

Reference is made to Sir George's wit. He was very fond of a judicial joke, and enjoyed one from the bar. I remember on one occasion when he was sitting in the Court of Appeal, counsel was moving for a new trial on the ground of the absence at the trial of a material witness. The witness had been subpoenaed but did not arrive in time, and his evidence was excluded.

"When I was at the Bar," said Sir George, 'I would have talked until the witness did come," and counsel replied, "Not if your Lordship had been on the Bench.' Sir George was so tickeld at the smart repartee, at which everybody laughed, that the new trial was granted.

I was in Court on another occasion when Sir George Jessel in his customary way, after stopping counsel in his opening, and after a few pertinent questions, dismissed the action. "But, my Lord," said counsel, "I have not even finished my opening." "There is no need to go any further with it," said the Judge; "you have no case anyhow." "I must protest against this summary dismissal, my Lord," said the counsel, to which his Lordship replied, "Mr. ——, the Court has heard your protest——Mr. Registrar, call the next case."

Of these reminiscences I was a personal witness, and I could tell you of many more, but these are so characteristic of the great Judge, that while the subject is under discussion I feel that it is not out of order to relate them.

It is also worthy of mention that Sir George Jessel's decisions were seldom reversed on appeal. He had the smallest average of reversals of any judge contemporary with him, and his dicta and decisions have even to-day more weight than those of other judges. It was too bad that he died so young—in the prime of life so to speak. If he had lived to an old age, like Vice-Chancellor Bacon, the law reports would have been the richer.

Coal Supply For Peterboro

Mr. J. H. Burnham Wires Outside Authorities for Information.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has the following to say:

"In view of the fact that it has been stated in the public press that some geniuses had secured for Peterborough more than its share of coal during the late distressful times as if any human being above the level of the brute would want more than his just share, especially during such times, and in view of the many complaints regarding same, I wired Ottawa, who wired Toronto, who wired me this morning. The messages are as follows:

December 27th.

The Fuel Controller, Ottawa.

"Has Peterborough had this year or last more than its share of coal?"

To which the following reply was made by Ottawa:

"We wired the Fuel Administration at Toronto to supply Mr. Burnham information."

The Commission at Ottawa accordingly wired on December 30.

"Peterborough received in the 1916-17 coal year, 31,000 tons; under shipment 6,000 tons. You received during the coal-year 1917,18, 36,000 tons; under shipment 1,000 tons. You are short in present coal year to date approximately 15,000 tons on allotment made by the Fuel Administration. But which will doubtless be made up before the end of the present coal year."

"It will thus be seen that Peterborough did not receive more than its schare," adds Mr. Burnham.

Madame Eugenie Lorenz, is a candidate for the position of Separate School trustee, running against Sam Genest, the president of the Separate School board, and a noted stormy petrel in Separate School matters in Ottawa.

Yesterday Mr. Loranz, the husband of the female candidate, affixed his name to the nomination papers of her opponent. Mr. Loranz, not content with this mark of disapproval of his wife's candidature, publicly went over to Mr. Genest, shook his hand heartily, and wished him "Unevietoire decisive' in his campaign against the wife of his bosom.

Endorsed by the War Veterans

EFFORTS TO RECOVER BODY HAVE BEEN ABANDONED FOR PRESENT

Efforts to recover the body of the late Mr. George Rutherford, who was drowned near the bridge above Lock No. 6, have been discontinued owing to the low temperature of the water. It has been proven that water must be a certain temperature before a human body will rise to the surface. It is not known whether the body has been anchored below the surface near the bridge or whether it has been towed by an under-current down the river. In either case it would be useless to attempt to recover the body before spring.

BURGLARS WERE TRAPPED ROBBING HOME OF BROKER

Citizens and Police Surround Residence of H. T. B. Jecquelin and Capture Burglars.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Two men, detected in the act of robbing the summer residence of Herbert T. E. Jacquelin, stock broker, in Hohokus, near Ridgwood, N.J., were shot by members of a posse of citizens and police who surrounded the house with shot guns and pistols, and later were removed to the Hackensack Hospital in an ambulance of the Ridgewood Women's Motor Corps.

About three o'clock in the morning Jacob E. Thompson, caretaker of Mr. Jacquelin's estate, was amused by the burglar alarm connecting his quarters with the residence 500 feet away. He peered through the window of his room and discovered that all the electric lights in the residence had been turned on, and two strangers were busily gathering together all the paintings, bric a brac and silverware in the house.

Mr. Jacquelin, member of the Stock Exchange and of the firm of Jacquelin & DeCoppet, stock brokers, No. 65 Broadway, this city, returned to his city home, No. 1,155 Park Ave., three weeks ago, and realizing that Thompson decided the men were burglars. Cautioning his son, LeRoy, seventeen years old, not to make any outcry, the caretaker telephoned to Robert B. Potts, Mr. Jacquelin's brother-in-law, who lives in Ridgewood, and requested him to notify the police. Then snatching up a shotgun Thompson and his son secluded themselves behind a tree overlooking the rear porch of the residence, and awaited the arrival of reinforcements. Mr. Pott's message to the police was received just as they were changing patrol shifts, and in a few minutes a dozen civilians and policemen, including Mr. Potts, in a commandeered automobile, were on their way to the scent of the burglary.

Awaited Departure.

The posse was scattered around the residence to await the departure of the burglars with their loot, as it was feared they might escape in the excitement of charging on them in the place. After a vigil of almost two hours the intruders were seen to step through a window to the rear porch, where one of them began to use a dark lantern, evidently to signal to confederates concealed in an automobile somewhere in the neighbourhood.

Thompson and Policeman Wagenheim crept up to the men and suddenly ordered them to throw up their hands, but instead of doing so the burglars bolted for the open window. Thompson discharged his shotgun at the man who held the lantern, who later said he is Harry J. Bonner, and the intruder fell to the floor of the porch with gunshot wounds in both legs. The second man, who gave the name of William Brauen, in the meantime had made his way into the house, but was halted by a bullet from the policeman's pistol, which lodged in his right thigh.

Both men then were overpowered and handcuffed, and Superintendent of Police Grove telephoned to J. C. Gessford, No. 66 Lincoln Avenue, Ridgewood, and asked him to [illegible] daughter, Sergeant Muriel [illegible] of the Women's Motor Corps [illegible] bulance was needed. GEORGIA COUNTY MAKES RECORD IN PEPPER RAISING

Griffin, Ga.—The pepper crop now being harvested in Spalding County will not only exceed the previous local and sectional record, but will easily give this county first place in the pepper producing counties in America, according to official and unofficial reports.

With a total of 320 acres, the yield of seed is averaging a little more than one hundred pounds to the acre. Two varieties are grown here, the long bolt shaped and pimento pepper. In bulk the production is about [illegible] bushels an acre.

This years crop will bring the producers a gross revenue of $4,[illegible] acre, or a total of $1,283,000 for 320 acres planted.

IN MEMORIAM.

Of the late Bertha Welbourn, died on December 29, 1917:

We loved her, yes we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And He had sweetly called her
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were opened,
A gentle voice said "Come,"
And with farewell unspoken
She calmly entered home.

"Is China Japan's Ireland?"

"Viscount Kato demands that the new Ministry proclaim its policy," says the Tokio Far East. "As leader of the Kensei-kai, the viscount is vitally interested in the new Cabinet. Mr. Hara, so far, has omitted to observe the traditional practice of Premiers of proclaiming the policy of the Government. Hitherto, said Viscount Kato, in a speech made in October, the policy of the Seiyu-kai has been one of compromise and expediency, and the discontinuance of such an equivalent attitude and the proclamation of the Government's 'platform' are absolutely necessary." By his enemies and neutrals, the editor adds, Mr. Hara has always been regarded as an opportunist; by his friends as a diplomat of a rare order. The Premier will probably not accept Viscount Kato's challenge.

The Far East believes the China question must be dealt with. He says:

"China is Japan's Ireland. Doubtless Chinese will not feel flattered at the comparison, but in the extraordinary fact that Japan's nearest neighbor is the source of much of the worry of Japanese statesmen, the comparison holds good. And the China 'question' will never be settled. The Hara Ministry has had a good 'send-off' from the press, and, in the historic words of Mr. Asquith, we can only wait and see. In the spirit of hoping for the best the Tokio Jiji has a most interesting note, in which it credits the new Ministry with being fully cognizant of the fact that Japan's advances of money and arms, hitherto, have only resulted in strengthening Pekin to the detriment of the south, and with being determined to prevent further misapplication of the assistance rendered. 'This,' says the Jiji, 'means the downfall of Premier Tuan and the other leaders of the military faction in the north'."

Boils His Berries.

"If you would avoid illness," says Professor Metchnikoff, "live as I have lived for fifteen years. See these bananas?" he added, holding up two ripe specimens. "I am taking them home to eat. Most people think that the thick rind makes this fruit fit to eat raw. Far from it. I steep them in boiling water after the rind has been removed to destroy the disease germs, and I never use a knife, fork or spoon that has not first been subjected to a microbe destroying flame. All my food must be cooked or baked. My salads are all scalded and drinking water filtered and boiled. Raw fruit and vegetables have no place at any table; even berries are subjected to a boiling water bath before they are served."

A Live Duke Abroad.

The late Washington Duke of Durham, N. C. who manufactured tobacco products so extensively for a quarter of a century, used to tell a quaint little story of himself. "The first time I traveled abroad," he said, "I visited Brussels and went to see all its sights. In one of the public buildings I found an ordinary looking armchair carefully roped off and with a chain across its front. Being tired with a hard morning's tramping, I stepped over the rope, let down the chain and, with a sigh of relief, dropped into the chair, the only one I had seen in the building. A guard in lace and buttons came to me at once.

'Is that chair?' he asked, pointing to the card on the back. (Wellington once occupied it.)

'And what of it?' I replied, coolly as a cucumber. 'I'm Duke of Durham alive at that!'

'This ties the matter.' Down to the floor cut that flunky, bending the bottom of my heavy American shoes with his handkerchief (real Europeanes). A way up English this cuts them every time. I had my rest in that solid old chair of the West here."—Wasp.

REV. DUNN FEELS IT HIS DUTY TO SPEAK

Wants Others to Benefit by His Experience—Gains Fifteen Pounds by Taking Tanlac.

Rev. J. H. Dunn, pastor of the Church of Christ at 2110 East Second Ave., Spokane, Wash., and residing at 724 West Sharp street, is still another in this high calling whose deep sense of gratitude and desire to help others will not permit him to remain silent regarding the wonderful benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac.

'Tanlac has not only relieved me of my ten years' suffering," said Rev. Dunn, recently, but it has built me up wonderfully, as I have gained fifteen pounds in a month's time by taking it. My stomach was in such a disordered condition that I could not eat without suffering great pain. My food felt like lead in my stomach and I would expel sour gas with almost every breath. Those who diagnosed my case told me I had cancer of the stomach, and my worry and physical suffering combined were extreme. My head ached constantly, and I continually lost in weight, strength and energy. I spent around three hundred dollars for medicine of various kinds, but got no benefit and my condition was indeed distressing.

"I finally bought Tanlac on the strength of high endorsements and my first bottle made a marked change in my feelings. So I bought another and then another, and now I am just like a new man. Before I took Tanlac I could not eat apples on account of the suffering the acid caused me, but now I can eat any number of them. In fact I can eat just anything now without the least discomfort afterwards. A medicine that will help anyone out of such a long term of suffering and set them right is certainly well worth recommending to the public. It gives me pleasure to do what I can for my fellow man, and as Tanlac has been of such great benefit to me, and not only to me, but also a number of my friends, I can conscientiously recommend it to everybody."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

BOY SHOOTS FATHER DEAD TO END ABUSE OF MOTHER

Pawtucket, R. I., Dec. 31.—Joseph Devlin, fifteen years old, shot and killed is fater Bernard following an argument between his father and mother.

According to the boy's story, as told to the police, he was in bed when his father came in and demanded money of his mother. An altercation followed, he said, during which the man grasped Mrs. Devlin by the throat and hurled him to the floor.

Young Joseph declared he could not see his mother abused longer and going to a bureau drawer, he got the revolver. Stepping into the kitchen, he stood directly in front of his father and fired five shots into the latter's body. Devlin died almost instantly, a bullet just over the heart causing death.

The lad was arrested and will be arraigned in the Tenth District Court on a charge of manslaughter.

Heart Fluttering Easily Corrected

Poor remedies have given Catarrh the reputation of being incurable. But it is curable, easily and quickly, if the right method is employed. Snuffing a powder or ointment up the nose won't cure Catarrh, neither will tablets, douching or stomach medicines cure. These treatments fail because they only affect local conditions, they do not remove the cause, which is germ life established in the lungs, bronchial tubes and nasal passages. Ordinary remedies do not reach these remote parts, but Catarrhozone does, for it is breathed through the inhaler, into every air cell in the lungs, into every air passage in the head and throat. No matter where the catarrh is Catarrhozone will reach it. It kills the germs, heals sore spots, clears the nose and throat instantly. Universally used; pleasant and clean; guaranteed to cure or the money refunded.

Don't be an object of aversion to everyone you meet—get Catarrhozone to-day and use it regularly; it will cure your Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Trouble, spitting and gagging. Large size lasts for two months, price $1.00; smaller size, 50c; sample size, 25c; at all dealers.

Former Premier Says Huns Must Have Raw Materials

Must Not Kill German Trade, Says Ex-Premier Ribot—Financial Situation of Entente Nations Must be Adjusted According to Ability.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Former Premier and Minister of Finance Alexandre Ribot said to the Associated Press that the financial situation of all the nations associated against the German coalition must, at the end of their effort, be adjusted with due regard for the efforts and sacrifices made by each, taking into account their respective resources and their ability to pay. He declared that in the accounting sacrifices and losses of man-power must figure along with outlays in money and damages sustained.

According to Resources.

Germany and her associates in the war, said M. Ribot, must pay according to their resources, in addition to their own war debts, a share of the expenses of the Entente coalition over and above the damages they have caused to the invaded countries. In view of the fact that France was the battlefield, and that she furnished by far the greatest effort and sustained the greatest losses, in proportion to her population, M. Ribot holds that she should have priority in the claims upon Germany for indemnity.

"That indemnity," he added, "must be considered. But it ought not to be so big as to place the German people in a sort of servitude for a prolonged period. That would eventually engender further strife, which is precisely what the Peace Congress will aim to make unnecessary and impossible.

Not Deprive of Trade

"If Germany is called upon to pay the immense total property loss chargeable to her, she will be able to do so only if she is not entirely deprived of foreign trade. We cannot take her markets from her while expecting her to find the money to meet the engagements we impose upon her. She must have raw materials to work with, and the possibility of exporting her products; otherwise her population will emigrate and her industries will languish. Instead of being able to contribute to the debts of her allies she will find difficulty in meeting her own liabilities."

Regarding the amount of the indemnity Germany may be able to pay, M. Ribot declined to make an estimate. "It ought to be limited however," he said, "to a sum that may be wiped out, principal and interest, in a limited number of years."

France's right to priority in war claims upon Germany, M. Ribot contended, rests upon the fact that while this war was not her war alone, her sacrifices were the greatest in proportion to her population and to her resources.

CLEANED OUT THE PLACE.

Alfonso's First Encounter With a Small Railway Lunch Room.

Xavier Paoli in McClure's tells of King Alfonso's first encounter with the lunch room of a small railway station. Alfonso had been out motoring and was ravenously hungry.

"Give us some lunch, please," said the king to the lady at the bar.

The refreshment room unfortunately was very meagerly supplied. When the two traveling companions had eaten up the sorry fare represented by a few eggs and sandwiches, which had probably been waiting for more than a month for a traveler to arrive, the king, whose appetite was far from being satisfied, called the barmaid, a fat and matronly Bearnaise with an upper lip adorned with a pair of thick mustachios.

"Have you nothing else to give us?" he asked.

"I have a pate de foie gras, but—it's very expensive," said the decent creature, who did not see a serious customer in this famished and dusty young man.

"Never mind; let's have it," said the king.

The woman brought her pate, which was none too fresh. But how great was her amazement when she saw the two travelers devour not only the liver, but the fat as well! The pot was emptied and scraped clean in the twinkling of an eye.

Pleased with her successful morning's trade and encouraged by the king's affluent good humor, the barmaid sat down at the royal table and began to tell the king her family affairs, questioning him with maternal solicitude. When at last the hour of departure struck they shook hands with each other warmly.

Some time afterward the king was passing through Dax by rail, and as the train steamed into the station he said to me:

"I have an acquaintance at Dax. I'll show her to you. She is charming."

The plump Bearnaise was there, more mustachioed than ever. I will not attempt to describe her comic bewilderment at recognizing her former customer in the person of the king.

A Great Railroad Project.

The greatest railroad project now on foot in this part of the world is that of a line to Hudson bay as a cheaper outlet for the wheat region of western Canada. The line will be about 500 miles long and largely through an unbroken wilderness. The surveys are now made, and it is definitely announced that the road will be built by the Canadian government. It will not be available through the whole year on account of conditions in Hudson bay. Although this great body of water is commonly regarded as a polar sea, no portion of it reaches the polar circle, and neither the bay nor the strait ever freezes completely over. Nevertheless the great ice floes, the fog, the storms, the intense cold and the magnetic conditions make navigation exceedingly difficult and dangerous through more than half of the year. The line will shorten by a thousand miles the distance between England and the Canadian wheatfields and reduces by two days the distance between England and Japan.—Youth's Companion.

TALES OF THE V.C.

Pte. Henry Dalziel, Australians

By LIEUT. J. P. LLOYD.

It was a hard task that faced a company of the Australian Imperial Force when on the morning of July 4th, 1918, they went up out of their trenches near Hamel Wood, east of Corpie, to take a strong redoubt, which from its shape is called in our trench maps "The Pear." It was a pear that needed gallant men to pluck it that day. The storm of the British gunfire had passed on and left the crop of barbed wire that grew in front of it still standing, thick and strong.

As the British troops marched steadily across No Man's Land toward their goal, their line was swept by squall after squall of machine gun fire, which beat them to the ground. Not a yard farther could they advance. That they took the pear at all that morning was due largely to the bravery of Pte. Henry Dalziel.

Private Dalziel was one of the only two survivors of a Lewis gun team. The others lay dead or wounded, strewn along that perilous path to Hamel Wood. When the advance was checked the pair of them brought up their gun and slowly but surely won the mastery over the German marksmen in the trench opposite.

Suddenly from a hidden emplacement on a flank, came the angry chatter of a machine gun firing across their front. Leaving his companion to deal with the rest of them, Dalziel jumped to his feet, and revolver in hand dashed across the open towards this new enemy. As he ran a bullet smashed one of his hands, but it would have taken more than that to stop him then. Most of the crew he shot dead and the few survivors surrendered.

With one obstacle the less in their way the company swept on and over Pear Redoubt, and with them went Private Dalziel, who in spite of his damaged hand managed to use a rifle to some purpose. He was one of the first men of the company to reach the last objective.

Later in the morning when his gun had run short of ammunition, Dalziel went back himself to company headquarters and enquired of an officer where the dump might be. The officer noticing his bandaged and bleeding hand asked him if it was not the aid post that he wanted. Dalziel smiled and went off in search of the dump. The shelling at that time was very heavy but Dalziel found the dump and brought back a case of ammunition to the front line. A second time he faced the peril of shell and bullet and returned with a much needed load of cartridges to feed his gun.

Although his wound was now extremely painful and he was very weak through loss of blood, he continued to fill magazines and serve his gun until he was again severely wounded, this time in the head.

In recommending him for the highest honor that a soldier can win, his commanding officer said of him,—

"Pte. Dalziel's magnificent bravery, and unflinching devotion to duty was an inspiring example to all his comrades. His unselfish devotion during a most critical time undoubtedly saved many lives, and turned what would have been a disastrous check into a splendid success."

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Shebo, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Boat-life in Siam.

The boat-life of Siam is extremely interesting. Business and pleasure, health and happiness, all centre in the river or its branches. A boat and a paddle are almost as natural and indispensable possessions to a Siamese as his arms or legs. He has no notion of traveling any distance except by boat, and the idea of living in a place inaccessible by water generally strikes him as absurd. Three weeks to come down stream with a full cargo, a week to dispose of it and indulge in the gaieties of the capital, four or five months to get back with the emptied boat, and the rest of the year for farm work at home—such is the program of many a Siamese family.—Family Herald.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Although Ruth Has Guests Brian Goes to "School."

CHAPTER LXXVI.

But Ruth's gay spirits soon made him forget Mollie and his own passive deception. She told him as much of her business matters as she tohught would interest him, then of her trip down on the train, repeating little incidents in so entertaining a manner that the time passed quickly. Passed, too, without as much as one thought straying Mollie-ward.

The tension so often present was not felt between them. In fact it had been a long time since they had passed so pleasant an evening — when alone. Yet subconsciously Ruth had been wondering how often Brian had seen Mollie, and if he had dined with her.

Here were two people in love with each other, but because of the foolish pride of one, they were actually drifting apart when the very thing which caused the prideful attitude should have brought them together. Ruth cared nothing for money for money's sake; it was only a means to make her and Brian more comfortable, and so happier. She considered his objection to her working foolish, and thought that soon he would look at it from her viewpoint.

The next evening as soon as they finished dinner, Brian put on his hat. In response to Ruth's query as to where he was going, he returned:

"Have you forgotten that I take my typewriting lesson to-night?"

"Oh, dear! how stupid of me! I had forgotten, and asked Mr. and Mrs. Roberts in to play cards. We'll have to play three-handed, that is all." she tried to hide her disappointment. Brian was doing something to increase his efficiency in his office to save money at the same time; she must not discourage him. It wasn't the money he would save that appealed to her; it was the idea that at last he was bestirring himself.

"Never mind, you will be home in time for the rarebit," she added brightly, "I'll not start it until nearly eleven;" she kissed him good-by and patted him on the shoulder in a motherly sort of a way. She hated to have him spend his evenings away from her; yet she would not say or do a thing to make him feel that she disapproved. Really she didn't! she was proud that he had thought of doing something, anything, no matter what it was.

Brian's optimistic attitude, without the effort required to make it come true, had worried Ruth. He was always "going to get there," but it was "some day," not NOW.

While they were so comfortable as regarded money (owing to her salary), Ruth cared little for what the financial returns might be for the present. What she wanted longed for, was his success; his recognition as a lawyer. In other words, she wanted to be proud of him. Often Clara Roberts would tell her of something Kenyon had done which, while it meant very little to her in a monetary way, meant a great deal in that it influenced faith in him as a rising young lawyer; and one who in time would be recognized as such.

"I am so proud of Kenyon," Clara would say, so making Ruth feel that she would like to say she was proud of Brian's work in the same direction.

So she greeted her guests brightly, explaining that Brian had commenced to study typing while she was away; and that he had agreed to give up two evenings a week to it.

"I taught myself," Kenyon Roberts laughed, "not because I particularly wanted to, but because I had no money to pay for tuition. But I do not use a machine properly, although I manage to turn out pretty good-looking letters and briefs. It is quite a saving, and unfortunately a young lawyer needs to save, and he also has plenty of time to pound out his own stuff. I regret I did not get a touch system, and think Brian is wise to go at it systematically. It won't take him long to learn, he is quick to grasp anything."

"Indeed he is!" Ruth answered proudly as she set up the card table. "I awfully hated to have him go out to-night, but I would not let him see it. He is so good about my work, and I have to be away so much."

There was a peculiar look upon Kenyon Roberts' face when Ruth spoke about Brian's goodness when she was obliged to be away, which she fortunately did not notice. He had seen Brian, unobserved by the latter, several times with his arms full of parcels, hurrying in the direction of Washington Square. And as Clara had told him that Mollie King, whom Brian used to know intimately, lived down there, he had put two and two together and made four without any trouble. But he was not a gossip, and had as yet not mentioned it even to Clara.

Brian came in about half-past ten. Ruth had just gone into the kitchen to make the rarebit, Clara accompanying her.

"What business school are you attending?" Kenyon Roberts asked.

"Oh, one down in the vicinity of the Square!" Brian answered, glad that Ruth was not in the room to hear the question.

An Ancient Game.

Dice exactly resembling those of the present day have been recovered from the ancient Egyptian tombs and also from the more recent times of Graeco-Latin civilization. Dice similar to ours were found at Herculaneum, and the destruction which overwhelmed Pompeii also destroyed a dicing party at their amusement. Eighteen hundred years after the dice were found in their bony hands and the game yet unsettled.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Early Stages of Grip.

At the beginning of an attack of grip, when it is manifested only by headache and painful lassitude and the commencement of a cold in the head, it is advantageous to inhale eau de cologne profoundly four or five times a day. Pour the eau de cologne on a handkerchief and inhale by the nose and mouth. This method prevents the development of the cold and ought to be continued for three days. Should the symptoms persist after this period this method should be given up and another adopted.

In order to diminish the cold in the head, every three hours a pinch of the following powder should be taken like snuff: Boracic acid, fifteen grams; cocaine hydrochlorate, twenty-five centigrams; menthol, thirty centigrams; salol, five grams.

Or, again, fifteen drops of the following liquid should be taken as a gargle in half a glass of water at least three times and, if possible, four times a day: Thymol, three grams; tincture of eucalyptus, twenty grams; alcohol at 90 degrees, 100 grams.

Or the vapor of a teaspoonful of the following mixture: Menthol, three grams; alcohol at 80 degrees, sixty grams, in a cup of hot water. It should be inhaled by the nostrils every two or three

SOLDIERS ON THE LAND.

Fighting Men May Become Practical Farmers.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior, has announced the plans under the land settlement for soldiers scheme under which returned soldiers without agricultural experience will be given an opportunity to qualify to go upon the land. The announcement is as follows:

"Adequate facilities are being provided by the Soldiers' Settlement Board to enable men desirous of taking up land under the Soldier Settlement Act to obtain the experience and qualifications necessary, in order to utilize the demobilization period, which will extend over many months, a number of training farms will be established in Great Britain. Preliminary steps have already been taken to this end by the board in conjunction with the Canadian Department of Militia and the Khaki University. The farms will be organized as schools of instruction in the essentials of farming under Canadian conditions. They will provide an intensive course of about three months' duration, the staffs being selected from service men who were formerly connected with agricultural teaching.

"A course of work has been prepared at the request of the board by the Commissioner of Agricultural Instruction, Mr. W. J. Black, for use both in Canada and Great Britain. It bears little similarity to the regular agricultural college course, being designed to teach inexperienced men the every-day operations of the farm rather than the scientific principle underlying agriculture. It is proposed by this means to carry the men along from a point where they know nothing of farming to a point where they will have a sufficient working knowledge to become self-supporting, virtually from the time they go upon the land. The following synopsis indicates the scope of the course:

"Instructions in the handling of horses in association with vehicles and the implements of tillage; in the construction and of the common farm implements and in the operation of gas engines; instruction in carpentering, blacksmithing and general repair work, and in the planning and construction of buildings. Instructions in farm management and the importance of good business methods in relation to successful farming. Instruction in the preparation of the soil and the growing and harvesting of crops, instruction in the selection, care, feeding and management of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry.

"Inexperienced men returning at once to Canada will be offered two plans under which to qualify, the choice being optional. They may either gain experience by working with successful farmers, or they may take the course outlined above at an agricultural college or similar institution in Canada. Arrangements to this end are now being concluded at two institutions, and it is the expectation that this course will be offered in many of the provinces by the beginning of the new year.

"While in farming the course outlined above, practically utility has been made the essential feature, it is recognized that the best school is the well-managed farm, provided the farmer himself is sympathetically disposed. So much depends on this aspect of the matter that a very careful selection will be made among the progressive farmers of the country who are prepared to render public-spirited service in this connection.

"It is the intention to inaugurate a follow-up scheme with the co-operation of provincial agricultural departments, whereby the men will be advised and instructed after they go upon the land. This plan contemplates the provision of local short courses dealing with the more advanced phases of instruction, similar to those now provided for farmers and farmers' sons by the local representatives of agricultural departments and by other extension services.

"Attention is called to the fact that the program outlined relates only to those inexperienced in farming. Experienced men who satisfy the Soldier Board that they possess a reasonable fitness for farm life, and the other qualification called for by the Act, will be permitted to go upon the land without further instruction."

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for five times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

AS STRANGE AS FICTION.

True Story of a Returned Soldier's Experience.

A little more than ten years ago an Englishman, deep in the sixties, won great renown by going to a hospital.

His illness, though severe, was ordinary enough. The use he made of his convalescence distinguished him. Propped up in bed William De Morgan wrote his first novel. When he was entirely recovered, he wrote another, which was destined to carry on his fame around the reading world.

The book tol the story of an engineer returned to London after many adventures. There a mishap in the tube caused him to lose his memory. In the dazed state he lived a new life. By chance he met his former wife, fell in love with her and married her again.

Strange as was De Morgan's tale —critics said only he could make it convincing—London itself has duplicated it from life.

John Arthur Lewis, a returned soldier, was lately hauled into court [illegible] for [illegible] collected for his employer. His innocence was established. On the collecting trip he was struck by a van and injured. Part of his memory went. He wandered to England, arrived penniless at his home and was introduced by a friend to a young woman, said to be his wife.

He refused to accept his own name, one night there was a terrific explosion of shells and bombs, and the shock caused a complete restoration of his memory. He came back to the unit and resumed his day's work on August [illegible].

History has many parallels to this observation. Truth is stranger than fiction. Romance writing. Real life probably always has been. Whether it is stranger than fiction or not, it is certainly more interesting. Tennyson [illegible] Progress

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Miss Tiverton's Tea Basket

That Brought Quick Results.

By ALICIA SPRAGUE.

Miss Tiverton always poured tea at precisely 5 o'clock in the afternoon for a select circle of feminine friends. They drank tea at that early hour that those who were married might get home in time to prepare 6 o'clock dinners for their husbands and that those who were single might be safely passed before the early darkness of the winter evenings.

Miss Tiverton sometimes wished that day might stay later, for it was always a long, lonely stretch between their going and bedtime.

Sometimes Lavinia Greer stayed with her, and on those occasions Lavinia's brother Richard would call at 6. And these were the social oases in Miss Tiverton's desert of dreary evenings.

She always made more tea for Richard and brought out her little sponge cakes. Richard liked the little cakes, and he liked Miss Tiverton's dainty ways, her delicate pink and white prettiness and her pale rose colored house gowns.

Lavinia thought Miss Tiverton very foolish to wear muslin all winter. "Think of the washing!" she said as she and Richard walked home one evening. "And Letitia Tiverton is as poor as Job's turkey."

"She surrounds herself," said Richard musingly, "with an atmosphere of beauty."

Lavinia sniffed. She hated to have her brother say nice things about Letitia Tiverton. Lavinia had kept her brother's house for many years, and it had always been her great duty to nip sentimental affairs in the bud.

Therefore it was many weeks after that ominous remark of Richard's before she again spent an evening with Letitia. She took her work over in the mornings or went to the little tea drinkings, but she did not allow her brother to darken the doors of the little gray cottage.

One day Richard spoke of it mildly. "We haven't been to Miss Tiverton's for a long time," he said—"not, I think, for four weeks tomorrow."

Lavinia gave him a sharp glance. "How did you happen to remember the date?" she asked acidly.

Richard looked at her quizzically over his glasses. "I noted the date in my diary," he said. "I always write down the events of the day, Lavinia." He did not tell her that he had added after the formal statement, "Brought Lavinia home from Miss T.'s," the further comment, "Miss T. looked like a rose in her pink gown."

A week later he urged Lavinia to call. "She will think something is the matter," he said.

Lavinia shrugged her shoulders. "I have been there in the daytime," she said. "I don't see what more she can expect."

Richard thought for a moment. "She has told us that her evenings are lonely," he reminded his sister.

"Humph!" said Lavinia. "I don't know that we are called on to put ourselves out to go there these freezing cold nights."

Richard returned to his book, but after a reasonably judicious interval he looked up to say, "I saw a very pretty tea basket in a shop this morning, Lavinia, padded inside to keep the tea warm"—

"Who wants a thing like that?" Lavinia questioned scornfully. "I always make coffee, Richard."

Richard said nothing more. He loved tea, but Lavinia preferred coffee, and there you were. Yet the next morning he sauntered to the flaming Japanese bazaar, where were displayed native wares to tempt the tourists who were making the old fashioned southern village a halfway stopping place on their way to the tropics.

The tea basket was a quaint affair of oriental weaving, with a gay pink satin lining and a green and pink cord and tassel about the handle. The pink made Richard think of Miss Tiverton. With a defiant look, he went in and bought the basket and ordered it sent to her.

His heart failed him, however, when the dark skinned salesman asked him for a card to put with the gift.

"Just send it without," he said hastily. Visions of Miss Lavinia's wrath should she know of his purchase came to him oppressively.

The mysterious basket was to little Letitia Tiverton a source of infinite delightful speculation. She displayed it to her afternoon circle, the rose colored lining, the pink cord and tassel, the fine basketry.

"And I can't imagine who sent me such a beautiful thing," she ended radiantly when all had seen it.

At the first glance Lavinia Greer's eyes had hardened. Of all those women she only suspected where that basket had come from. Richard had sent it. This looked seriously like the beginning of a romance that would be most inconvenient to Miss Lavinia.

On the way home she thought over a plan. It was simple. At dinner she told Richard, "Letitia Tiverton was too silly about a basket that some one sent to her."

Richard started, and his face flushed. He realized that Lavinia had put two and two together and had guessed that it was he who had sent the tea basket to Miss Tiverton.

"I wish you had seen her," Lavinia pursued. "I wish you had heard her giggle and boast that you sent it."

Richard turned questioning eyes upon her. "But she did not know that I had sent it," he said. "There was no card, Lavinia."

Lavinia went on hurriedly. "Well, then, she guessed, for she bragged of it. Richard—it—it—it was disgusting." Miss Lavinia's face was a dull red. She did not like what she was doing now that she was doing it. But she was desperate.

"I can't imagine"—Richard's tone was incisive—"I can't imagine, Lavinia, a woman of Miss Tiverton's delicacy doing a thing like that."

Lavinia tossed her head. "You don't know much about women, Richard," she retorted.

Richard walked abroad that night consumed by angry doubts. Surely Lavinia would not lie. Surely Miss Tiverton would not brag. His gold headed cane tapped the pavement irresolutely. Then suddenly he strode down the street, irresolute no longer.

Miss Letitia, alone and a little wistful in her small gray cottage, heard the tap of the cane as she had heard it every night when Richard went forth for his evening walk.

Behind her curtains she had watched him regularly and had admired the straightness of him, the briskness of his walk, the brown waves of hair which in defiance of modern fashion he wore so long that it almost touched his coat collar.

It had never dawned on Miss Tiverton that such a great being as Lavinia's brother could look upon her and find her lovely. In her humility she had not dreamed that the basket was an offering from such a source.

She had thought the women of her circle might have clubbed together to bestow on her this gift of friendship, and her effusiveness at the afternoon gathering had been due to her gratitude.

The tap of the gold headed cane sounded right in front of her gate, stopped and began again on the stone walk that led to the front door.

Then the bell rang. Miss Tiverton answered it. Richard stepped over her threshold—for the first time without his sister Lavinia.

"I came," he said when he was seated, "to ask a question, a delicate question, Miss Tiverton. Who sent you your tea basket?"

Miss Letitia's clear eyes met his frankly. "Oh, did Lavinia tell you that one was sent me?" she asked. "It's such a beauty!" And she brought it to him, displaying the rose lining and the tassels.

Richard drew a long breath of relief. The doubts that Lavinia had planted fled. There was nothing of deceit in that childlike soul, in that flower-like face.

"Miss Letitia," he said, with his hand on the basket, "haven't you guessed who sent it?"

Her puzzled glance met his. "No," she murmured.

"I—I sent it," he confessed, "because it reminded me of you—the rose color and the pink—like your pretty gown, your pretty self, a rose of a woman."

Miss Letitia stood half poised for flight. "Oh!" she said breathlessly, and her eyes were like stars. "Oh, Mr. Greer!"

Richard grew bolder. "I sent it because I love you, Letitia. There is no happiness that could exceed that of winning you for my wife."

It came upon little Letitia almost too suddenly, that vision of happiness, and she swayed toward him, looking just then more like a lily than a rose, and the tea basket dropped from her nerveless hand.

Richard caught it deftly as he drew her to him. "You will pour tea for me, won't you," he demanded, trying to bring the color back to her cheeks, "for the rest of my days, Letitia? Lavinia gives me coffee—but, then, oh, bang Lavinia! Will you marry me, sweetheart?"

And Miss Letitia, after a startled "Oh, Richard!" buried her face against his coat and said "Yes."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Poisonous Stings.

Stings and bites of insects are extremely dangerous at all times and especially when the system is not in a condition to resist the poison injected.

In many insects the nature of the poison has not been ascertained, while in most of them it is of an acid, irritant nature; in others it may contain a powerful cardiac sedative and depressant, and in still others organisms in pure or mixed cultures may be introduced with the sting or bite. Apart from the natural poison used by insects it should not be forgotten that flies and other insects that live on carrion may easily carry contagion and inoculate the persons whom they bite or sting.

In the case of ordinary bites and stings the chemical antidote is an alkaline solution, such as a strong solution of bicarbonate of soda or potash, which counteracts the acid of the sting. Suction at the wound in all these varieties of stings and bites will draw out some of the poison, and until some antitoxin treatment can be found which will prove antidote to the bacterial poison introduced little can be done beyond a stimulating and supporting treatment with attention to symptoms.

Got Judge's Lunch.

Having a busy court day, Judge Crawford, of Brantford, ordered a tasty luncheon sent to his chambers recently. The delivery waiter was obliged to pass the prisoners' cage en route, and was hailed by one of the inmates with, "Say, bring that here—it's for me." The unsuspecting waiter did so, and the judge raged over the loss of a luncheon not recoverable by any process of law.

A FAM... MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

Flying at Night.

Before leaving on a long-distance night raid the airmen prepare their maps with great care, marking on them the detailed course from the airdrome to their objective.

By means of a small balloon, whose speed direction and height is recorded by an instrument on the ground, the force and direction of the wind at different altitudes is discovered, and the compass course, allowing for winddrift, is marked beside the course on the map. The compass course for the return journey is also marked. The speed of the machine is calculated, and on the line of the course a series of points is marked, showing where the machine should be every ten minutes, thus enabling the airman to check his progress and to know his approximate position if he gets lost.

He watches the country below for landmarks. He sees by his map that a river should appear in a few minutes. His watch shows that he has been flying 40 minutes, and near the 40-minute mark on his map is a twisted pale blue line. He looks ahead and sees in the moonlight a silver streak and he knows he is making good time. When he is over the river he compares its outline with his map, and sees that he is crossing it at the right place.

The Cash Register Idea.

A man named Jacob Ritty, a merchant of Dayton, Ohio, took a vacation trip to Europe. While crossing on the steamer he sauntered one day into the engine room and noticed a device that mechanically recorded the number of revolutions of the propeller shaft. Immediately came the idea to the mind of Mr. Ritty: "Why not invent a machine that would record each coin put into the cash drawer?" When he returned home, he invented the first "cash register." Mr. John H. Patterson was keeping a grocery store in a small town 80 miles from Dayton. He heard of the Ritty contrivance, sent an order for one, and that order was the inventor's first order. The machine was crude, but it interested Mr. Patterson and he saw how it could be perfected. "If it's good for my store," he argued, "why not for all stores?" Forthwith he went to Dayton, bought the Ritty interest out, and started the National Cash Register Co., which has now 1,800,000 machines and every year turns out more than 60,000 "cash registers."

...ED SOLDIERS

DIRE... ROBINSON TELLS AB... THIS WORK.

In the Dominion 2,500 Injured Fighters Have Already Been Restored to Remunerative Occupations—Several Notable Instances Given of Men Who Have Been Given a New Lease of Aviation Life.

AMONG all the soldiers now being taken care of by the Invalided Soldiers' Commission of Canada — and there are 2,600 of them—the number of "incurables" who are too badly disabled to be capable of earning their living at some form of occupation is less than one hundred! Such is the testimony of F. Gerald Robinson, director of the work.

"The general principles of this work," says Mr. Robinson, "are pretty well known now. Much has been written and printed of them, but of the specific accomplishments and the benefit that has been brought to individuals we have seen little. While, of course, we are naturally proud of the remarkable cases that we cite, still it must be remembered that they are remarkable only in degree. In quality they are typical of the thousands who are passing through our hands.

"Whereas the blind are for the most part optimistic in their outlook upon life, it is a well known fact that deafness as a rule brings with it terrible depression, much worse than that to which the blind are liable. In spite of this there is the case of Pte. William Lewis, of the Forestry Battalion, who received injuries to his hearing in a mine explosion seven years previous to enlistment. Shell shock at the front completely destroyed his hearing. In April he was sent to the Belleville Institute for the Deaf. After a few days he became discouraged and ran away, turning up at Kingston in a despairing state of mind. The vocational officer induced him to return to Belleville and he completed a three weeks' course there in lip reading. When Prof. Baker next saw him the teacher asked him to stand behind the man and blow a policeman's whistle. There was not a sign of ability to hear. The professor then faced the man and carried on a long conversation with him, not repeating more than two sentences. The man followed the movements of his lips with the greatest facility and the conversation was a perfectly normal one. The teacher then read a story from a book, walking about the room as she did so. Lewis was able at the close of the reading to repeat the gist of the whole story. After another three weeks he visited Toronto, Hamilton, and Niagara Falls, and then traveled by himself home to Calgary.

"The man who loses a leg or an arm naturally feels that he will be hard put to it to support himself, but such is seldom the case. An interesting example is that of Pte. Lambert, who was a Methodist circuit preacher in Alberta. When the war came he put on khaki and did his bit with the rest. He lost his leg before he came out of it and was fitted with one at the Government limb factory. No more hiking—even with the best of artificial legs—not for a bit anyway, so he took a course in motor mechanics, and now he's back on the circuit speeding the Gospel with gasoline.

"For the power of sheer persistence there is nothing to equal the case of Pte. A. T. Jackson, who was badly injured in France by a gasoline explosion. His left arm from knuckles to biceps was so badly burned that the doctors were very anxious to amputate it. He could not even turn his arm for dressing. Gradually, however, he got into the habit of standing along the walls and 'creeping' with his injured hand. The boys in the ward thought he was trying to play crazy and thus get a speedy discharge and pension, but Jackson persisted until he could raise the arm above his head. He started belt-weaving work and has more orders than he can fill. The doctors were afraid that the skin of his arm would shrink and cut off the nerve life and blood supply, but the exercise he persisted in taking of his own initiative has saved the member. He is now taking a course in electrical work.

"A teamster who was earning $50 a month now earns $5.50 a day as a toolmaker. When he returned from the front in October, 1916, he was unable to read or write, so he attended vocational classes during hospital treatment, followed by a retraining course as machinist. A carpenter suffered a wound in the right hand, and will never have the use of his fingers again. He learned to write with the left hand, passed the civil service examination, and is now employed in the British Columbia Customs Department at $1,000 a year. A former commercial traveler, disabled for his employment, is now earning $170 a month as a manual training teacher. A laborer who was incapacitated by a gunshot wound in the ankle is now a telegrapher for the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. at $140 a month."

The Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment has for its work all Governmental activities in behalf of discharged soldiers, with the exception of land settlement. Pensions, post-discharge medical care, artificial limbs, industrial retraining and, indirectly, employment come within its purview. The Invalided Soldiers' Commission, which is part of this department, comes into contact with the returned soldiers as soon as they reach Canada, and while they are still in the military hospitals conducted by the Army Medical Corps. A staff of interviewers, all returned men themselves, ascertain essential facts about the physical conditions and industrial experience of every returned man at the earliest possible moment after disembarkation on this side of the Atlantic. These facts are analyzed by the experts in the various territorial units, corresponding roughly to the military districts, with a view to offering the wounded man such assistance as he may require. The information obtained includes the man's educational [illegible] aptitudes, etc.

reference for future occupation, personal characteristics, disposition, conduct on service, and conduct in the convalescent home. The medical officer makes a complete report on his physical condition, especially with regard to the effect it may have on his future occupation.

The first object in handling the returned man is to prevent him at any time from brooding over his condition, so what is called occupational therapy is used the moment the patient can do any kind of work whatsoever. Even those confined to beds or to their wards are offered opportunity to learn some useful or interesting occupation during their period of hospital treatment. This work has a double value; the occupation is a definite aid to recovery, while the instruction almost invariably has its value in after life. A remarkable case is that of the man who had been bedridden for two years and had all the appearance of being a hopeless incurable or paralytic. As one of the women aids found him disconsolate, she cajoled him into trying to weave a basket which she at the time was working upon herself. This through graded steps, led to more profitable labor, until now the man can walk upon his own feet and earn his own living. This is an example of how a woman with tact and sympathy can help a man to overcome a disability which he thinks insuperable.

After the vocational and medical officers have submitted their reports the man is brought before a disabled soldiers' training board for a consultation upon the kind of training which would be most suitable. The man's own previous experience is discussed, with a view to finding some kindred trade where his early training will stand him in good stead. His inclinations and aptitudes are consulted, because a man is not likely to make good in a calling which he does not like. Very few decisions have ever had to be reversed, and 71 per cent. of those who have taken re-educational courses have been located by follow up officials as successfully engaged in the occupations for which they were trained. The failures have not numbered 5 per cent.

An industrial survey was made of the possibilities for crippled men. It was found that there are exceedingly few occupations which cannot be engaged in by men with some form of disability. Injured feet make no difference to the man who is seated at his work all day. Many fine operations in skilled labor or professions can be performed by those whose injuries have deprived them of strength of neck and shoulders. Many strenuous kinds of work can be done by men with finger and hand disabilities. Blinded men make good masseurs, private telephone operators or dictaphone stenographers. In fact, the commission has up to the present time listed 200 occupations.

For the actual training of the man existing technical schools and university engineering and agricultural departments have been largely utilized, although in some places vocational schools have been especially equipped. Most of the training, however, is given in industries. In many cases, before a man can satisfactorily take his place at the factory bench, he requires to have some preliminary training in the use of certain tools, the operation of machines or possibly in some kind of "book learning," which he has not previously had.

Novel Indian Timepiece.

To ascertain the time at night the Apache Indians employed a gourd on which the stars of the heavens were marked. As the constellation rose in the sky the Indian referred to his gourd and found out the hour. By turning the gourd around he could tell the order in which the constellation might be expected to appear.

The hill people of Assam reckon time and distance by the number of quids of betel nut chewed. It will be remembered how, according to Washington Irving, the Dutch colonial assembly was invariably dismissed at the last puff of the third pipe of tobacco of Gov. Wouter Van Twiller.

A Montagnis Indian of Canada will set up a tall stick in the snow when traveling ahead of his friends who are to follow. He marks with his foot the line of shadow cast, and by the change in the angle of the shadow the oncoming party can tell on arriving at the spot, about how far ahead the leader is.

Brown Bears Increasing.

Under Government protection the brown bear has so increased in numbers in Alaska that cattle and sheep are safe only in strong buildings. The bears demolish fences and they swim the channels in the smaller islands where settlers have sent cattle and sheep in the belief that they would be safe. The bear, too, is a great destroyer of salmon. It is so fastidious that it will eat only the salmon cheeks, and will consume one-third of its weight in this delicacy every day.

Victoria Cross for Indian Sniper.

Stephen Toney, a Nova Scotia Indian who has but recently returned home from the western zone of war, has been recommended for the Victoria Cross. To have individually disposed of 71 German snipers is his proud record as a member of the 193rd Nova Scotian Battalion.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

DON'T SCOLD, MOTHER! THE CROSS CHILD IS BILIOUS, FEVERISH

LOOK AT TONGUE! IF COATED, CLEAN LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if the tongue is quoted; this is a sure sign its little stomach and liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, does not eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

THE EPISODE IN ROOM 222.

A Theory the Hotel Manager Refused to Discuss.

By ARNOLD BENNETT.

The date was the 5th of November. It was a Friday, and yet there are people who affect to believe that Friday is not a day singled out from its six companions for mystery, strangeness and disaster. The number of the room was 222. The hotel I shall call by the name of the Grand Junction Terminus hotel.

The Grand Junction is full every night in the week except Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Every commercial traveler knows that, except on these nights, if he wishes to secure a room he must write or telegraph for it in advance. And there are 400 bedrooms.

It was somewhat late in the evening when I arrived in L. On the spur of the moment I decided to stay at the Grand Junction if there was space for me. It is thus that fate works.

I walked into the hall, followed by a platform porter with my bag. The place seemed just as usual, the perfection of the commonplace, the businesslike and the unspiritual.

"Have you a room?" I asked the young lady in black whose yellow hair shone gayly at the office window under the electric light.

She glanced at the ledgers in the impassive and detached manner which hotel young ladies with yellow hair invariably affect and ejaculated:

"No. 221."

"Pity you couldn't make it all twos," I ventured, with timid jocularity. How could I guess the import of what I was saying?

She smiled very slightly with a distant condescension. "Name?" she demanded.

"Edge."

In another moment I was in the elevator.

No. 221 was the last door but one at the end of the eastern corridor of the fourth floor. It proved to be a double bedded room, large, exquisitely ugly, but perfectly appointed in all matters of comfort. In short, it was characteristic of the hotel. I knew that every bedroom in that corridor presented exactly the same aspect. One instinctively felt the impossibility of anything weird, anything bizarre, anything terrible, entering the precincts of an abode so solid, cheerful, orderly and middle class.

It will be well for me to relate all that I did that evening. I went down to the billiard room and played a hundred up with the marker. To show that my nerves were at least as steady as usual that night I may mention that, although the marker gave me fifty and beat me, I made a break of twenty odd which won his generous approval. The game concluded, I went into the hall and asked the porter if there were any telegrams for me. There were not. I noticed that the porter—it was the night porter, and he had just come on duty—seemed to have a peculiarly honest and attractive face. Wishing him good night, I retired to bed.

At 3 o'clock I awoke, not with a start, but rather gradually. I know it was exactly 3 o'clock because the striking of a notoriously noisy church clock in the neighborhood was the first thing I heard. But the clock had not awakened me. I felt sure that something else, something far more sinister than a church clock, had been the origin of disturbance.

I listened. Then I heard it again. It was the sound of a groan in the next room.

"Some one indisposed either in body or mind," I thought lightly, and I tried to go to sleep again. But I could not sleep. [illegible] more [illegible] I jumped out of bed and turned on the light.

"That man, whoever he is, is dying." The idea, as it were, sprang at my throat. "Only a man who saw Death by his side and trembled before the apparition could groan like that."

I put on some clothes and went into the corridor. It seemed to stretch away into illimitable distance, and far off a solitary electric light glimmered. My end was a haunt of gloomy shadows, except where the open door allowed the light from my bedroom to illuminate the long, monotonous pattern of the carpet.

I proceeded to the door next my own—the door of No. 222—and put my ear against the panel. The sound of groans was now much more distinct and more terrifying. I called. No answer. "What's the matter?" I inquired. No answer. Then I tried to open the door, but it was fast.

"Yes," I said to myself, "either he's dying or he's committed a murder and is feeling sorry for it. I must fetch the night porter."

I was compelled to find my way along endless corridors and down flights of stairs apparently innumerable. Here and there an electric light sought with its yellow eye to pierce the gloom. At length I reached the hall.

"There's a man either dying or very ill in No. 222," I said to the night porter.

"Is that so, sir?" he replied.

"Yes," I insisted. "I think he's dying. Hadn't you better do something?"

"If you think he's dying, sir, I'll call up the manager, Mr. Thom."

"Do," I said.

The manager slept on the first floor, and he soon appeared, a youngish man in a terra cotta dressing gown, his eyes full of sleep, yet alert and anxious to do his duty. We all three continued our progress to the fourth floor. Arrived in front of No. 222, we listened intently, but we could only hear a faint occasional groan.

"He's nearly dead," I said. The manager called aloud, but there was no answer. Then he vainly tried to open the door. The night porter departed and returned with a stout pair of steel tongs. With these and the natural ingenuity peculiar to hotel porters he forced open the door, and we entered No. 222.

A stout, middle aged man lay on the bed fully dressed in black. On the floor near the bed was a silk hat. As we approached the great body seemed to flutter, and then it lay profoundly and terribly still. The manager put his hand on the man's head and held the glass of his watch to the man's parted lips.

"He is dead," said the manager.

"H'm!" I said.

"I'm sorry you've been put to any inconvenience," said the manager, "and I'm much obliged to you."

The cold but polite tone was a request to me to re-enter my own chamber and leave the corpse to the manager and the night porter. I obeyed.

* * * * * * *

"What about that man?" I asked the hall porter early the next, or, rather, the same, morning. I had not slept a wink since 3 o'clock, nor had I heard a sound in the corridor.

"What man, sir?" the porter said.

"You know," I returned rather angrily—"the man who died in the night—No. 222."

"I assure you, sir," he said, "I haven't the least notion what you mean."

Yet his face seemed as honest and open as ever.

I inquired at the office for the manager and after some difficulty saw him in his private office.

"I thought I'd just see about that man," I began.

"What man?" the manager asked exactly as the porter had asked.

"Look here," I said, as I was now really annoyed, "it's all very well giving instructions to the hall porter, and I can quite understand you want the thing kept as quiet as possible, but I saw the corpse and was of some assistance to you"—

"Excuse me," said the manager. "Either you or I must be completely mad."

"Do you mean to say," I remarked, with frosty sarcasm, "that you didn't enter room 222 with me this morning at 3 and find a dead man there?"

"I mean to say just that," he answered.

"Well"— I got no further. I paid my bill and left, but before leaving I went and carefully examined the door of No. 222. The door plainly showed marks of some iron instrument.

"Here," I said to the porter as I departed. "Accept this half crown from me. I admire you."

* * * * * * *

In the course of my subsequent travels I once more found myself late one night at the Grand Junction Terminus hotel.

"Mr. Edge," said the night porter, "I've been looking out for you for weeks and weeks. The manager's compliments, and he would like to see you in his room."

Again I saw the youngish, alert manager.

"Mr. Edge," he began at once, "it is probable that I owe you an apology. At any rate, I think it right to inform you that on the night of the 5th of November, the year before last, exactly twelve months before your last visit here, a stout man died in room No. 222 at 3 a. m. I forgot the circumstance when you last came to see me in this room."

"It seems queer," I said coldly, "that you should have forgotten such a circumstance."

"The fact is," he replied, "I was not the manager at that time. My predecessor died two days after the discovery of the corpse in room 222."

"And the night porter—is he, too, a new man?"

"Yes," said the manager. "The porter who, with the late manager, found the corpse in room 222 is now in the Hanwell Lunatic asylum."

"Then you think," I said, "that I was the victim of a hallucination on my previous visit here?"

"On these matters," said the manager, "I prefer to think nothing."

The Ross Rifle in the Courts

ONE of the most famous suits in the history of Canada will be that which is just been started by Sir Charles Ross, who has brought against the Dominion Government to recover $18,897,724, as damages in connection with the breaking of contract for the purchase of the Ross Rifle. The amount named is a return to ordinary Canadians. It indicates how the men who make supplies for war expect to prosper financially when a great war does break out. It is a tidy little income for any firm to expect in four years, especially when the mass of the people kind are suffering from the effects of war. The law suit will be interesting because the man in the street feels that it affects him, and neither party can put the entire blame on its opponents.

There is a fair amount of feeling opinion that under the sweeping conditions of the War Measures Act the Government could have taken the beaver off the Canadian flag and changed its colors to a pale pink, and incidentally have made the British North America Act look like a village bylaw. But evidently some fair legal talent think it harder to break Sir Ross claim on Canada than to perform any or all of the aforementioned chores.

And it may be a sad corollary to the war that Canada has to pay the additional war debt for refusing further to arm her sons with a weapon in which they had lost all confidence and which they claimed was a good shooting weapon, save and except when shooting was most necessary to save their lives.

It was Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government that, in 1904, contracted to buy rifles henceforth and forever from the factory of Sir Charles Ross. It was a contract that had a beginning but no end. It was a contract that provided that even in case of rebellion or should the Government require more rifles than the Ross factory could produce, it should give the factory six months' notice before buying elsewhere.

What does the ordinary Canadian say about the Ross rifle, its buyers and its makers? You'll remember how early in the war the soldiers started throwing them away and creeping out into No Man's Land to pick up stray Lee-Enfields. You'll remember the rows in Parliament, how manfully the Borden Government fought to cry down complaints and live up to the contract which Sir Wilfrid Laurier had bequeathed them. Why Hon. Robt. Rogers once threatened to throw into the tower some critic of the famous weapon and was possibly only deterred from doing so by Hon. William Pugsley's timely reminder that the towers of the old museum in which Parliament was then sitting had been torn down. Also Hon. Arthur Meighen would have marched a regiment down Sparks street and suppressed a certain newspaper that dared to publish reports concerning the popularity and other qualities or lack of qualities of the weapon.

But the time came when no further excuses would go. The soldiers demanded to be armed with a rifle that would shoot when it was wanted to shoot, and not when it blamed well pleased. The cry from the trenches was loud and insistent and it was finding echoes at home that no Government could afford to disregard. Sir Sam Hughes still insisted that the boys in France were sleeping on their Ross rifles for fear the other chaps would steal them, but the people and the Government knew different. So the day came when the Laurier contract was broken, the factory was expropriated and the boys at the front were given a chance for their lives.

Now Sir Charles Ross proposes to make the country pay for the guns that were not bought. And by the time he sizes up his losses from rifles the Government should have bought, rifles he was selling to the British Government, loss of plant, etc., he figures the Government owes him a trifle of nineteen millions. Can he collect? That is for the courts to decide. But if the case ever comes to trial that trial will be interesting. In imagination you can already hear Sir Robert Borden explaining his eulogies of the weapon. Hon. Arthur Meighen splitting hairs, not with bullets but with words, and Hon. Robt. Rogers telling just whom he proposed to put in the tower. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will probably also be among those present and he may find time to tell how a supposedly sane man ever came to make such a contract.

ROBT. MORRSON HEADED POLL IN COUNCIL RACE

Labour Candidates Provided Big Surprise in Yesterday's Aldermanic Elections—Three of Their Four Men Elected for Two Years—Only Three of 1918 Aldermen Returned.

BUSINESS MEN HIGH

The biggest surprise in Peterborough's municipal election for decade or more was sprung yesday when Labour captured four of t ten seats in the Council by electi its entire slate of four candidates the field of fifteen. Mr. Robert Mclson headed the poll with 1,526 votewith a comfortable majority over Mr. J. J. Turner and Mr. James Hamilton who followed in that orde The sweets of Labour's victory we sublimated by not only heading thepolls, but by placing three men in t first five for a two year term, Mr. Harry Gainey and Mr. Alex. Murray aking the fourth and fifth aldermen-et on the results from the final cou Mr. James Garside, Labour's fourth man, took sixth place.

Only Three Aldermen Retued.

Next to Labour's success, thwreck of last year's Council was t most striking feature. Aldermen Vorth, Malcolm McIntyre, Arch. Mr and Wm. Langford escaped the arm in retirement, and the electors spe out three of their colleagues in yesday's barrage of ballots, especially abour ballots. They were Aldermn Jones, Dobbin and Saunders. Anseveral of the other veterans in the micipal field had to be content with aces at the bottom of the list. Ald. Edr alone made any kind of a showing and he is down in the second or he year group.

First Poll Was Indicave.

The very first poll, the rests from which were telephoned to the city hall after half past five, indicate the victors. The Labour men surised the talent that grouped around Cy Clark Armstrong by immediately aking a front position with Turner d Hamilton as contenders. As e count came in, the Labour men we found to be strongly entrenched ind safe, and chief interest centred i the race between Turner and Morrin for the first place.

There was also feverish guring to discover the victims of theray, and for a time it was a questi whether Jones or Taylor would ecure the tenth place, but the South Ward alderman was finally returd with a comfortable margin.

The final figures were ild up by polling divisions five andseventeen, but they had little effect the results.

LABOURMEN CELEBRATED BIG VICTORY WITH MINGLED ELATION AND RENEWED CONFIDENCE

The Labour Hall rang with cheers of victory last night at an impromptu celebration of the remarkable success of the Trades and Labour Council's four candidates in yesterday's elections. It was a demonstration that let loose the wave of enthusiasm aroused by the very completeness of the triumph. The four Labour aldermen-elect were given an ovation as they brought home the lion's share of the municipal spoils. The crowd was elated, but there was no tone of gloating or intemperate exultation in their reaction to the surprising success. There was, however, complete gratification and a palpable sense of new found confidence inspired by the most convincing manifestation of latent strength that labour has given in Peterboro in a generation. Snappy speeches sparkled with felicitations to candidates, to the organization committee and particularly its chairman, Mr. A. L. Bolwell, also to the Great War Veterans and to all those who had made possible the splendid victory. But the speakers did not content themselves to pick the passing flowers, they turned their thoughts to the problems of the newly imposed responsibility, with promises of earnest endeavour to merit the confidence of the workingmen who had proved that unity was not simply a catchword and an idle boast in their local unions.

Their is no gainsaying the fact that among the candidates and the rank and file of the workers there had been restless doubts of the outcome of the campaign. Electioneering was a new experience, and the strength of the Labour sentiment had not been put to a real test; furthermore there were decided uncertainties as to the support that would be yielded by the citizens in general. But the fears vanished even with the first returns last night, and as the count mounted higher and higher the candidates and their supporters followed the figures with a quick accession of surprise, especially when Robert Morrison stepped into first place, Harry Gainey and Alex. Murray also drew up into the first five elected for a two year term, and James Garside followed with a few less votes for the sixth position. The rosiest hopes of the morning had pictured nothing so sweeping as this. Misgivings of the soundness of the Labour spirit were completely dispelled by this unequivocal mandate from the workers, and probably the most pleasing feature of the returns was the evidence that the workingmen had stood together, even as the Trades and Labour Council had hoped and urged.

Plea for the Unions.

While the assistance of unorganized workers was freely acknowledged by the speakers last night, there was an insistent plea for the promotion of the local unions, and it is more than likely that the Trades and Labour Council this year will exploit the present success to the end that the locals may be fully developed and rounded out for further advances.

The Province Will Take Notice

In opening the meeting, Mr. Bolwell, who presided, struck the congratulatory keynote that was resounded by the suceeding speakers. He also declared that the day's success would make a deep impression and have a widespread effect throughout the province. He was especially pleased that three of the candidates had been elected for two years. Mr. Bolwell urged the members of the unions to send full delegations to the Trades Council.

Robert Morrison.

"I don't know where to start," said Mr. Morrison who was cheered to the echo. "I want to thank everybody who helped not only to elect me but to elect the four candidates. Mr. Gainey and I worked together in our canvass and it was not for ourselves but the whole four of us. I hope Labor will stand together now. We have given the people of Peterboro an eye-opener. We ran a good clean fight, we said nothing against the old aldermen nor attacked any person. We had strong opponents, some of them had been in the Council for years. We are going to do our best not only for the working people but for the whole city. If we err, why we want our mistakes to be pointed out to us. And above all we want the support and assistance of the Trades and Labour Council."

Mr. James Garside.

Mr. Garside regaled the audience with humourous incidents of the day's hurly-burly. He had the supervision of the north ward, and the returns show that the Labour men more than held their ground in a section that might have been considered somewhat doubtful. "If we only stay together" he said, "we can get two more candidates, and there's no reason why we shouldn't. Personally, I will do my utmost for the benefit of the city this year."

Mr. Aex. Murray.

"Let me thank you from the bottom of my heart," said Alex. Murray, when, coming in a little late, he made his way to the platform through a lane in the cheering crowd. "You played your part today. You placed men in the council, who in my opinion, will play their part. I am sorry to see two men from the Board of Trade ahead of me, but they will have to go some to keep ahead of me when we go down to the Council. I want to thank the War Veterans, and I also remind them to keep a watch on us. We want to give them all that is their due."

Harry Gainey.

Mr. Gainey was also given an enthusiastic reception when he arrived toward the end of the meeting. In the heat of the afternoon's work, he was stranded up near Auburn when an automobile in which he was driving broke down. He was drenched by the rain, and when he finally reached home the day was done and he was exhausted.

"This is quite an occasion for me, and I want to thank all the workers, and especially to say a word for Mr. Bolwell. He certainly did great work. I hope we will live up to our expectations this year. I will do all I can to further the interests of the city, and I trust that we will be able to say that the confidence of the rate payers has not been misplaced. I want to congratulate the other candidates and especially Mr. Morrison for his fine showing."

Mr. Sidney Whatley.

Secretary Whatley and members of the G. W. V. A. arrived unannounced, and when recognized drew a round of cheers. "We came up here to congratulate you upon what you have accomplished today," Mr. Whatley said when pressed for a speech. "It shows that you have a united front You have established a precedent in Peterboro, and I desire to congratu-

THURSDAY, JANUARY 2ND, 1919.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

The re-election of Messrs. G. N. Gordon, A. A. Fowler and Roland Denne to the Board of Education caused little surprise. It was generally recognized that they have served faithfully and well during the past two years, and their election was never considered in doubt, the only speculation being as to which of the other three candidates would capture the fourth place. The honours fell to Mr. J. A. McKone, principal of the Peterborough Business College, whose experience and training in educational matters should be valuable assets to the Board. Mrs. W. R. Morris, the first woman candidate to take the field in municipal election in Peterborough, made a very creditable run on the sixth with 947 votes and 6[illegible] ist. Mr. W. F. [illegible] the Board of Education [illegible]45, all, but of fine quality, and [illegible] electors realizing that all six candidates possessed many excellent qualifications for office, regretted that it was only possible to elect four and that two capable aspirants for office had to be rejected.

THE ALDERMANIC RACE.

The three outstanding features of yesterday's aldermanic contest were the clean-cut triumph of the Labour candidates, the evident desire of the ratepayers generally for a change, and the utter indifference of a very large number of the electors towards the important task of selecting the city's board of managers. The latter is shown by the vote cast. In spite of the fact that it was a holiday and the weather was not unduly inclement, in some polling sub-divisions of the city only about half the voters on the list exercised their franchise. These electors who failed in their duty yesterday should not raise their voices during the present year to complain of the City Council or its actions. By defaulting when they had an opportunity to express their choice of aldermanic candidates, they have forfeited their right to grumble about the way in which the city is governed. The failure of so many to vote at a time when the selection of a strong Council was of such paramount importance is not a good omen. There must be more attention paid to the municipal elections if Peterborough is to make real progress.

The Trades and Labour Council's success was a spectacular surprise—a surprise in its completeness, even to the most ardent supporter for the Labour platform. Not only did the four Labour candidates secure places on the aldermanic board, but one of them, Mr. Robert Morrison, headed the polls, and three out of the four were among the first five, giving them a two year term as aldermen. The result proved, that for the first time probably in a municipal election in Peterborough, the labour vote was united. The four candidates were loyally supported, and by the help of a well-planned and hard-working organization the vote was got to the polls [illegible] remarkable results outlined. [illegible]t of the labour men at the [illegible]evel is easily justified; [illegible]ign was systematically [illegible]ned and executed and was carried through to a triumphant success. Organized labour will have no ground for complaint that it is not represented in this year's Council, with four of its members elected, while Ald. McIntyre is also looked upon more or less as a labour candidate, although not officially endorsed by the organization. There will be no longer any need of the Trades and Labour Council appointing a committee to keep an eye on the activities of the aldermen. Last year's Council has been almost completely shattered, and the vote yesterday seemed to be conclusive evidence that the people had not appreciated the efforts of last year's members. Only three old aldermen remain, Ald. Edgar, McIntyre and Taylor, and they were low in the list, running seventh, ninth and tenth respectively. Three out of the six aldermen who offered themselves for re-election went down to defeat, namely, Ald. Jones, Saunders and Dobbin. The small vote for the last named candidate was one of the surprises of the day, for Ald. Dobbin during the four years he has been a member of the Council, has done much valuable work for the city, and the energy and attention to detail he displayed will be missed. Ex-Ald. Jones, although a new man, showed aptness in dealing with city matters and an independence of opinion that commanded respect.

The Board of Trade shared with the Trades and Labour Council the honours of the day. The two candidates endorsed by the Board, Messrs. J. J. Turner and James Hamilton, proved to be a winning pair, who finished second and third in the list, and as a result they are elected for two years. As Mr. Turner is president of the Board of Trade, there should be closer co-operation between the two organizations than has been the case for some time.

CANADA'S VOICE.

The personnel of the peace conference, which is about to begin its work, has been practically arranged. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland will be represented by Lloyd-George, Bonar Law, A. J. Balfour and G. N. Barnes, a labour man. Canada, which has been flattered by the courtesy title of an equal or a sister nation, not being a nation among the nations, will not be represented except in the anterooms ammong the secretaries and batmen. Representation that the ference shows unmi[illegible]re is in the government [illegible] that the colonies British [illegible]luencies. The result, [illegible]evitable, will be heard with [illegible]appointment in Canada, where hope had been unreasonably raised of the influence of Canada's voice in the councils of the world. The Government's embarrassment with respect to the Siberian and Dwina expeditions will be increased, and national feeling here will, doubtless, be stimulated Mr. Borden, having nothing more to do in European affairs, and being completely overshadowed by the American President, ought, without offering offence to the governors of the Empire, to get his soldiers home and return at once to his own place in the Parliament of the Canadian people.— The Weekly Sun.

A CHANCE TO HELP

The citizens of Peterboro who have not yet had an opportunity of showing their appreciation of the good services rendered during the past year by the band of the Salvation Army have still a chance to assist this splendid organization. The annual collection in aid of the band which commenced on Christmas eve is not yet completed and during the rest of this week the funds of the organization should be considerably increased. The band depends largely upon this collection for its financial maintenance during the year and it should be only necessary to remind the citizens of the many claims the Temple musicians have on the support of the public to ensure a hearty response to the appeal. The Temple Band has never been found wanting when its services were required. On public occasions the organization has always freely given its services; citizens still remember the part the band took in the peace celebration and are appreciatively aware of the manner in which it has helped in receptions to returned soldiers and in other events of a patriotic character. During the war the Temple Band has valiantly carried on in spite of the fact that no fewer than twenty-six of its members went overseas with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The frequent enlistments among the bandsmen have not prevented the band from performing its duties at home and the public owe it a deep debt of gratitude. A liberal collection on this occasion is more than usually needed for inclement weather a year ago interfered to a great extent with the annual campaign while the city's grant to the band was also cut down.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Don't forget to write it 1919.

Last year's council is almost as completely wrecked as Germany.

Five of the aldermen elected are members of the council for the first time.

Some mayoralty aspirations were badly shattered as a result of yesterday's vote. More than one candidate for the council had his eye on the mayor's chair for next year but viewed in the light of the New Year's verdict the prospects are not nearly so bright as they appeared.

Labour's triumph was about as complete as possible. To elect the whole slate, three of them for two years was beyond the expectations of everyone.

The old council found the going hard and only three survived the storm.

late the four candidates upon their election."

Mr. Whatley remarked that there was little doubt that with co-operation the four representatives could be increased to ten. "I hope that the Council will work in harmony and that the problems of the new year will be successfully solved.

Mr. T. Tooms Pleased.

A free lance in the cause of labour, Mr. T. Tooms was called upon and expressed his pleasure that the proud day to which he had looked had arrived. He congratulated Labour, and pointed out that it should now realize its power and its use. Australia had set an example with a Labour government. "We can't do less than follow her. Don't be slow to bring out men for the governments, provincial and federal. Some persons have said that we could not stand together. We have shown that we are united, and we may speculate upon what the results would have been were we properly organized.

Other speakers were Mr. Alex. Stevens, Mr. M. L. Carr, Mr. McMorrison, Peter McArdle. In their Murray, Thos. Hall[illegible]dates and the tributes to [illegible]asized with satisfaction the progress made by the cause, the [illegible] and Labour council during the past two years, how Labour had made itself felt in the last Federal elections and had now come through with a cleanout, decisive victory in the municipal arena.

There was also a plea to workingmen to associate themselves with Trade unions, and to help solidify the defenses of organized and unorganized Labour too. There was the dual motive of self interest and the desire to help other workers.

Mr. Lane and Mr. Campbell had been active in securing the candidates and naturally the success of their selections was warmly applauded.

The meeting closed with renewed cheers for the candidates and the War Veterans.

Voice of The People

January 1st, 1919.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Kindly permit me space in your valuable paper for the following, re North Monaghan nominations. This New Year's afternoon Mr. John Barnes, C.E., of Cottesmore Avenue, Browntown, came to my place and wanted to know why his nomination for the township council had been rejected by me. To say the least this was quite a surprise for me. I had never seen Mr. Barnes before to know who the gentleman was. I said that I had never see or heard of his nomination on nomination day. Mr. Barnes said that that was funny, as he was informed that I would not accept his nomination because he was not present. To the party or parties who manufactured this statement and circulated the same that I would not accept Mr. Barnes' nomination. I emphatically deny such statement as a downright falsehood, and there is no doubt in my mind now as to the reason those parties had for making such a statement.

Wine Shipment May Continue to April 30

If Sale Not Meantime Prohibited By Ontario Legislature.

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—The Government has passed an order in Council amending the existing order in Council so as to permit the wine manufacturers in Ontario to continue shipment, within Ontario, of their wine until April 30 next, if the sale is not prohibited by the Ontario Legislature in the meantime.

The Ontario Temperance Act permits the sale in Ontario of wines made of grapes grown in Ontario by the manufacturer direct to the consumer in quantities mentioned in the act, subject to the regulations imposed by the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario.

The order in Council of May 11 prohibited the manufacture in Canada of intoxicating liquors on and after December 31, 1918. The manufacture of wines containing more spirits therefore ceases from and after as from the present date, the sale of such wines, however, is still permitted under the Ontario Temperance Act. The wine manufacturers represented that so long as the sale is permitted the transportation within Ontario should not be prohibited, and that the order in Council of March 11 last was not intended to prohibit transportation so long as the sale was permitted.

They state that this view prevailed for some time after the order in Council was passed and they shipped their goods without difficulty. In June, however, the question of the right to ship was raised by one of the transportation companies, and on June 10 an order in Council was passed expressly providing that the regulation prohibiting shipment should not apply to wine made from grapes grown in Ontario until December 31, 1918.

The wine manufacturers have asked that the words "thirty-first December, 1918," should be eliminated so that they might be permitted to ship so long as the sale is permitted in Ontario. The Government has amended the order in Council of June 10 by substituting "30th April, 1919," for "31st December 1918." The effect is to permit the wine manufacturers to continue shipment, within Ontario up to April 30 next if the sale in Ontario is not prohibited in the meantime. In the meantime it is anticipated that the whole question of prohibition will come up for consideration in Parliament.

REMANDED ON A THEFT CHARGE

Two boys aged 15 and 13 pleaded guilty this morning in Police Court to the charge of stealing 4 bicycles and also to forging a check. The case was enlarged for a few days until more evidence can be secured.

The first bicycle was stolen in the month of June and it was painted over again before sold to a local bicycle dealer. Three other cycles were also stolen and likewise disposed of. One of the boys cashed a cheque in his father's name to the amount of $19.45 at a grocery store in the city. A trip to Hamilton and Toronto was the means by which the money was spent. The trip was brought to a close when they were arrested in Toronto yesterday by Detective Newhall.

Interesting Letter From Flight Lieut. G. Logan

Peterboro Boy Was a Prisoner of War in Germany.

The following interesting letter has been received from Flight Lieut. George Logan, son of Mr. W. A. Logan, 14 Murray street. Lieut. Logan was a prisoner of war in Germany, but has been released since the signing of the armistice. The letter follows:

Rotterdam, Dec. 8th, 1918.

Dearest People.— Yes! I'm once again in civilization and take it from one who knows, it's not sorry I am! Hoo-rah for Liberty says I! I'm going to cable you in the morning, so you will know my whereabouts. However, I won't be long here, as I expect to be on the way to 'Blighty' to-morrow. Now for a bit of my past history. Well. Mr. Foch made a push, didn't he? And if I remember rightly, an armistice ensued. Much joyfulness in the P. O. W. camp of Holyminden, A.D. Weser. Then began speculation as. "When do we go?" Well at the end of two weeks we hadn't left, so everybody was fed up and talk began to go around the camp of hoofing it to Holland. However, we first decided to see if we could get definite information re time of departure, and approached our B. O. on the matter. After several vain attempts to gain definite information by calling up Berlin, some of the camp conceived the idea of doing the odd walk to the frontier. Accordingly one fine night some 29 officers scaled the wire, in other words handed the "square head" at the gate a tin of jam or meat and walked out the gate. Behold, next morning yours truly packing his kit along with five others, viz., Lieuts. Casgrain, R.N.A.S., Rose, R.N.R., Simpson, K.O.S.B., Stevenson, Can. R.F.C., and Flintoft, R.N.A.S. That night all went well and found us on the road. All went well till the third day, having done about 75 or 80 miles, I had to "crock out." Rheumatism it felt like, though I suppose it was only cold I had got, as we had to sleep in a wet woods one night. So I had to quit, though I stuck it out as long as I could. Maybe I wasn't sorry to leave the bunch; I was then at Lemgo, and finding that there were no English there, I walked 12 kilos to Detmold, where I found ten English Tommies working on a command there. So I said this is good enough for me and stayed there from that day (Saturday) till the following Friday, when we got word to report to Sanne, which we did. On arriving there that night we found that a transport was to leave the next morning and the S. M. said he would smuggle me in if I was willing to take things as they were. Was I game! Say! Look at me now here I am! We reached Grenan, on the Dutch frontier, that night after an uneventful journey, at 11 p.m. We crossed there in a Dutch train, reaching Euchede, just over the frontier, at midnight. The Tommies were sent to a camp in the city and I was taken by the reception officer to the hotel, where I had my first "tub" in a year. I lay and soaked for an hour, and my first sleep between sheets in the same period. The Tommies had to stay for a day or two in E, but I came along a first class passenger to-day, where I am. Freedom! Say, I can't believe it yet. However, I'll take their word for it that it's O.K. Tomorrow Blighty! Full particulars when we meet again. When I hit old England I will write at once. Lots of love to all.

GEORGE.

P.S.—We may not have much fun, but we do see life! Holland added to my travel list. Not so bad for a feller like mu, eh!

Annual Sunday School Rally

Rev. B. Greatrix Presided Over the Gathering.

The second annual rally of the Methodist Sunday schools of the city, held yesterday in Trinity church, was attended by a large number of the Sunday school pupils of the city. The entire body of the church and most of the gallery was filled. Rev. B. J. Greatrix, who presided over the gathering, opened the service with a few introductory remarks. Mr. E. E. Ingall gave a very helpful address on Thankfulness. The large orchestra, arranged by Mr. W. H. Cunningham, recruited from members of the different Sunday schools in the city, provided particularly fine music.

Two Physicians Slashed With Razor Wielded by Patient

One in Dangreous Condition After Attack by Man Complaining Over Size of Bill.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Two physicians with offices at No. 182 Lexington avenue, were attacked by one of their patients and both of them were badly cut about the throat and arms by a razor.

Dr. Isaac Glassman and Dr. Solomon Selkin had been treating a patient, who described himself as Demericus Lopez, thirty-four years old, at No. 48 West Fifteenth street, and he called upon them and, according to the police, accused the doctors of overcharging him. An argument ensued and Lopez, who is a Spaniard, drew a razor and attacked the two unarmed men.

Dr. Glassman disarmed Lopez, who thereupon ran from the house with the physician in pursuit. The chase ended at Twenty-ninth street, two blocks away, where the doctor caught up with his assailant and brought him back to the house.

The police were notified, and when Detective Fuchin, of the East Thirty-fifth street station, arrived at the office he found the two physicians bending over receptacles with blood flowing from their necks, while Lopez was seated nearby.

An ambulance was summon from Bellevue Hospital and the physicians were hurried there, Dr. Selkin being in a dangerous condition.

Lopez was locked up on a charge of felonious assault and is said to have admitted to the charge. Ninety dollars in money and a letter from the Spanish Consul were found in his pockets.

Christmas Tree For St. Alban's Sunday School

The Sunday School children of St. Alban's Mission, Brownton, gathered on New Year's Eve at the Orange Hall, near May's school house, for the annual Christmas festival, which included a Christmas tree, which was literally loaded with presents, and the distribution of diplomas and prizes.

Rev. J. Price filled the chair as only he can, and took no small part in the programme with his anecdotes, and Miss Winnie Evans very ably rendered a violin solo. Mr. F. C. Wallwork received a great surprise when he was handed a parcel from the tree which contained a pair of fur-lined kid gloves.

Rev. Mr. Price, during his remarks, drew attention to the fact that the Mission was about to lose some of its most staunch adherents, Mrs. and the Misses Crawley, who were on the eve of their departure for British Columbia. They have been most ardent in their efforts for helping the Mission both in Sunday school and Church work since its inauguration, and the success of the Christmas festival was largely due to their efforts, ably seconded by the ladies of the congregation. Rev. Mr. Price called for three cheers, which were most heartily given, and wishing Mrs. Crawley and family a safe journey, and every success in their new home. He also announced the Vestry meeting for Monday next, Jan. 6th, when plans for the coming year will be discussed.

Distributing the Christmas tree and prizes then took place, followed by refreshments, the proceedings terminating with the singing of "God Save the King,' everyone being satisfied with having spent an enjoyable evening.

Woman Cheered as She Carries Bananas in Strike at Wharf

New Orleans, La., Dec. 31.—Answering advertisements in the newspapers for women to carry bananas in the place of men who refused to work for their old wage scale of thirty cents an hour, Mrs. Mary Dupre, fifty-one year old, No. 726 St. Phillip Street, mother of two children, went to work at the United From Company wharf at Thalia St. Falling in line with fifty or more men she carried bananas from a steamship to a box car until time was called for the day crew.

Mrs. Dupre is the first woman to do work of this kind in New Orleans. Her appearance in the line of workers brought a cheer from the half hundred men who had remained on duty. Three hundred feet away several score white and negro men who quit work looked on. Mrs. Dupre is a widow, her husband having died two years ago. Her eldest son died while working at an army cantonment three months ago. She is supporting her youngest son, Henry, three years old and an adopted daughter, who is going to school.

The banana carriers, or a great majority of them quit work when their demand for an increase to fifty-five cents an hour was not granted. The men say the National Adjustment Committee, at its recent meeting in New Orleans made provision for this increase. Matranga Brothers, stevedors say the ruling of the adjustment board, providing for thirty-five cents an hour, applies only to Galviston, when the banana carriers are affiliated with the International Longshoremen's Association. In New Orleans, there is no banana carrier's organization. Inquiry failed to disclose who are the official representatives of the men who quit.

"We could not afford to pay these men fifty-five cents an hour," said a representative of Matranga Bros. "We have men here as old as eighty years and one negro far above this age. They work slowly and take as long as twelve hours to unload a boat. We had at least twenty cripples here last week. Our men are not steady. Most of them, when they are out of other employment, rush to the banana wharf for a few hours' work. The men we employ could not earn thirty cents an hour elsewhere. If we are forced to pay fifty-five cents an hour, these men will be out of work, as we will demand young able-bodied men."

Work of unloading banana ships was going on but rather slow. It is expected a number of women will be placed on the job.

Women Join Police Force

A Few Activities in Which Women Are Taking a Prominent Part.

Six members of the Women's Police reserve in New York are to be made regular members of the police force, and will wear blue uniforms, carry revolvers, handcuffs and billies. They will also draw a salary of $1,200 a year.

The war has brought out patent invention genius in many women of the British Empire.

A petition bearing 35,000 names has been sent to United States Secretary of Labour Wilson by the women street car conductors of Cleveland, O., protesting against a ruling that they be relieved of duty.

The average earnings of farmerettes in New Jersey during the past season was $1.50 a day, except in the potato belt, where some good pickers were paid as high as $4 a day.

County units of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defence are making surveys preparatory to helping country girls get a high school education. The principal object is to enable the girls to become teachers.

Women who enter the ranks of industry as a result of the war's demands do not want to return to domestic occupations, according to Mrs. Frank Hales, of the Chicago employment service branch, established by the department of labour.

The United States railroad administration is contemplating the employment of women exclusively as clerks, accountants, ticket sellers, station agents, crossing watchmen and car cleaners. They will be paid the same rate of pay as was received by the men.

Wellesley College has just graduated a group of farm superintendents who will work with the women's land army, helping to direct 200 of their units in New York state and is also training the 10,000 farmerettes who are expected to enroll for this work in the spring.

Sixty-five young women are undertaking a unique means of proving their value to their country by beginning a highly specialized type of war work that will eventually mean much to the labour power of the country. They are graduates of the training school for psychic social work at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and are styled "shell-shock experts."

FROM JUNIOR CLERK TO RAILWAY VICE-PRESIDENT

Mr. J. E. Dalrymple, Vice-President of Grand Trunk System.

MONTREAL, January 1st. — Mr. J. E. Dalrymple, Vice-President in Charge of Traffic, Grand Trunk System, to-day received the congratulations of his railway associates and of the leaders in the business world, upon the occasion of his fiftieth birthday. The anniversary was a double one, as it marked also the completion by Mr. Dalrymple of thirty five and a half years' of service with the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Dalrymple's record in the railway service is a splendid one. He has worked his way upward in the one company from a junior clerkship to an office of high executive responsibility, where he directs the traffic on the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, Grand Trunk Pacific Coast Steamship Lines and subsidiaries of the System. These rail and water lines serve eighty-nine per cent. of Canada's urban population grouped in its forty principal cities.

In addition to holding these offices Mr. Dalrymple is a member of the board of directors of other large organizations, such as the Canada Steamship Lines, and is regarded as one of the most able officers in the transportation field on the continent. Born at Montreal, it was in the Treasurer's Office of the Grand Trunk in that city that he had his first railroad experience. Later, he occupied the positions of Secretary to the Freight Traffic Manager of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway, and Secretary to the General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System. After doing notable work as Division Freight Agent of the Company at Hamilton and at Detroit, Michigan, he was appointed General Freight Agent of the Central Vermont Railway in 1900. He was Assistant to the General Manager of the Grand Trunk System from March, 1901, to April, 1902, when he returned to the Central Vermont Railway to handle the growing freight traffic of that road. His success in that position led to his being chosen in 1905 as General Freight Agent of the Grand Trunk Railway System, with its great international traffic arteries. In May, 1908, he went to Winnipeg, as Assistant Freight Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and Steamships.

The late Mr. Charles M. Hays recalled Mr. Dalrymple, at the age of forty-three, to Montreal as Vice-President of the Grand Trunk, Grand Trunk Pacific and Central Vermont Railways. In this vice-presidential office he has played a notable part in developing the traffic of the System to its present magnitude. How striking has been the increase in the business of the System since Mr. Dalrymple was appointed Vice-President in charge of Traffic is shown by the gross earnings, which have reached $95,000,000 in 1918, as against $53,000,000 in 1911, an increase of eighty per cent. in seven years.

During his career, and particularly in the last half dozen years, Mr. Dalrymple has been in close contact with the directing heads of Canadian industry, and has won a high reputation for the masterly manner in which he has outlined to the Railway Commissioners and to the business men of the Dominion the railroad problems as they affect the important question of railway revenues.

Why Do We Drink Milk?

Because it supplies building material for the bones, teeth and muscles; it keeps the heart beating regularly; it strengthens the nerves and every other part of the body. It has a growing force which makes weak bodies grow into strong ones.

WOULD OTHER FOOD DO AS WELL?

No other food could be used in its place.
No other one food contains as many of the various growing materials needed by children.
No other one food supplies enough building material for bones and teeth.

HOW MUCH MILK?

Every child ought to have at least one quart of milk a day because it is so easily built up into body tissue.
Milk is also an excellent food for adults. It might take the place of some meat.
At least a cup of milk per adult per day should be used in the food or taken as a beverage.
The food value of the milk is the same whether the milk is taken in cooked foods or as a beverage.
Coffee and tea have no food value.
They are harmful for growing children because they dull the appetite so that the children FEEL satisfied before all the necessary growing material has been supplied.
If milk and sugar are used in the tea and coffee, some food value would be received, but the coffee and tea are not good for growing muscles and nerves.
Milk is the most economical food we have, costing in proportion to food value, less than one-half the amount paid for meat, eggs, chicken, fish, etc.

WHAT IS SAFE MILK?

Ordinary market milk is responsible for more sickness and death than most people think.
There is only one method by which these dangers can be eliminated from our milk supply—that is, SCIENTIFIC PASTEURIZATION.
Insure the health of your baby and your family by ordering our Pasteurized Milk for 1919.

MISS BLUE EYES

Mr. Harvey Orr comedian and producer to whom Peterboro theatregoers owe a debt of gratitude for affording an opportunity on several occasions of seeing "The Million Dollar Doll" brought his new musical comedy "Miss Blue Eyes" to the Grand yesterday and it proved a delightful holiday attraction which highly pleased two large audiences. There was a more than usually logical plot involving some very funny situations in the production and the laughter was loud and continuous. Mr. Orr did admirable work as John B. Widgost while Will Powers as his partner in the divorce business was an effective assistance Marjorie Bonner as Sylvania Pennywise late of the Follies scored heavily in the role Raymond Temple was responsible for many laughs as a comic chief of police and other roles were in good hands. A sensational feature was the acrobatic dancing of May DeLour and Percy Oakes who were billed as "whirlwind dancers" and who proved that the title was not a misnomer by their remarkable performance. A male quartette contributed some close harmony to good effect. There was a pretty and sprightly chorus with some very catchy music and altogether the performance was most enjoyable.

CHARGE BOOKKEEPER WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

Employee of Dargle Iron Works, Detroit, Taken Back From Chatham.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 2.—Charged with embezzlement of $12,000 from the Daigle Iron Works here, Charles Street, former bookkeeper for the company, was arrested at Chatham. Street waived extradition, and was brought to Detroit to answer joint charges of grand larceny and uttering and publishing.

Edward J. Higgins, 22 years old, an office employee of the company, who says that Street paid him $50 a week to "keep his mouth shut," was also taken into custody. Street's arrest was brought about through the medium of long-distance telephone call from Chatham to Miss Jennie Smith, 30 years old, a stenographer employed by the Daigle firm.

Street disappeared about six weeks ago, following announcement that the firm was about to install a new system of bookkeeping. Auditors preparing to change the books reported that they found payrools extending back as far as 1916 padded to the extent of $100 a week.

John A. McKone Only New Member of School Board

G. N. Gordon, A. A. Fowler and Roland Denne Re-elected—Mrs. Morris Made a Satisfactory Showing as First Woman Candidate in Local Municipal Elections.

The results of yesterday's elections for the Board of Education ran close to the general expectations. Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. A. A. Fowler and Mr. Roland Denne were returned in that order, the first two on almost even terms and Mr. Denne a close third. Mr. John A. McKone who was elected in the fourth position is the only new man on the board, and is generally regarded as a fine acquisition. His long experience as a teacher undoubtedly proved an attractive and strong qualification in the eyes of the ratepayers.

There will be many regrets over the defeat of Mrs. Morris, which may be ascribed to the fact that Peterboro has not yet realized that women are demanding and are worthy of places of public trusts. However, there is some balm in the showing she did make against four of the strongest and best known candidates that could have been nominated. Besides, three of them were members of the Board and have become its veterans. In view of these considerations Mrs. Morris made a highly creditable showing, and deserves not the sympathy that is naturally felt, but a measure of congratulation that her candidature was so largely endorsed.

Third Bolshevik Army Was Destroyed By Allies' Forces

Over Thirty Thousand Prisoners Captured—Five Thousand Railway Cars and 120 Field Guns Included in the List of Captured Material.

(By the Associated Press.)

VLADIVOSTOK, Jan. 22.—In capturing Perm in the Ural Mountains, General Gaida at the head of the Czecho-Slovak and Siberian forces, virtually destroyed the Bolshevik third army from which he took 31,000 prisoners and much bouty. General Gaida's troops captured an armoured train from which Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik Premier, was directing operations in the region of Perm. Lenine himself escaped, but several members of his party were taken prisoners. The bulk of Gaida's force was made up of Siberian troops and Czechs. In addition to 31,000 prisoners reported, General Gaida captured 5,000 railway cars, 120 field guns, 1,000 machine guns, thirty automobiles, an entire wagon transport, several armoured trains and several thousand horses. His manoeuvre was a complete surprise to the Bolshevik as proved by the fact that he captured several prominent Societ leaders at headquarters of the Third Bolshevik army. Ten Bolshevik regiments are declared to have been annihilated and the rest of the enemy army was driven across the Kama River. Troops of General Semehoff, anti-Bolshevik leader in the Chita districts have occupied Verkhni Udinsk on the Siberiana Railway, east of Lake Baikal.

LIEBKNECHT DEFEATED

Canadian Press:

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 2.—Dr. Karl Liebknecht was given a sharp defeat in the Spartan Congress at Berlin on Tuesday, according to advices received here. Dr. Liebknecht advocated participation by the Spartacus element in the election of members of the National Assembly on the ground that the party might be able to influence the composition of the Assembly. Rosa Luxembourg, one of the Spartacan leaders, replied in a violent speech, declaring, amid a thunderous applause, that "the meeting of the National Assembly must be prevented at all costs." Dr. Liebknecht's proposal was rejected by a vote of 63 to 23.

I desire to thank most heartily those who supported my candidature as member of the city council. While not returned I know that no failure on my part to give my best efforts in the service of the city has been a factor in my being out of the Council this year.

"The Better 'Ole"

By Captain Bruce Bairnsfather and Arthur Eliot

WHAT THE RETURNED MEN AT WHITBY MILITARY HOSPITAL SAY:

A Sergeant—A darn good picture. The best I ever saw.

A Corporal—The most realistic version of life at the front that I have ever seen.

A Gunner—Great! The last word in war plays, and I have seen nearly all war pictures produced.

A Private—Seen it twice; want to see it again. This is the picture for anyone that has a relative at the front.

An Officer—Never thought that it was possible to repraduce on the screen as you see it at the front. "The Better 'Ole" has accomplished this.

A Nursing Sister—Wonderful; It will give the public an inside view of the life of our wonderful men. Advise everyone to see it.

A Private—Liked it for many reasons better than any picture I have ever seen. It is not a gloom-dispenser, but a gloom-chaser. This is the real dope. No camouflage to this pirture. One of the best points is that this picture is British from start to finish. Full of pep. The greatest ever.

'ULLO!

Old Bill, Bert and Alf, the three famous cartoon characters of Captain Bruce Bairnsfathers, are famous the world over in "The Better 'Ole" they are brought to life in the most wonderful motion picture of the war.

The secret of the story's wonderful fascination is its close and true analysis of the spirit which animates the men in the trenches, that spirit which keeps them cheerful under conditions almost indescribable. The army is full of Old Bils, Berts and Alfs, with their sorrows and pleasures—pleasures that make the very word seem a mockery—but true reflections of what the daily life of the boys has been "over there." "The Better 'Ole" will do more than raise a laugh, and dim the eyes with tears at the pathos so piquantly drawn. It will make the people at home understand as never before why the great war was fought to a bitter finish and how much is due to the Berts and Alfs and Old Bills who stood as a living wall of protection for the people at home.

MATTERS MUSICAL

THRIFT CAMPAIGNS YEARS AGO WOULD HAVE BEEN GOOD FOR MUSICIANS.

These thrift campaigns of recent months urging all citizens to save money, to exercise care in all purchases and to invest in only such undoubted securities as government bonds, have been productive of good results. But they came a few generations too late to help some of the great musicians. Poor judgment in business matters and lack of management in personal finances seems to have been the undoing of many of the composers and musicians. True, Handel accumulated and conserved a considerable fortune. Others have lived and died in comfortable fortune. Others have lived and died in comfortable circumstances. Yet many have spent years in poverty. Several died poor or dependent upon their friends.

Mozart had what in his day was considered a good income. But he knew little or nothing of economical management and latterly fell deeper and deeper in debt. His wife and two sons, at his death, were left to struggle in want. Beethoven began life in humble circumstances. The uncertainty of his income blocked his marriage on more than on occasion. Later he was given an annuity by some nobleman. Owing to the struggle between France and Austria this annuity shrank very materially, which together with subsequent prolonged lawsuits played havoc with his finances.

Schubert's meagre effects at his death have been estimated worth fifteen dollars. He usually lived in miserable quarters. While his continued poverty was partially due to lack of definite employment, it was more on account of a want of business tact and imprudence. Paganini was an inveterate gambler. After making cansiderable money he suffered a big loss in a disastrous speculation in Paris.

WHY DISCRIMINATE?

The necessarily heavy cost of private music instruction makes a musical education practically prohibitive for the children of the poorer classes. And yet in other branches the country provides a liberal education that is free or almost free. The public and high schools offer a splendid foundation for the youth who desires to enter medicine, law, theology, engineering, teaching and other professions. They furnish courses in manual training, and domestic science following along our policy of free education. But what of the boy or girl whose talents lie in the direction of piano or violin playing, or some other musical line? Why should the student of music be obliged to pay for private musical instruction at a great personal sacrifice to himself and to his family when all other training is free? Why should not instrumental as well as vocal music be offered in all elementary and second schools, and the cost paid by general taxation as other instruction is financed?

It is to be hoped the time is not far distant when every school system will provide for music instruction; children will be taught to play the piano in classes just as in a few cities they are now taught to play the violin and other orchestral instruments in classes, and this instruction will be paid for by the board of education just the same as all other kinds of teaching. And as the music director of a normal school recently pointed out, "When the country assumes the responsibility of caring for the musical training of its youth, our reputable private music teachers may be taken into the school system, where they will fare better for having a regular income and for being in touch with education along other lines. There will be greater opportunities for artists and teachers than ever before, because more and more people will come to love and to value music. Conservatories of music will then bear the same relation to the public and high schools as do our great universities. Music teachers who become part of a broad educational system will come to see that all educations to be efficient, must be related with everyday life. They will come to see music in relation to other educational activities. They will not confine their interest merely to the work of the studio or of the class-room. They will become musical missionaries, imbued with the spirit of art, and they will carry its message to all the people."

MUSIC A PART OF SCHOOL TEACHER'S EQUIPMENT.

The state has a right to expect that her normal schools shall send out teachers equipped to handle all the subjects in their respective grades, music not excepted and superintendents and school boards have a right to accept no other. This frank statement was made by a speaker addressing the Minnesota Educational Association and it is one that will stand some emphasis. Coming to the training of such teachers, the speaker said: "The supreme problem in the training of the teacher is to make that person herself what we desire our children to become, for if music has not become vital in the life of the teacher, how can it become vital in the life of the child?

"To realize that she is teaching children before music; to believe in the potency of music as a character moulder as well as a lifelong source of pleasure; to believe in the ability of every child to express himself through song and to feel it is his inherent right; to have experienced herself the real joy of singing and to be able to say with Walt Whitman 'the song is to the singer and comes back to him.' These are the basic factors in determining the preparedness of a person to teach music."

AN ORCHESTRA IN EVERY HIGH SCHOOL.

That the need of an orchestra in every high school was obvious, was the contention of one of the speakers at a session of the Ohio Teachers' Association. He showed that in many cases the attitude of the young person toward the school is entirely changed, causing him or her to become not only interested in the orchestra but more interested in the other studies as well. "An orchestra," he said, "encourages the serious study of instruments and is the next logical step after the fundamentals of an instrument have been mastered. Playing in an orchestra is different from playing the instruments alone.

"It requires concentration, alertness, promptness, real thoughtfulness; in fact, I believe that every member of an orchestra must think as much during the time of rehearsal or performance as any other subject in the curriculum requires, in the same length of time. The necessity of an orchestra in every high school cannot be questioned. It has come to stay. A good thing cannot be kept out of our schools."

Wireless Telephone Test Shows Aviator Can Talk 100 Miles

Almost Limitless Possibilities Indicated by Airman's Feat Off Atlantic Coast.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 31.— A wireless telephone record was established here when Lieutenant Commander G. D. Murray talked to a naval airplane one hundred miles from Washington, on its way to Hampton Road, and the aviator not only heard what was said but distinctly recognized the voice of the speaker above the noise made by his engine. Hitherto it has not been possible to reach a flyer by telephone at a greater distance than two miles except when his engine was cut off.

Lieutenant Commander Murray believes wireless telephony is in its infancy and that the successful experiment made yesterday justifies the belief that eventually it will be possible to talk at almost any distance with an airplane in full flight.

Saved Italian Art Treasures

Army Let None of Real Value Fall Into the Invaders' Hands.

NEW YORK.—How Italy saved her art treasures was explained by the Italian Bureau of Information in this city.

"In Italy, the boast of the Germans that they had on exhibition in Berlin a valuable collection of paintings and sculpture, captured in the drive into Northern Italy last fall, has afforded great amusement to the people. It is quite possible that the materialistic Prussians may really believe that the few pieces of art which the Italians allowed to fall into their hands were of real value, but the facts, according to the article, are that only a very limted and mediocre collection was left to be plundered.

As soon as it became evident that the Italian line was wavering, Arduino Colasenti, at the request of the Director General of Finance, was placed in charge of the work of saving the art treasures. The supreme commander of the army placed at Colasenti's disposal trucks, necessary timber, and men to carry on the work.

There was not much time for deliberation. The instructions were to keep in contact with the enemy and to remove art objects only when it became evident that a town was to fall. Colasenti was therefore obliged to watch 400 miles of front and rush his trucks and men to a yielding point at a moment's notice.

To be ready for an emergency the citizens had in the meantime prepared for shipment all the works of art in the threatened towns. Frequently it happened that these were departing on trucks from one side of a town just as the Austrians were entering from the other.

In Belluno the citizens had boxed up all the collections in the Museum, but there was no means of transportation. The high command at once supplied army trucks despite the pressure of the moment.

In the meantime another party went up further into the mountains and saved paintings by Bellunello and memoirs in the original manuscript of Pietro Calvi, and a painting by Lorenzo Lotto. This was accomplished while the Austrians were actually in the villages of Quinto al Sile and Piave di Cadore.

In many places, while the bombardment was going on, the soldiers would try to save frescoes from destruction. Often their efforts were unavailing, but they did not give up, and during their rest periods they would prow among the ruins collecting coloured plaster, with the hope that some of the wreckage might be put together again.

Cyanide Workers Escape Influenza

DENVER, Colorado. — The fumes of cyanide—the most deadly of all poisons—are recommended as a sure cure for influenza. But where is there a man who would risk his life experimenting with such a dangerous poison in order to make sure that he would not be attacked by the "flu."

Cyanide fumes are recommended as an influenza preventive by the employees in the mill of the Portland gold mine, the biggest mine in the Cripple Creek district.

George W. Taylor, manager of the mill and a member of the twenty-first General Assembly, has written to Dr. Erlo E. Kennedy, Secretary of the State Board of Health, telling of the newly discovered preventive. Mr. Taylor says—

"Our boys have an idea that cyanide is an antidote for influenza. We have 132 men working in the mill and only one of them has been attacked. He died. He was a truck driver and was out in the open air all the time. The men contend that if he had been inside, where the fumes of the cyanide solutions had a chance to saturate his clothing, he would not have been attacked."

Dr. Kennedy, respite the favorable report from the Portland mill, will not recommend the general use of cyanide fuems to influenza victims. He fears that the remedy will prove worse than the disease.

CHINA'S WOMEN SOLDIERS.

China had women soldiers long before they were known in Russia. During the Tae Ping rebellion 1,850 women as well as men served in the ranks. In Nanking, in 1853, an army of 500,000 women were recruited. They were divided into brigades of 13,000 each and were commanded by women officers.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

In the Winona-Grimsby section a lot of manure has been hauled lately for the fruit farms.

During the month of November six Farmers' Clubs in Victoria county marketed 823 hogs.

Wm. Grant of Regina has bought the Clyde stallion, Baron's Stamp, from Graham Bros., Claremont.

Steps are being taken looking to the co-operative marketing of cattle and hogs in the New Liskeard district.

The frequent use of curry comb and brushes increases the thriftiness and, incidentally, improves the appearance of the cattle.

Local demand is, saying The Bulletin, keeping up prices on stockers and feeders at Edmonton market. Cattle receipts for one week numbered 1,347.

There were 1,428 head of live stock at the last Edmonton Exhibition, more than 300 in excess of the number shown at the exhibition held in the first year of the war.

Roumania, it is announced, has begun to show an interest in Canadian Holstein cattle and Percheron horses, with prospects of purchases being made in both lines.

If Canada is to maintain a large export trade it will be necessary for every stockman to maintain the maximum number of animals on his farm, and to finish his stock before marketing it.

Entries on Dominion lands in the West will not, The Regina Leader says, be cancelled by land agents between December 15, 1918, and April 1, 1919, except in special instances. Proxy entries held by soldiers where satisfactory evidence of military services is on file are protected under general instructions until the return of the holder of the entry.

Corn produces a greater weight of feed to the acre than most other farm crops. The silo is the place to store it so that it is ready for use at any time, and gives feed analogous to June pasture conditions for the stock during mid-winter. If you want to handle more income, plan on one or more silos full of corn next year.—Farmers' Advocate.

THE PEACE PROGRAMME

Road to Peace Will Not be Strewn With Roses.

By William Philip Simms.
(United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 2.—On the eve of formal conferences the peace capital of the world is being swept by a battle between pessimism and optimism.

Warned by Premier Clemenceau that the road to peace probably will not be strewn with roses, together with his admission that he is not opposed to a continuation of armed alliances on land and sea, the opposition element in France is freely criticizing the Premier's policy as dangerous and predicting that long debates will feature the deliberations.

Despite the fact that the outcome of these apparent differences now seems doubtful, the frank public discussion of debatable issues at this time is believed by high personages in both London and Paris to assure a complete understanding and make the formal conferences much briefer than was anticipated. The man in the street is blowing hot and cold. The public is noticeably keener for the Congress to get under way. In the meantime the two currents of opinion are clashing.

Difference of Opinion.

The Humanite, which reflects one, says Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon have formulated their conception of peace. It is a raw contradiction of President Wilson's. Let us unfold ourselves. The Allies' ideas lack unity now. Then where will the conference bring us? Government circles, however, maintain that Clemenceau and Wilson have the same goal and merely express themselves differently. The peace of the world will not endure unless France is made secure, declares the Temps. This is the keystone of the Clemenceau programme. Undoubtedly he will insist at the peace conference upon strong frontiers and power alliances both on land and sea in sufficient force to repel any hidden aggression. Providing a league of nations would permit this, it is expected he will favour it. If the league falls short of his ideas in this regard, doubtless he will oppose it. It is understood that like other peace delegates, he is willing to be shown. Clemenceau, it is certain, will fight for the complete safety of France in one form or another. And even his opponents admit he is rightly named the 'Tiger.'

Peterboro Team Was Defeated

On the ice that was little more than slush the Peterboro Junior O. H. A. team went down to defeat before the heavier Intermediate Belleville team at Belleville last night by the score of 9 to 5. The Peterboro line up was as follows:

Goal, Murray, defence Hagerman, and Evans, Center, Cherret, Right Wing, Park, Left wing, Walter Jackson. Substitutes, Williams, Girard and Frost.

C—CUSTOMS bioseMa Ic

Peterboro's customs receipts for December and for the past nine months indicates the development that has ben made over the same periods of last year. The statement received from the local Customs officials are as follows:

December 1918	$ 232,695.08
December 1917	44,658.17
Increase	$188,036.91

During the past nine months, from April 1st to December 31st the total receipts were $1,187,627.58 as against $626,134.57 for the corresponding months last year, showing the splendid increase of $561,493.01. These figures are convincing evidence of the city's business expansion during the past year.

Phonograph For Veterans

Ladies' Auxilary Made Presentation on Tuesday Night.

An interesting event took place in the G. W. V. A. rooms on Tuesday evening when the members of the Ladies Auxiliary waited on the Veterans and presented them with a handsome cabinet phonograph and a number of records as a New Year's gift. Mrs. Mills president of the Ladies Auxiliary made the presentation while Dr. Wood, vice-president and Mr. Sidney Whatley, secretary of the G. W. V. A. expressed the thanks of the veterans. Refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour spent. There was a large attendance of the members of the ladies auxiliary.

SOLDIERS' PENSIONS

(Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, January 2. — Four hundred and forty million dollars will be required to pay pensions to Canada's soldiers returned or returning from the war.

This is the estimate made by the Minister of Finance and forwarded to Sir Robert Borden in England for the information of the peace conference. The hope is that Germany will be called on to provide for this amount.

Assyrian Will Pay Full Penalty

Nassau Neby will be Hanged Tomorrow Morning — Falconbridge Refuses Stay of the Sentence.

TORONTO, January 2. — Chief Justice Falconbridge to-day refused application for a stay of carrying out the sentence of death by hanging upon Nassau Neby, an Assyrian who was found guilty of murdering Geo. Plucker in a railway construction sleeping car at Weston, on May the 29th last.

Neby will accordingly be hanged at eight o'clock to-morrow morning. Hangman Ellis is here and has completed all arrangements for hanging.

"Cavell" Class Spent Enjoyable Evening

A very enjoyable evening was spent by the "Cavell" Class of the Park Street Baptist Sunday School at the home of their teacher, Mrs. O. S. Matchett, 194 Rubidge Street, last night. The evening was spent in games, after which refreshments were served.

Miss Myrtle O'Neill then called upon Miss Kathleen Crawley, one of their members, to whom she read the following address, and at the proper moment Miss Netta Joliffe presented Miss Crawley with a beautiful comb and brush set. Miss Crawley leaves to-day for New Westminster, B. C., to reside.

Peterborough, Jan. 1, 1919.

Dear Kathleen,—We your fellow-class-mates learn with much regret of your intended departure from our midst. We therefore beg of you to accept this small token as a symbol of our esteem towards you.

We are sure you have been faithful in your attendance and in your help towards the class. It is the wish of all that you may, God willing, soon be in our midst once again.

Mrs. O. S. Matchett (Teacher), Winnie Cooper (Asst. Teacher), Myrtle O'Neill, Netta Joliffe, Lila Campbell, Lillie Fearey, Winnie Atkinson, Mary Hunt, Thelma Purvin, Norma Johnston.

Miss Crawley, although taken by surprise, replied, suitably thanking them one and all.

Never hit a man when he's got you down.

The man who drinks like a fish does not take kindly to water.

POLISH ARMY ADVANCING

Six German Cities Have Been Captured—New Minister of Army and Navy.

By John Gradenz.
(United Press.)

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The Polish army, advancing along the railways toward Berlin, has captured six German cities, according to information received here to-day. The Polish army advance has alarmed the German government. Counter measures are expected to be undertaken immediately.

"I was unexpectedly called to the Cabinet and am in no position to outline my whole programme," Noske told the United Press to-day, "but my first action will be to suppress Polish violence."

Herr Noske, newly appointed Minister of the Army and Navy, has ordered the mobilization of large German forces to oppose the Polish invasion of German territory. Much alarm was felt here to-day regarding the Polish advance.

Compulsory Service.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The present German government seems agreed that one of the main factors in insuring future world peace should be the destruction of the foundation on which the Kaiser's great war machine was erected—compulsory military service.

Both Chancellor Ebert and War and Marine Minister Noske, who naturally will direct Germany's military policies, took this attitude in discussing the matter wih the United Press to-day.

The two officials said the German delegation would advocate International abolition of compulsory service at the peace table, providing all nations agreed to it. If France insists on maintaining a strong standing army, however, Ebert said he would insist on the adoption of the Swiss system of modified service by Germany.

Noske said he favoured a people's volunteer army, to be officered by specially trained men from civil life.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 2.—The Allied Armistice Commission has threatened to break off preliminary negotiations if the radicals seize the German government, according to a Berlin despatch received by the Politiken to-day.

"A Tearing Raid."

GENEVA, Jan. 2.—The Polish army which is marching toward Berlin has as its object "a tearing raid into Germany," according to a Polish agency at Lausanne. The infantry is well armed and supported by artillery and cavalry. Infantry already has occupied important railway centres, including Kreuz-Driesen and Poznau, and has captured a large amount of railway stock with little resistance Germans are re-arming demobilized troops and fighting is expected, although most of the demobolized soldiers are refusing to serve. The agency says that as the German railways are disorganized there is a possibility of a well-organized Polish army reaching Berlin.

BELIEVE STOKER WAS MURDERED.

St. John Police also think that Fifty Pounds that he had with him was Stolen from Him.

ST. JOHN, N. B. January 2.—That Sade Hassan, stoker of the Steamer Manchester Brigade, who was found dead in West St. John with his throat cut, was murdered is the belief of the police officials who are working on the case. They are also of the opinion that fifty pounds of English money which it is said that Hassan had on his person, when leaving the ship on Saturday night, was stolen.

It was learned that the police discovered blood stains on two of the four men arrested. One of the men is an East Indian and it is the belief that he is the chief one under suspicion. He denies any knowledge of the matter.

Mr. W. H. Rowe, of Pittsburgh, had his fine big boathouse at Gore's Landing sunk in a novel manner last week. The superstructure is supported on two pontoons, and into one of these a muskrat ate its way, causing the pontoon to fill with water and sink, and throwing the boathouse on its side into the water. Repairs have since been made to the pontoon, and the boathouse raised.

Statement From Mrs. Morris

Personally the result of the election for the Board of Education is very acceptable, as I had faced with reluctance the possibility of increased work and responsibility.

The vote plainly shows that the majority of the electors used their four votes, giving one to each of the three former members of the Board, the fourth vote being divided among the three new candidates, only one of whom could be elected.

The three former members of the Board were entitled to re-election, as their service has been efficient.

Mr. McKone will be a valuable addition to the Board, and will extend a welcome to a woman member next year.

American Dancers Hooted in Berlin

BERLIN.— For weeks the so-called Film Association, comprising all sorts of people connected with moving pictures in its membership, has been advertising a public ball at the Zoological Gardens, at which some foreign dancers, among them some French and Americans, were to make an appearance. Though the newspapers warned the film people that the public would not approve such performances at present, the programme was not changed.

Before the opening ball some soldiers appeared and made the Director of the Zoological Gardens promise that the foreign dancers should not appear. The managers of the ball, however, ignored this promise and permitted Mlle. Malvine and M. Fernando of Paris to do one of their extraordinary dances. They had hardly begun, however, when a deafening noise from all sides of the house made them stop. The two were hooted and jeered till they stopped dancing, when Mlle. Malvine revenged herself by shouting "Vive la France!"

There was more and still noisier trouble till the French pair were hurried off by the managers.

Hadyes and Biller of New York, who followed the French dancers later, were received not much better by the enraged public, which induced the Americans to retire without showing what they could do.

Lakefield Candidates Discuss Issues Concerning Municipality

Meeting of the Ratepayers Was Held on Nomination Day— The Speakers.

LAKEFIELD, January 2. — At the meeting of the ratepapers of Lakefield held on Monday night in the Queen street theatre several of the candidates for municipal honours made short speeches.

The first speaker was Reeve F. J. Moore, who in a few words outlined what he and the councillors had accomplished during the past year, and assured those present that they would faithfully continue to do so if re-elected.

As to the matter of re-building the Town Hall, he would recommend that it be left in abeyance till labour, building material, etc., were more easily procured than at present.

Mr. J. A. Porter was the next speaker. As one of the nominees for reeve Mr. Porter was not prepared to say positively whether or not he would stand for office, bet would exercise the privilege of giving his decision within 24 hours.

Financial Review.

As one of last year's council Mr. Porter gave a brief sketch of the financial condition of the village, which is very good as the debt only amounts to $15,000, which is much less than many villages are carrying. Of course the loss of the town hall and the fire equipment, etc., will naturally mean a material increase in the debt for the coming year.

Regarding the village park there was $65 collected for pasture, $50 for rent last year, also 18 cords of wood were cut 56 cords of stone taken off. Last year the actual revenue from the park was $400.

A team of horses were purchased at $500 for the use of the town in street watering, carting, etc., crushing stone, carting wood, etc. These horses do not owe the town one cent as they have more than paid their way.

It will require the work of another team and two or three men for three or four years to put the streets in proper condition.

Little Left to Say.

Councillor Young followed Councillor Porter and spoke briefly of the pleasure he had felt in his work in the council and assured the ratepayers of his desire to further the best interests of the village if re-elected.

Dr. J. C. Smith followed and stated that the ground had been so well covered by the previous speakers that there was little left for him to say, but as the mover of the motion to purchase the team of horses for the village he was well satisfied with the purchase as they had paid for themselves.

Dr. Smith, who has been a strong advocate of a more efficient fire equipment for many months touched on that point which is now a vital one. A short time ago a chemical engine of 70 gallons capacity and 100 feet of hose, was purchased at a cost of $475 and which is expected to arrive at any date. It will now be necessary for the council to purchase a new fire equipment at once.

The new council should use every means to advertise Lakefield, which has so many natural advantages, having unexcelled water power to offer manufacturers. Dr. Smith closed by saying that if re-elected he would endeavour to further the best interests of the village.

Mr. J. J. McDonald was the last speaker and found that the ground was so well covered that nothing was left for him to say ,but that if re-elected he would do his best for the village.

Messrs .W. J. Charlton and G. G. Hendren were not present.

Municipal Elections.

Mr. J. A. Porter resigned as a candidate for reeve but allowed his name to stand among the contestants for councillor.

Messrs. W. J. Charlton and G. G. Hendren resigned as candidates for councillors, so the old council is re-elected by acclamation and are as follows

Reeve, Mr. F. J. Moore.

Councillors, Messrs J. A. Porter, J. J. McDonald, A. J. Young, and Dr. J. C. Smith.

The tone of the cash markets for the coarse grains was lower. It is expected that the change in temperature will facilitate a freerer movement of corn and increase the deliveries. Allenby's Master Stroke in Palestine

All Escapes Were Closed and Turks Suffered From Airplanes' Bombs.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Details of what was, perhaps, one of the most spectacular operations of the war, became known to-day when General Allenby's report on the Palestine campaign was published. British, Indian, French, Italian contigents participated in the fighting, and, in addition, Arab forces from east of the Jordan rendered effective assistance. The British navy also had a share in the operations.

General Allenby's plan was ambitious. He sought to break the Turkish lines, send his cavalry through and encompass what he describes as "a rectangle five miles in length and twelve in depth, in which the Turkish troops were crowded." By this stroke he planned to cut the enemy's communication and complete his discomfiture by joining hands with the Arabs.

A force vastly superior to the Turkish armies was gathered against the right wing of the enemy's army, near the Mediterranean coast. On the morning of September 19 after an intense bombardment lasting only fifteen minutes, the allied infantry attacked. A great gap was torn in the Turkish lines and through it were sent masses of cavalry which had been held in leash until the moment had arrived.

"Within thirty-six hours," says General Allenby, "all the main avenues of escape for the Seventh and Eighth Turkish Armies had been closed."

All organized enemy resistance ceased and roads were blocked by retreating men and transport. Then the allied air forces hurled themselves at the huddled masses of Turks.

"The Turkish armies melted into nothingness," says the report. "A junction was made with the Arabs, and the way to Damascus and Aleppi was open."

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Mrs. Curtis Gossips With Clara Roberts About Brian.

CHAPTER LXXVII

Brian had flushed when Kenyon Roberts had asked him where the business college was situated. Had he not, Kenyon would have thought nothing of it, as the locality was one in which such a school might well be located. But that sudden flush and embarrassed look, though gone in a moment, told a story to the astute young lawyer.

They had a really gay time while eating the rarebit and Ruth felt sure she was going to be very happy again, now that she was at home. Once more she thought: "I will ask Mr. Mandel not to send me away oftener than is absolutely necessary; and not for so long a time." She would meet Brian more than half way in trying to be together all they could.

When they were preparing for bed, Kenyon Roberts said to his wife:

"I wonder what Hacket is up to?"

"Why—what do you mean?"

"Nothing much—perhaps it is my notion, and I should say nothing about it even to you. But when you and Ruth were making the rarebit I asked him where the school of typing was located, and he said: "Down near the Square," and flushed peculiarly. The queer part of it is that I have seen him several times lately—while Ruth was away—going in that direction with his arms full of paper bundles. Looked like groceries."

"Nonsense! what would he be carrying groceries down there for?"

"I'm sure I don't know! but I hope he isn't carrying on an affair with one of those Village girls. Ruth is too nice a woman to be up against anything like that."

"You remember that Mollie King we met that night we called on the Curtis'?"

"Yes, why?"

"Well, I met Mrs. Curtis the other day. She is pretty much of a gossip, and she told me that Miss King and Brian used to be 'thick as thieves'. Perhaps he goes there. She lives down there near the Square."

"I hope not! Although I recall being favorably impressed with Miss King. She seemed a good sort."

"I liked her, too! Mrs. Curtis said everyone always liked her; and that her friends were astonished when Brian married Ruth. He had been going with Mollie so long, they thought he was going to marry her."

"Too bad Ruth has to be away from him so much," Kenyon yawned. "We men don't like to come home to a womanless home, you know."

"All men aren't like you." Clara answered, then they both forgot Brian and Ruth in planning something for themselves.

"Well, Brian, how did you get along," Ruth asked after their guests had left.

"Pretty well! I'm a little clumsy with my hands. Guess they are too big."

"Have you a good teacher?"

"Pretty fair, I guess.' Had Ruth been looking, she would have seen him flush as he had when Kenyon Roberts had questioned him.

"Man or woman?" Ruth was brushing her hair, and did not look up as she put the query.

"A woman! what pretty hair you have Ruth." adroitly Brian changed the subject.

'Do you think so?" pleased at the compliment.

"Of course I do! did you have a good game to-night?"

"Very! Clara won, and you know how pleased she is when she does win."

"Roberts tell you any news? Has he any more new clients? Brian unconsciously was a bit jealous of Kenyon Roberts, yet he liked him.

"No—but he thought it fine you were studying typing," again Ruth veered around to the subject, "he said he had taught himself, but that he did noa type correctly, altough he made good-looking letters,' and briefs."

"I am learning the touch system."

"He said he wished he had! that it was the thing to do."

Again Brian changed the subject. He never had told an out and out lie to Ruth, he didn't want to; really he had no intention of doing so. Should she ask him, he would frankly tell her that Mollie King was his teacher, but he would prevent the asking if he could. Surely there was nothing wrong in that!—so he reasoned.

And Brian really meant no wrong He had been lonely because Ruth left him; and had taken means to dissipate that loneliness. If Ruth remained at home, he would never leave her after he finished learning to do his own typing.

When he figured this way, he never gave a thought to te comforts Ruth's salary made possible. Comforts he would now miss almost as much as would she.

Tomorrow—Arthur Mandel Knows About Brian's evenings With Mollie.

New Cabinet in Japan

A LENGTHY article by Mr. Ichiro Tokutomi, proprietor and editor of the Tokio Ko-Kumin (Nation) and life member of the House of Peers, discusses the advent of his fellow journalist, Mr. Kei Hara, to the premiership. The three-column editorial article is rather friendly to the new Prime Minister, but is critical regarding his party. Only a brief summary is possible. The editor says:

"In these days of political corruption and turbidity the appearance of the Hara Cabinet is refreshing. It has brought a new atmosphere, new sentiment and a new hope, and at least in this respect Mr. Hara's start has been a great success. The simplicity of the cabinet organization and the selection of the Cabinet membership indicate that the new Ministry has successfully got rid of the red-tapism of the bureaucracy, and the fact is an agreeable sign of the new democratic age now dawning.

"That the Hara Cabinet is by no means the best Cabinet is a foregone conclusion. No one will expect Mr. Hara to form a perfect Cabinet. Still the people are jubilant over the birth of the new Cabinet, because they are tired of the bureaucrats, who have controlled the Japanese politics for the last twenty years. They welcome the Hara Cabinet because it has been made so easily. Mr. Hara found it as easy to form a cabinet as to take his breakfast. None can deny the admirable ability of the new Premier in the making of the Cabinet with such ease.

"Frankly speaking, the Seiyukai party is a political ex-convict. What the party did during the term of the Yamamoto Ministry is fresh in the memory of the people. The people have no confidence in the Seiyukai itself. Still they welcome the appearance of the Seiyukai Cabinet. Why? It is not because they like the Seiyukai, but because they hate bureaucratic government. They had long been desirious of have a party Cabinet, and when the chance for realizing their hope came they found that none but the Seiyukai could organize a Cabinet to succeed the Terauchi Ministry. The Seiyukai Cabinet came into existence not because of the party's strength, but because of the other's weakness. In the world of the blind the one-eyed man is king."

The Nichi-nichi urges the abolition of the Diplomatic Council created by Count Terauchi, which, it admits, was formed with intent to unify the foreign policy of Japan, but the one result was contrary to expectation—"Practically all measures proposed by the Government were opposed by the council. While the Ministry insisted upon the necessity of assisting the northern faction, the council advocated the maintenance of strict neutrality toward the internal policies of China. Then the Government proposed a scheme of Siberian intervention on a large scale, but the proposal was withdrawn on account of the vigorous opposition on the part of the leading members of the council. The Terauchi Ministry created many temporary boards other than the Diplomatic Advisory Council, and all have failed in the realization of their original purposes. What were then the faults of these temporary boards or councils? Because these institutions were not created to meet any real necessity, but simply to obtain supports from many political factions."

The Tokio Hochi says: Mr. Hara is a lucky man, but he should remember that the more the popular sentiment favors him, the greater becomes the responsibility he should bear. Indeed, Mr. Hara should do many things, but above all there are two important things which should be done at the start of his Cabinet. First, is the realization of a free press, the real freedom of press and speech, which the great mass of the people are eagerly anxious to have. The second is a frank and open diplomacy instead of the secret diplomacy of the Terauchi Cabinet. These are the first principles of modern politics. In other words, let the whole people have their own voices freely expressed, and let Japan have her own voice in the international politics. Can Mr. Hara pass the first examination of modern politics?"

The Osaka Mainichi predicts that the bureaucrats will die hard, and adds: "The Hara Ministry is welcomed by the nation. Its popularity is chiefly due to facts. First, the new Premier is a commoner, not a peer. Secondly, the new Cabinet is practically a party Cabinet. Two dangers, however, accompany popularity, the jealousy of enemies and too great an expectation from friends. The Bureaucrats are "die hard" people. Their hearts are still unchanged toward democracy. They keep silent only because at present the general trend of the world is unfavorable to them. In fact, their antipathy to party government is intensified in proportion to the popularity of the latter. So the bureaucrats will always lie in watchful waiting for a chance to make the present Government unpopular, in order to regain their lost power. The nation expects a great deal from the new Ministry. The people are not satisfied with a mere democratic form of government. They want a good government and a new policy. They want their grievances to be redressed in the spirit of democracy. If, therefore, the new Government comes short of the people's expectations, the present popularity of the party system will be turned into despair of democracy itself."

The Tokio Asahi is warm in its praise of the new Cabinet, especially "because it marks the abolition of the policy of secrecy and reticence. The Superintendent-General of Police and Director of the Police Bureau in the Home Office no longer sit with the Cabinet." The editor explains that this means an end of the spy system and of press repression.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well, what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

Mexican Miners.

The living conditions of the workers in the larger mines of Mexico are extremely humble. The average man and his family live in a one room shack, mud house, stone hut or dugout along some bank. Their food consists of dried meat, fried flour cakes, beans and rank coffee. Stoves are found only in the better homes, the laborer's meal being cooked over a little fire between stones. At mealtimes the family gather around the fire, and they sleep on blankets on the floor.

The Huns.

Senator Pindexter, of Washington, recently read to the United States Senate a letter from Dr. T. H. Howard, of S. Louis, stating that a brother of Sergt. A. B. Cole, of East Liverpool, O., who served with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in France, had affidavits to prove conclusively that his brother, the sergeant, was crucified upon a door with German bayonets.

A Strange Suicide Case.

A coroner's jury at Windsor has returned a suicide verdict at an inquest on the body of an unidentified man found in the river with his hands as well as feet tightly bound and $400 worth of Liberty Bonds in the pockets, these furnishing, however, no clue to identity.

A MAN with a Wellington Pipe is in luck. He draws clean, dry smoke—and nothing else. The well catches all moisture and stray tobacco. And the W D C triangle trade-mark means honest French briar, expertly seasoned and fitted. Make this your lucky day. Get a Wellington. All shapes, all sizes, at all good dealers—$1. and up.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Bankruptcy In the Court of Love

A Story For New Year's Day.

By MILLARD MALTBIE

"Bella," said Mr. Dudley to his daughter on the 31st of December, handing her a birthday present and giving her a kiss, "don't you think that a girl of nineteen is old enough to settle down and take some thought for the future?"

"I certainly do, papa."

"Today you begin a new year in your life, and tomorrow you begin a new year of the calendar. Suppose you do some thinking as to your actions during the past few years, make up your mind as to what is necessary in your case and form such resolutions as may seem essential to your future happiness."

"Tell me what you think necessary."

"The main thing I have in mind is this: The most important event in a woman's life—so I consider it—is her marriage—that is, if she is to be a wife. I have noticed in you an unfortunate propensity to regard those things which are preliminaries—in this country, where people usually marry for love—to the union of a man and woman, with the consequent rearing of a family, very much as you would consider a game of tennis.

"This, my daughter, is all wrong. Love is nearer akin to divinity than any other part of our nature. It is serious—very serious. I, your mother, your brothers and sisters, we who form a group so closely cemented, are held together by this one element in the composition of life—love."

"Oh, papa, how beautifully you talk!"

A shadow passed over the father's face, realizing from this remark that he had not produced the impression he desired. He was turning away disappointed when his daughter caught his hand.

"Really, papa, explain what you mean, and I will do what you wish me to do."

"Well, then, to come down to plain language, stop flirting."

"Oh, that's what you are driving at!"

"Yes. Tomorrow morning when you wake up refreshed after a good sleep think over your treatment of worthy and worthless young men, which is based merely on your fancy, and make a resolution that if you have any encouragement to bestow upon any one of them it will be given to some one who should you marry him—and you are now at a marriageable age—will make you a worthy husband, one you can be proud of before the world."

Bella sat musing.

"A penny for your thoughts," said her father.

"I was thinking that tomorrow morning will be a better time to make such resolutions than now."

"Why so?"

"Well, tonight I go to the Seymours to see the old year out and the new year in."

"What has that to do with resolutions?"

"Why, Jimmy Halliday will be there, and yesterday, just because I accepted a rose from Tom Erskine, he passed me on the street, pretending he didn't see me."

"Well?"

"Why, papa, you don't think I'm going to stand that, do you?"

"Do you care especially for Halliday?"

"Care for him! Of course not."

"Then why should you trouble yourself about him?"

"Oh, papa, how stupid you are! You don't understand such things at all. I will give Jimmy tonight as good as he has given me. Tomorrow morning I will make your resolutions"—

"My resolutions!"

"I mean that I will reform as you desire."

Her father, who adored her, gave her another kiss and left her, feeling that his words had been without effect. Not so Bella. She had really been impressed, but not for such general reasons as had been mentioned by her father.

Far down in the bottom of her heart was a soft spot into which a certain quiet, reserved young man, Edward Corwin by name, had settled himself without asking her permission. She had treated him in accordance with her usual methods, with the result that he had locked himself up—to speak figuratively—and all her efforts to get at him had signally failed.

Miss Dudley passed the evening of the 31st of December at Seymours', danced the cotillion with Tom Erskine, failed to favor Jimmy Halliday, smiled on Elliott Tracks and sat out a figure with Fred Swords, when she made up a spat with him, throwing him into ecstasies. Then, when all were assembled about a round table feasting the new year in, she exchanged bonbons with Bob Sparkles, reviving a hope that had nearly died out. As for Edward Corwin, he was not present.

On New Year's morning Bella awoke and, looking at a tiny clock on a bracket, saw that it was 11 o'clock. Then she remembered her New Year's resolutions, and a troubled expression passed over her young face. New Year's morning was not so good a time for reform as she had supposed. A flower lay on a table that she had accepted graciously from Erskine, and she had agreed to go out with him for a ride at 3 in the afternoon. Halliday had been brought to his senses—so she considered it—and had received permission to call at 4 for the purpose of making a humble apology. Sparkles was due in the evening to say something very particular, but since Swords was also expected she did not see how he would have an opportunity.

Bella was very much ashamed of herself. It was easy for her to make resolutions, but how was she to keep them? Keeping resolutions is largely dependent upon freedom from temptation. But she had provided temptations that would beset her all the afternoon and evening of New Year's day. To make matters worse, she remembered several other engagements she had made with young men the day before the evening spent with the Seymours.

The word bankruptcy is usually considered to pertain to financial matters. Nevertheless there are a great many kinds of bankruptcy. There is social bankruptcy, where one is swamped with invitations; there is bankruptcy in one having assumed more duties than he can attend to. Miss Dudley's bankruptcy was that she had permitted too many young men to believe that there was a possibility for each of winning her. It occurred to her that the first resolution she should make was to apply for a discharge in the court of love. After such discharge she might make her resolutions not to become further involved.

Suddenly an idea occurred to her. She would simply "fail." She had heard of merchants failing, which she understood to mean that they simply lay down and let the throng of creditors pour over them. She would cut all her engagements—every one of them.

But how escape them? Flight occurred to her—ignominious flight. But flight alone was repugnant to her nature. Then she considered keeping her appointment with one of her suitors. No; that wouldn't do at all. Next came an idea of making a brand new engagement. She lay for some time turning this last proposition over in her mind, then made one fundamental resolution upon which a superstructure of good intent should be based.

It was 12 o'clock noon on New Year's day. Edward Corwin, lawyer, had been spending the morning in his room at home over an intricate case that he was obliged to work out and was thinking about luncheon when there came a ring at the telephone.

"Mr. Corwin?" came a woman's voice.

"Yes, I am Corwin. Who is it?"

"Bella Dudley."

"Oh, Miss Dudley! Happy New Year!"

"Same to you."

There was a brief pause, after which Miss Dudley proceeded: "This is a fine, sunshiny day. I suppose you are free on a holiday? It seems a pity to stay in the house with nothing to do. I wish they would revive calling."

"I am disengaged for the afternoon."

"How would you like to drive me in the runabout?"

"Very much. But I am surprised that you have no engagement for the day."

"If I told you that I have a lot of them and propose to break them all for you you wouldn't believe me."

"And if you told me you had had no opportunity to make them I wouldn't believe you."

"True. Therefore never mind my engagements. Come at 3 o'clock and we'll have a spin."

"I'll be with you, most assuredly."

"One moment, please."

"A dozen, if you like."

"I would prefer to dine somewhere. Suppose we go to Summerset and dine at the Antlers. That would suit me if it will not be too cold for you coming back at night. Summerset is thirty miles, you know."

"I'll stand the cold."

"Very well. Summerset it is, with dinner at the Antlers, 3 o'clock. We'll go round by Turnersville."

"That will be fine. Goodby."

"Goodby."

* * * * * * *

"Bella," said Mr. Dudley on the morning of the 2d of January, "didn't you find it cold riding last night?"

"We had plenty of robes."

"What time did you get home?"

"About 10 o'clock."

"Several young men called in the afternoon," said Mrs. Dudley, "and two in the evening. They all seemed disappointed in not finding you."

"Did they, mamma. Please pour my coffee."

When the family rose from the breakfast table Bella told her father that she had something to say to him and, taking his hand, affectionately led him into the library.

"Papa," she said, "I've reformed."

"How long will the reformation last?"

"Always. I'm engaged."

"Engaged?"

"Yes, engaged."

"For how long?"

"Forever."

"To whom?"

"Mr. Corwin."

The father embraced her.

"Do you believe the engagement will stick?" asked Bella.

"Yes," said the father.

"Why this man more than the others?"

"The others were Tom, Dick and Harry. This is Mr. Corwin. But how did you figure it out so quickly, sweet heart?"

"I concluded to go into bankruptcy in the court of love. But, realizing that I would get in the same fix again, I concluded to marry the man I really want and remove temptation."

However, that had the same result as bankruptcy, for marriage gives a clearance for all outstanding love debits.

There was never a time when the sacrifices and the help of women were more appreciated than at the present time. Women should learn war-nursing and nursing at home. There is no better way than to study the new edition of the "Common Sense Medical Adviser"—with chapters on First Aid, Bandaging, Anatomy, Hygiene, care of the Sick, Diseases of Women, Mother and Babe, Marriage—to be had at some druggists or send 50c. to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ontario.

If a woman suffers from weak back, nervousness or dizziness—if pains afflict her, the best tonic and corrective is one made up of native herbs, and made without alcohol, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. It is the prescription of Doctor Pierce, used by him in active practice many years and now sold by almost every druggist in the land, in liquid or in tablets. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c. for trial pkg. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are also best for liver and bowel trouble.

Stratford, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was a great help to me. During an expectant period I became all run-down, weak and nervous and could not stay—was nauseated, I also suffered with backaches. I was a complete wreck and was down sick in bed when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' I soon commenced to feel stronger and it finally restored me to health and strength. I could do all my work and felt fine. I had practically no suffering and my baby was strong and healthy.—Mrs. Thomas Burleigh, 206 Erie St.

Case of Necessity.

A man whose every word and action betokened a son of the soil stepped up to the booking office of a provincial railway station. After a cheery "Gude marnin' to yer!" he asked the clerk for a ticket to London.

"You will have a return, won't you?" inquired the clerk.

"What's that?"

"Why, you'll want to come back, won't you?"

"Nea, that I shan't; but we'd better give me a return, all the same."

"But," expostulated the clerk, "if sartinly sha'n't want her come back, a waste of money!"

"Look 'ere, young man," replied the old fellow, in a tone of subdued confidence, "that's my business. I sartinly sha'n't wante ter come back, but I shall just as sartinly have to!"

The Number of Comets.

People who have been surprised and possibly concerned about the number of comets seen this year will be interested in the statement made by Professor Paul Turner in a London lecture on Halley's comet that there may be 50,000,000 comets. Some comets, he says, take thousands of years to return instead of seventy to eighty years, like Halley's. "Comets," the professor adds, "spend most of their time at a great distance from the sun, traveling so slowly as to be almost stationary. Halley's comet describes in a few weeks an arc equal to that over which it spends forty years at the other extreme of its orbit."—Exchange.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of his famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

UNCLE SAM'S ASSAY OFFICE.

Wall Street's Small Gold Refinery Does a Big Business.

There is a real electrolytic refinery in Wall street, New York city, small in size, it is true, but very big in the value of its output. This is the United States assay office.

The relation between the assay office and the public is twofold. First, the assay office buys impure gold and gold-silver alloys from the public. This may be the gold output of a copper refinery or of a cyanide mill or gold scrap from dentists or gold imported from Europe or old jewelry. Second, the assay office refines gold and alloys for the various requirements of the public.

The metallurgical process carried out at the assay office is therefore the separation of the gold from the silver and the other metal impurities and the production of the metals in pure form.

Formerly the sulphuric acid parting process was employed, but the electrolytic refining process has now been universally introduced into the United States mints, and when a few years ago the New York assay office was damaged by fire and it became necessary to rebuild and re-equip the office thoroughly it was decided to introduce electrolytic refining. The new equipment is thoroughly up to date.

In buying gold or gold alloys from the public the assay office has fixed only two restrictions. These are that the material shall contain not less than 20 per cent of gold and silver and shall be worth at least $100.—Metallurgical and Chemical Engineering.

STARRED IN SPORTS.

College Athletes Who Have Attained Fame In Public Life.

A surprisingly large number of men now in the public eye were athletic "stars" during their college days. President emeritus of Harvard, Charles William Eliot, was a member of the varsity crew of 1853, and the present head of the same university, Dr. Abbott Lawrence Lowell, was a member of the track team of 1877, his specialty being the one mile run.

Thomas B. Reed, the famous "czar" of the house of representatives, rowed No. 7 on the boat crew Bowdoin college put on the water in 1858, and Robert E. Peary won the baseball throwing contest at the same college in 1875. Robert Bacon, former assistant secretary of state and ambassador to France, was a member of both the football and track teams of Harvard in 1879, while Thomas Lee McClung, former treasurer of the United States, was captain of the Yale football team of 1891. H. S. Graves, chief forester of the United States, was quarterback on the same team, while Gifford Pinchot, his predecessor, was a member of the Yale football squad of 1888.

Bishop Franklin S. Spalding of Utah was a member of the Princeton football team of 1886, while Robert E. Speer, international secretary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, was a star of the great 1888 team of the same college. Richard Harding Davis was a notable end rush at Lehigh during his college days, and Frederick Remington, the artist, played on the Yale rush line while in college.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Marvelous Cycling.

Once again the conversation had veered round to thrilling adventures.

"That reminds me of an experience I had some time ago," remarked a member. "I was riding a brakeless bicycle down a steep hill when all of a sudden the chain snapped and I careened down the rest of the hill quicker than greased lightning.

"The road down the hill took a turn at direct right angles, and in the corner of the angle stood a cottage. I was wondering what the verdict would be at the inquest when I saw a man rest a plank of wood against the eaves of the cottage.

"I went straight for the plank, over the roof and down the other side. Luckily the cottager's wife and daughters were shaking carpets, and, alighting on an outstretched carpet, I was gently lowered to the ground."

A dead, dull silence descended on the company, which was broken by the hissing of a soda siphon.—London Tit-Bits.

Her Rapid Rise.

"She began as a chorus girl."

"Well?"

"But recently she has outstripped some of the leading prima donnas."

"Are you referring to her progress or her costumes?"—Kansas City Journal.

THE BLUE PENNANT

And a Little Wisp of Stained and Tattered Silk.

By PHILIP KEAN.

Helen Marshall was always dressed with a demureness that made an effective foil for the bronze brightness of her hair, the warm ivory of her skin, the red of her lips. Today she wore blue—a trim tailored gown of deep colored cloth, a little cocky felt hat and a great bunch of violets that outshone all the other blues except that of the pennant which she carried at the end of a slender cane.

"You beauty!" Holden said under his breath as he took his seat beside her on the grand stand.

She turned quickly.

"Oh, Irwin," her face was brilliant with color, "it's worth everything to see you again! Aunt Sue," she said to the lady beside her, "this is Irwin Holden, the famous halfback of two years ago."

"The king is dead! Long live the king!" Irwin quoted solemnly. "There have been so many famous halfbacks, Helen, that it isn't any wonder that Mrs. McDonald doesn't remember me."

"But I do remember," Mrs. McDonald assured him. "Helen has talked of you so much—and," she hesitated, "of your accident."

"I haven't been able to walk well on two feet since," Holden said grimly, "and this is the first game I have dared let myself see. It makes me wild."

"To think that you can't play!" Helen's tone was sympathetic.

"To know I can't ever do things that make a man worth while!" bitterly.

"But you have done so many things that are worth while, and they tell me that you are writing a book."

"Oh, a book!" His tone was scornful.

"You might have let me know what you were doing!" she complained. "I think our old friendship deserved that."

He glanced down at her.

"Ah, our friendship," he said. "I had two good feet when we cemented that, Helen. I wasn't a dummy on crutches."

"Irwin," she flashed out reproachfully, "as if that made any difference!"

"But it does make a difference," he said as he bent over her. "You know you worship strength in a man, don't you?"

"Yes," she agreed quietly, "but not always mere physical strength."

"The one isn't much without the other. Look at those fellows now."

Down the field came the teams. The bands of the opposing sides crashed out the good old tunes, college yell succeeded college yell, and the banks of spectators stretching up and up on the seats in solid masses of blue and crimson were agitated to uproariousness.

"Isn't it fine? Isn't it fine?" Helen said breathlessly, having cheered the blue team to the echo.

Holden nodded.

"They are bound to win," he said. "They are made of the right stuff."

"I know only one of them personally," Helen told him—"Van Dorn."

"He's the strongest man in the lot. He's an ideal halfback."

"He is ideal in more ways than one," she agreed.

He flashed a quick glance at her.

"I have heard you thought so."

"Who told you?"

"Some of the fellows."

She turned her back on him squarely.

"I didn't suppose that you talked me over with the fellows," she said over her shoulder.

"I don't," uncomfortably, "but one couldn't help hearing that Van Dorn is awfully daffy over you."

"So were you—two years ago."

She said it daringly, giving him a glimpse of flaming cheeks and indignant eyes, and then once more he was forced to contemplate the knot of bronze hair under the cocky hat.

His face went white, but he said quietly, "We are missing the best of the game," and turned his attention to the field.

All about them people were absorbed by the play. Aunt Sue, unlearned and unlettered in football lore, was oblivious to everything else. These two alone thought of other things.

It was at Van Dorn's touchdown that the place went wild.

"Oh, he's great, great, great!" Helen enthused as she waved her pennant frantically. "I haven't seen anything like it since the last game you played, Irwin. Oh, do you remember the little blue pennant that I made you pin to your sweater for luck—and it didn't bring you luck!"

"No," he said dully, "it didn't bring me luck. I lost the game, I lost the strength I gloried in—I lost you, Helen."

"No, no," she protested. "You knew you always had my friendship, Irwin."

"But I didn't want friendship, and you knew it, and I knew it. And I hadn't the right to ask for anything else, and so I kept away from you. But after two years of separation the temptation to see you was too great, so I sent you the tickets and asked you to come to the game."

"The whole world was changed when I read your letter," she said simply. "I have missed you so, dear boy."

Then for a moment he let himself go.

"Oh, Helen, Helen!" he said brokenly.

But the game was over, and a tumultuous throng poured out of the seats.

"Irwin wants us to go to dinner with him, Aunt Sue," Helen said as they went down the steps.

In their walk across the green they attracted more than usual attention, the younger boys admiring Helen's beauty, the older ones recognizing in the man with the crutch the famous halfback of two years ago, who had then been reported engaged to the girl by his side.

Van Dorn, flushed with victory, came up to their table at the college inn.

"I've won your pennant, Miss Marshall," he said, looking like a young god with his great, strong figure, his fair hair tossed back from his forehead.

"Did I promise it?" Helen asked uncertainly.

"Indeed you did," he stated securely, "and I shall wear it like a knight for his lady."

With her eyes avoiding Holden's, Helen untied the blue trophy slowly from the cane. In the sight of the whole room Van Dorn pinned it to his sleeve. He did it triumphantly, bending over her with an air of possession that made Holden set his lips sternly and turn to a tense study of the menu.

"May I come back and go home with you?" Van Dorn asked, but Helen shook her head.

"Irwin will take us," she said, "but I wish if you have a minute you'd show Aunt Sue the trophy room. She has never seen it."

As they went away she faced Holden.

"Oh, he took things so for granted," she told him. "I promised as I might to any of the college fellows. But what will people think?"

"What I think," Holden said slowly—"what you are going to marry Van Dorn."

Her steady glance met his.

"I am not going to marry him."

"Why not?" he probed.

"Because of this"—

About her neck at the end of a long chain she wore a locket of dark blue enamel marked with a "Y" in seed pearls.

"You remember it?" she asked as she opened it. "You gave it to me on the evening before that last game."

"Yes," he said, "I remember," and then as he saw what it contained he stopped.

Within was a wisp of blue silk stained and torn and crushed into that small space.

"It is all that was left of the little silk pennant that I gave you for luck," she told him. "After you were hurt made them let me have it. I have kept it ever since."

His hand closed over it eagerly.

"Dear," he said, and his voice broke, "you know how I love you."

"I have never doubted it—even when you stayed away."

"How could I come? How could I ask you to marry me?"

"How does any man ask?" blushingly.

"But other men are not cripples."

"Oh, what difference does it make?" she flung out. "Haven't you the same mind and heart and soul as before?"

The light that illumined his face transfigured it.

"Marry me," he cried, "and mind and heart and soul shall go to the making of your happiness!"

Van Dorn came back presently, making triumphant progress with Aunt Sue in tow. On his arm was the blue pennant for all the world to gaze, but Holden's eyes rested on it serenely, for above his heart, hidden from the profane glances of the multitude, was the little stained wisp of sapphire silk, the token of his dear lady's favor.

Trackless Trolleys.

A speaker at the recent meeting of the Municipal Tramways Association of Great Britain discussed trackless trolleys. He said that their total cost of operation under ordinary conditions was at least 20 per cent to 25 per cent less per car mile than that of motor busses and that they were equal in flexibility to the motor busses for the ordinary roadway width—namely, thirty to thirty-five feet. Trackless trolley systems are now in use in eight different districts in England, and several other undertakings are under construction.—Electric Railway Journal.

The Lost Country, Sogdiana.

In the deserts of Chinese Turkestan the sands have buried a vast civilization that was forgotten for centuries. The dry sand preserved intact numbers of manuscripts in an unknown language written in unknown characters. These M. Gauthiot, a young Frenchman, has managed to decipher by the fortunate finding of fragments that had notes in other known languages. This discovery, it is expected, will lead to the world gaining a much further knowledge of the lost country, Sogdiana, and its people, mentioned by Strabo and Herodotus.

An Improved Searchlight.

New value has been given to searchlights for ocean liners by a device which controls the direction of the rays from a telescope. The observer can look through the telescope, swinging it from side to side seeking icebergs or any other objects, and the searchlight mounted near at hand, or perhaps high above, will make the same swings, keeping the light always directed at the point toward which the telescope is directed. The control of the searchlight is entirely by electrical mechanism.—Exchange.

Apsley Case Was Disposed Of By Magistrate Langley

Case Instituted Against Mr. Andrew Post Was Dismissed—Fines Imposed on Two Defendants.

THE JUDGMENT

In the County Police Court this morning His Worship O. A. Langley gave Judgment in the cases of the King vs. Dorland Doxee, Andrew Post and William Colby. The defendants were charged under the Public Health Act with keeping the school known as School Section Number 1 near Apsley, in the Township of Chandos, open after it had been ordered closed by the local Board of Health and the Medical Health Officer for the Township.

The charges were originally laid against the above defendants and Milton Post, who owing to the fact that Milton Post was unable to leave his house through illness, the charges against him were, by consent, dropped.

The Evidence

The trial took place in Apsley on the seventeenth of December before His Worship Police Magistrate O. A. Langley, Mr. F. D. Kerr appearing on behalf of the Crown and Mr. J. A. O'Brien acting for all the accused. The evidence was gone into in detail to see that Spanish Influenza was prevalent in the Township of Chandos at the time the Medical Health Officer ordered the schools closed. On behalf of the Defendants Mr. O'Brien raised various points which were argued at length before His Worship Mr. Langley in Peterborough on the nineteenth of December and His Worship Mr. Langley in Peterborough on the nineteenth of December and His Worship, owing to the number of questions involved and by consent of the solicitors for both sides adjourned the matter until this morning for judgment.

Signed A Petition.

It appeared that the notification given by the Medical Health Officer was only given to the Defendant, Doxee, that is the notification requiring the schools to be closed. The Defendants Doxee and Colby were trustees and the Defendant Andrew Post was a rate payer. His Worship in delivering judgment, found that there was no evidence to connect the Defendant, Post, with the charges as under the Public School Act. The control of the schools is given to the Trustees and the mere fact that Andrew Pos signed a petition to the Trustees requesting them to re-open the schools was not sufficient to implicate him in the offence. It appears that the first notice given to the Defendant Doxee was given on a Sunday but His Worship held that as it was a case of emergency and the danger of contagion was most grave that he would not disregard the notice even though it were given on a Sunday. He according discharged the defendants Post and Colby on the first charge but fined the defendant Doxee the minimum fine and expressing the disapproval of the manner in which the notification was given.

On the second charge of keeping the school open on the 25th. His Worship took the view that Colby had notice of the notification given by the Medical Health Officer and could not contend that the notice never came to his attention.

His Worship accordingly, on the second charge, fined both the defendants, Colby and Doxee the minimum fine, imposing only one fine to be levied from both defendants on this charge and discharging the defendant, Post.

JUVENILES FREQUENT PUBLIC PLACES

Mr. G. W. Powell, agent for the Children's Aid Society, has been looking into the case of juveniles frequenting or working in bowling alleys or other public places after the regulation time. A public place is any place where the public is at liberty to congregate and a juvenile is a boy or girl under sixteen years of age. The proprietors of the different bowling alleys throughout the city have signified their willingness to meet with the wishes of the Inspector, and no trouble is anticipated in this connection.

Cold Weather is Reported on the Way

Cold Wave is Headed Towards Ontario—Rigid Weather in Chicago.

Canadian Press:

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Chicagoans scurried to work to-day in a temperature of four degrees below zero, with assurance from the weather forecaster that it would be colder before it became warmer. The city health commissioner and other physicians declared cold weather had brought a lessening in the number of influenza cases. Rigid weather prevailed throughout the middle west, practically every state reporting the lowest temperature of the winter. The cold wave is bound east toward Ontario.

Transport Wrecked

Helpless Soldiers Were Lowered in Stretchers.

FIRE ISLAND, Jan. 3.—In a heavy sea that tossed powerful motor boats around like peanut shells, wounded Americans from the battlefields of France, were rescued this morning from the hospital transport "Northern Pacific," which is ashore here.

Helpless soldiers in stretchers were lowered over the slippery sides of the wrecked steamer. They were taken aboard launches from the cruiser Des Moines and Columbia and transferred to relief vessels rolling in the heavy swell as near to the "Northern Pacific" as they dared to approach.

TROOPS TAKEN OFF.

(Canadian Press.)

NEW YORK, January 3. — Information that approximately one thousand troops including some of the wounded, had been removed from the transport "Northern Pacific" aground at Fire Island, was received by the Navy Department officials here at 10.30 a.m. to-day. This indicates that fewer than 500 soldiers remained on board and the work of removing these in small boats and with a breaches buoy was progressing favorably, it was said.

THE WORLD AT PRAYER

Next Sunday is a very special day all over the Christian world. It is the first day of the Universal week of prayer and this year the people have to return thanks for that for which they have prayed for over four years. If the Christian people believe that the victory is of the Lord there will be no excuses when it comes to this special hour of worldwide thanksgiving.

To insure the presence of every member of every family in the House of God next Sunday morning and evening will require some planning ahead and some real sacrifices; but in our distress cried unto God and felt that no sacrifice would be too great if He would only give us Victory and peace. These have come and the old year with its strife and sorrow has gone. The first full week of the year is to be one of world-wide celebration in Special Services.

What will Peterborough do on Sunday? Shall we "Crowd His Gates With Thankful Songs?" Where there is sickness it is another matter but nothing less should be allowed to interfere with the presence of every membr of each family young and old. The list of subjects, speakers and the places of meeting for the five evenings of next week will appear in our issue of tomorrow.

HON. F. B. CARVELL WILL VISIT PETERBORO AND SPEAK AT THE GRAND

Hon. F. B. Carvell, K.C., M.P., Minister of Public Works, will visit Peterborough on Wednesday, January 8th, in response to an invitation presented by Mayor Duncan when he was in Ottawa for the purpose of urging the Government to assume a share of the cost of the Hunter Street bridge. Mr. Carvell will address a public meeting in the Opera House on Wednesday night, to which the citizens are invited. It is hoped that a large audience will greet the Minister, whose visit may not be without some significance to some of the proposed Government undertakings that have been in abeyance during the war.

CHINESE APATHY

A Protest Against the Abject Surrender of Germany to the Poles.

SITUATION HOPELESS

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, January 3. — A protest against "abject surrender to the Poles," which is advocated by Herr Ernst of the Prussian ministry, is printed by the Zeitung Ammittag" today. The minister who has just returned from the border, declares that while the invasion by the Poles could have been prevented a fortnight ago, the situation is now hopeless, and that Germany could not regain the teritory occupied by the Poles even with a division ordered to the district—a division, he declared, which it was now impossible to assemble.

The Zeitung Amittag declares that these statements cannot be true and it asks why the government has done nothing in the matter. It characterizes the attitude of the government as "Chinese apathy." The Zeitung Ammittag also expresses disquiet over the evacuation of Riga by the Germans and the danger of a Bolshevik invasion of Germany. The government members are in danger today, and are reported to be considering what action to take for the protection of German cities from teh Poles.

POULTRY SHOW AT ARMOURIES NEXT WEEK

The Peterboro Poultry Association have laid their plans for a bigger and better show this year, and offer new attractions at the exhibition which will be held in the armouries on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Illustrated lectures on poultry raising and dressing, also upon back yard gardening and poultry housing will be given by Miss Mary Yates of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. There will also be demonstration of egg candling and other features by the Ottawa Department. The War Veterans will have a refreshment booth. With every admission ticket is given a guess on the number of beans in the jar shown in the Kingan Hardware window for two prizes of pure bred fowl.

SPECIAL CALL TO RED CROSS WORKERS

A special call has gone forth for Red Cross workers to make garments for war refugees. The Red Cross workroom in the Public Library will be open beginning Monday, January 6th. Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each succeeding week throughout this month will also be devoted to the making of these garments and it is hoped that a big effort will be put forth to make as many as possible of these garments, as this will in all probability finish Red Cross work in this city. It is hoped that every woman who can sew will be present Monday and each succeeding Red Cross day in order that this final drive may be a complete success.

Airplane Record of 30,000 Feet

ESTABLISHED A NEW ALTITUDE RECORD

Special to The Examiner:

IPSWICH, England, Jan. 3.—A new world airplane altitude record of 30,300 feet has been established here today by Captain Lang, Pilot and Lieut. Blowers, observer. Their motor stopped at that height due to exhaustion of their petrol supply, but they landed safely. Both Lang and Blowers are in the hospital with frozen hands and feet. The latter fainted at twenty thousand feet when the ship in which he was breathing oxygen from a specially designed apparatus became disconnected. He did not recover consciousness until the landing was made. The flight was made in a British built plane.

The previous altitude record was 28,900 feet, made by Catpain Schroeder at Dayton, Ohio, September 1918. He also carried a special oxygen apparatus. He landed about two hundred miles from his starting point, which is in Suffolk county, about 70 miles from London.

NORTHLAND ENQUIRY

Returned Soldiers Give Evidence—A Porkshop for Christmas Dinner.

LOOKED LIKE COFFINS

(Special to Examiner.)

OTTAWA, January 3. — Returned soldiers opened their story at the Northland enquiry this morning and their complaints were largely regarding bunking and the way food was served to them. The Christmas dinner served when the Northland left in Halifax harbor, consisted, according to the description of one soldier, of one pork chop, with one and a half inches of fat, and Christmas pudding, served by hand, instead of dishes—passably good. The Northland was then quarantined. The men have been told to take down their mattresses ,which were piled above. They had to eat dinner the best way they could. The mattresses gave off a musty odor, and it was not very pleasant, said one of the witnesses. It was stated that there was not enough food or room, two men were bunked in the same room, and the bunks looked like coffins. Men who had been wounded found it difficult to climb to the top bunks.

Water Scarce.

The scarcity of drinking water as well as water for washing purposes was complained of. Witness told that for the last three days they could not get a drink of water. Most of them purchased water from the canteen to satisfy their thirst. One witness said that in stormy weather latrines were flooded into the cabins causing unhealthy conditions.

THE WEATHER

The weather here is comparatively mild, entirely different conditions prevail west of the Great Lakes. Twenty-five to thirty-five below zero are registered in numerous places from Duluth westward to the Rocky Mountains and northward to the bounds of civilization. While the colder weather has been expected and forecast by "Probs" for several days past, it has not materialized, and there will not likely be much change until the winds which have been from the east, shift to the south-west. This will probably not be long.—W. P.

"The Better 'Ole" Draws Big Houses at The Grand

Great Film Success Aptly Described as "The British Birth of a Nation" —See It To-night or To-morrow.

Undoubtedly the greatest film success that has played Toronto in more than a year is the stupendous all-British production, "The Better 'Ole," which is the attraction at the Grand Theare all this week. This production takes one right up to the front line trenches with the British Tommies and takes up right in to their every day life more than any other motion picture production that has ever been staged. Old Bill, Bert and Alf might be thought unusual characters, but many returned heroes who have spent long weary months in the trenches declare that these humorous musketeers may be found in nearly every part of the line. They portray the type of men that England sent against the barbarous Hun, who made a determined but unsuccessful bid for world domination.

"The Better 'Ole" might well be called the "British Birth of a Nation" The enthusiasm which greeted the showing of the production at the Grand shows conclusively that the Peterboro public have placed their stamp of approval, on this cinema as have as the motion picture audiences throughout the British Isles.

The picture will appear at the Grand to-night and all day to-morrow and without doubt there will be large crowds again on hand to see it.

Statement of Government's Policy

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Jan. 3.— Reports from German-Scandinavian sources of British naval and military activities in the provinces, have created a demand by the British press for a clear statement of the government's policy regarding Russia.

According to the Deutsche Tages Zeitung, of Berlin, the British have presented an ultimatum to the German Supreme Coommand that the German troops must not only prevent a further advance by the Bolsheviki, but this order is not carried out, the German paper says, the Entente will march into Germany. There is no confirmation of these reports from any official source.

THE PEACE PROGRAMME

President Wilson Will Make Another Speech To-night.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME

(By Robert J. Bender.)
(United Press.)

ROME, January 3. — Pursuing his policy of making the public a party to the preliminary peace discussions, President Wilson will talk directly to the people of Italy, as he talked to those of France and England.

For this purpose it was understood to-day, he will visit the great industrial centres of Milan and Turin, leaving for those cities to-morrow night.

The President's first important speech in Italy, however, will be declared at a state dinner to-night. He is confident of clearing up any misunderstanding that may linger in the minds of the Italian people and statesmen regarding his peace programme.

Following the formal reception in the Quirinal, the President called upon Queen Mother Margherita, widow of the late King Humbert. Later he went to the Municipal Palace on the summit of the historic Capitoline Hill, where he was made a citizen of Rome. Important conferences were scheduled for this afternoon and to-morrow. He will have an audience with Pope Benedict to-morrow.

PRESIDENT WELCOMED.

United Press.)
(By Henry Wood.)

ROME, Jan. 3. — President Wilson's special train arrived at the station here punctually at 10.30 o'clock this morning.

A tremendous cheer went up as the train stopped in front of the Royal waiting room, which had been transformed into a gaily decorated parlor, carpeted with rich tapestries and replete with rare flowers.

The President alighted on the platform and was heartily greeted by King Victor Emmanuel, Queen Elena and the Duchess D'Acsta. He was received at the station by King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena, members of the government and representatives of the local authorities. An immense crowd welcomed the President with great enthusiasm. The newspapers unite in their welcome to the President.

HAMILTON USHERS IN THE NEW YEAR WITH MYSTERIOUS MURDER

HAMILTON, Jan. 3.—The new year was ushered in her by a mysterious murder. Tony Martino, 16 Murray street west, an Italian about 25 years of age, was found fatally shot at the side entrance of a store kept by Rullo Perry. There was a New Year's party there, which was attended by about 40 persons. They all claim, so far, as the police can find out, that the murdered man did not attend the party.

TRANSPORT COMPLAINTS

The appointment of Mr. Justice Hodgins to investigate the complaints of returned soldiers in regard to conditions on the transport Northland, will be welcomed and it is hoped that the inquiry will be exhaustive. The Canadian people are indignant that our victorious soldiers returning from overseas should have occasion to complain so bitterly of the treatment accorded them on their homeward voyage. Men, who came back in the Northland state that the food was on a number of occasions unfit for consumption and that the living conditions were intolerable while it is also alleged that there was petty grafting on board and that unreasonable charges were made for some articles that were sold. There have been similar complaints in regard to other transports and it is a matter of regret that after four and a half years of war there should be any foundation for the resentment that is evidently felt by the men who are returning from overseas. The best is none too good for these men and it is apparent that they are getting far from the best.

WAR GRATUITY ALLOWANCES.

There is considerable dissatisfaction among many discharged soldiers over the new war gratuity allowances in so far as they concern the men who did not reach the firing line, through no fault of their own. It has been announced that the allowance is made retro-active to the men who were discharged before November 11, who have seen service at the front in an actual theatre of war, while its provisions apply to all soldiers whether they reached the front or not who have been, or may be, discharged since November 11th last. The men already discharged, who did not get to France, but were invalided home from England, complain that the Act favours a conscripted man at the expense of the volunteers. Draftees who did not reach the front and who are still to be discharged will get a portion of the gratuity, but the increased allowance is not to be given volunteers who were discharged before November 11th, provided they failed to get to the front. It is altogether probable that the government will be petitioned to make the measure retro-active for the men who went to England as well as for those who got to France.

REFORMS SUGGESTED.

The usual after-election gossip on the results of the municipal elections is already suggesting alterations in the existing methods of conducting such contests. The apathy and indifference of many electors, who remained away from the polls, and refused to exercise their franchise, are responsible for one proposal which is to the effect that ratepayers who cannot show good reason, such as absence from the city or illness, for their failure to vote, should be deprived of their franchise for a year or two. The principle of the suggestion is good, but there are obvious difficulties in the way of enforcing such a measure that renders its adoption here or elsewhere as not in the least probable.

Another alteration that is being discussed, and that is undoubtedly inspired by the success of the Labour candidates in Wednesday's contest, is that in the election of aldermen and members of the Board of Education, the electors shall be required to vote for exact number of candidates to be elected, and that any ballot on which a lesser number has been voted for than is actually to be chosen shall be declared spoiled. The object of such a plan of course is to prevent voting by slates, and after all the only way to get the full opinion of the electorate on the merits of the different candidates, is to require them to vote for the exact number that is to be elected. In the election for Aldermen this year, the new regulation that at least four candidates should be voted for was tried for the first time, and the Labour organizations used it to great advantage. The Labour vote obviously went to the four Labour candidates, and to no one else, and other bodies which endorsed slates backed their selections in the same manner, so that instead of single "plumpers" these were registered on a four-man scale on this occasion.

A JARRING NOTE

While the leading statesmen of the great nations are preparing for the peace congress which it was hoped would not only end the European war speedily, but would provide guarantees against wars in the future, an ominous note comes from Washington. Joseph Daniels, secretary of the navy in the United States government, announces that it is the intention to speed up naval construction until the American navy is "big enough to lick any other navy in the world."

There is only one other navy in the world which is more powerful than the American navy. It is the British navy. Secretary Daniels' announcement is therefore a deliberate threat to Britain, an official warning that the United States proposes to wrest from Britain the supremacy at sea.

If the threat is to be taken seriously, the German peril has passed only to give place to the American peril.

The far-flung scattered British Empire requires a very large navy—the largest in the world—to protect its lines of communication. The United States needs no such navy power. One must sorrowfully asume, therefore, that the intention to have "the biggest navy in the world," one strong enough "to lick any other navy" means preparation for aggressive warfare by the U.S. government.

It would be a thousand pities to have another ruinous competition in naval armament, with the almost certain result that the vast fleets brought into existence would be obliged sooner or later to pit their strength one against the other. It was hoped, when the armistice was signed, that that sort of insanity was over and done with for good. But if the U.S. government is determined to go ahead with its naval programme, the British Empire will not be able to decline the challenge. It will be necessary for the Dominions and India as well as Britain to undertake an extensive programme of naval construction in accordance with plans to be carefully considered. It will be advisable also to make sure of the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

There is, however, some reason to hope that Secretary Daniels' threat has not the serious significance which it appears to have. It may well be doubted if President Wilson, while giving public assurances of his complete agreement with the British government on the question of naval policy, is secretly cherishing an ambition to have Britain displaced by the United States as the first naval power.—Hamilton Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The new year's honors to Canadian soldiers have been richly earned.

The Toronto Mayoralty Elections seem to be a yearly test to allow other aspirants a chance to see how close they can come to Tommy Church's figures.

The Conservative machine in Toronto is apparently not well disciplined. The party leaders sent out word to support Foster for mayor and he finished at the bottom of the column.

Voice of The People.

OUR SOLDIERS

The absorbing thought and topic of the time is the return and demobilization of our soldiers. The dailies, and the weeklies, and the magazines are full of it. It is being discussed on the street, in the cafe, and on the market square.

Our people, as a whole are opposed to the Canadian army being held in Germany as part of the army of occupation. From the letters coming to soldiers' relatives in Canada, it is plain that nothing would please Tommy Canuck better than an order to "bout face and embark for "God's Country." We are fed up on desolation and destruction. We will be glad to chuck the kahki and get into "civies" once more, &c., &c. So read their letters and who will blame them after three and four years of a life where they have been continually on the rack of torture.

The decision of the Government to pay disabled soldiers a double rate for six months after discharge, has met with general commendation and has cleared up a lot of anxiety and discontent. This arrangement should be retroactive, to include all men who have been invalided home since the war began. We have many broken heroes who went down early in the conflict. These are nobly facing a life of limitations. They must do what they can, not what they would. They must abandon ambitions which they may have entertained up to the fateful fourth of August, 1914, and strive to be content with a lower standard for the rest of their natural lives. If our government shall blunder in any manner in their present treatment of these men, let it be on the side of generosity. There will be no protest from the people of this Dominion.

"Low, Hal! when did you blow in?"

"On the 9.15 train."

"Down for Christmas, eh?"

"Yep. What's going on?"

"Ball. Our old push."

"That so? Ain't you going?"

"Guess not. This timber foot won't two-step, old man."

"And my Vimy shames me. Let's see the pictures."

There is another gap in the regulations regarding the discharge of our soldiers, which will bar discussion. We are informed that each soldier when getting his discharge, is given the option of retaining his uniform, but, if he prefers it, may surrender the uniform and receive a sum of money in lieu of it. The bulk of our men, weary of four years in khaki, will emulate Omar Khayam and "take the cash and let the khaki go." Thus the militia department will stand to accumulate a stock of khaki, which would delight the soul of any ragman. And what will the militia department do with it? The regulations say burn it. And the regulations, like the laws of the Medes and Persians, cannot be altered. We have been drilled in schemes for conservation of resources for the last three years. We have done things we had never dreamed of doing, and we have left undone many things we formerly thought essential, in order to "conserve." Now to the returned soldier, his old uniform will have a certain sentimental valie. He would like to have it for holiday celebration and parades. Therefore why not let him retain his kahki and hand him the allowance as well. The purpose of the latter is to provide him with civilian clothes, which he discarded when he answered his country's call, and it is coming to him. Let the department then emulate the spirit of the people of the Dominion and conserve by allowing the men to retain their uniforms, in which they have performed as doughty deeds as ever did the knights of the red cross, of story and legend, when they went forth in their coats of mail, and their helmets and greaves of brass.

If the department shall persist in burning the old uniforms, it will mean an item like this:

To 500,000 uniforms, at $5.00 each $2,500,000.00

And that is surely putting it low enough. Some fire!

One Interested.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—Regarding the visit of the Hon. F. B. Carvell to Peterborough at the invitation of the Mayor and city may I be permitted to say that besides having him speak at the meeting in the Opera House on the proposed public works he should be asked to speak on industrial relationships. Mr. Carvell is a man of great ability and frankness. He is not one of those who leave difficulties worse than they find them through that form of incapacity known as discretion. He can think, speak and act and should be heard by every man who takes an interest in the world-wide complications now awaiting adjustment. The return from conditions of peace is as important, as peremptory and difficulty as was the turning from the conditions of peace to those of war or nearly so. The Reconstruction Conference called in December in the U. S. was the largest gathering of business men and organizers ever held in the U. S. Two things stand out prominently in all the reports of these Conferences. One is the necessity of going on with all manner of public works of a necessary character without delay. The other is the desire for better industrial relations between capital and Labour. It would take too long to go into the whole matter but it is clear that the question of capital and Labour can only be solved on what may be called a partnership basis. In partnership aone is there the full assurance of a settlement of this problem It will make for content, for justice, for efficiency, for business methods, for industrial peace, for steady employment and for an organized and united nationhood. No longer will there then continue that so-called feedom of action and of trade which results so often in the triumph of the few over the unorganized efforts of the many. Both sides and all sides must discover a fair method of doing business for employer wage-earner and consumer. This the government of every nation should feel it necessary to see to. Mr. Carvell should speak of it.

It is not a superhuman matter and may be the best result after all of the disturbance of industry due to the great war and the resumption of the conditions of peace.

J. H. Burnham.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Kindly allow me to make a statement and ask a question through the medium of your valuable journal.

On January 2nd my mover at the recent nominations in North Monaghan received a telephone message from some unknown party, saying that if he, the mover of my nomination, did not get me called off that it would hurt his business. Have things come to such a pass in Municipal Elections that a man is to be denied the privilege of using his franchise? Because he is in business and moves a nomination he is to be threatened in this way? Is this liberty, justice or fair play? It seems to be the intention to arrange affairs in this Township so that the people of this end are not to have any voice in the council, and all they are expected to do is to pay two-thirds of the taxes and smile.

This savors somewhat of the Black Hand. Do the resident, suburban and the non-resident urban, ratepayers wish to be muzzled in this way?

Thanking you Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours truly,

H. B. RYE.

To the Editor the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—In regard to the Monaghan election for Reeve and Deputy Reeve, I say every rate payer should mark his ballot for Mr. McIntosh and Mr. Bell for I don't see any sense in an election for they are both good men.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for this space, I remain,

T. O. Arnott.

Feeling in Russia Against Bolsheviki, But Red Army is Strong.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Advices to the State Department to-day announce that returning Russian prisoners of war on coming out of Austria-Hungary and Germany are being offered 300 rubles monthly, clothing and food, to join the Bolsheviki Red Army. According to this information, few of the prisoners accept this offer and popular feeling in Russia is strongly against the Bolsheviki. Nevertheless the power of the Bolsheviki is reported on the increase since the recapture of Kazan and Samara from the Czechs. Their forces are now said to be concentrating on the Ukrainian front, retiring from the Ural mountains and other fronts because of food conditions. The prisoners' uneatable black bread was sold for 15 rubles, a Russian pound.

One prisoner declared that when typhus struck the Russian prison camps in Germany, his own comrades died at the rate of 500 a days and were buried three deep in a grave. It was reported that 750,000 died in prison.

It is also stated that vodka again is being manufactured by the Government and is selling for six rubles a pint.

PEACE CELEBRATION WEEK

From January 4 To January11

Celebrating the Glorious Conclusion of Peace By a Store Wide Occasion in Full Keeping With the Spirit of the Times

You all know how London and all cities throughout the British Empire went raving wild with joy and enthusiasm when the report was flashed on November 11th that Germany had accepted the armistice terms and the world-wide war was at an end.

We know that if you could have seen that wild, mad crowd that gathered in the streets of London when they first received the news that eventful day in November, you would have remembered a sight so completely different from anything you had ever seen in all your life.

From every office building there began to rain down scraps of colored paper until the whole sky-line of London was a mass of fluttering snow from a victory sky.

It was a sight that no one who witnessed will ever forget as long as they live.

I am merely mentioning happy London as a preface to this Peace Celebration event, because all of us know just what happened here in our city, and to repeat, the rain of joy and happiness that was witnessed right here in Peterboro would take up valuable space for other subjects.

And so since the first outburst of this Peace Celebration has subsided, it is now fitting and proper that this store should give vent to its celebration plans in a manner that has been in contemplation for many months.

It is therefore our privilege to invite our customers to come and partake of the savings from former costs that have been provided for this event.

Listed below are examples of the values to be found; however, whether you purchase or not, a visit to the store must send through you a thrill of patriotic fervor such as you could only experience on a Peace Celebration occasion. We invite you to come.

In conjunction with this, we will have our Annual JANUARY ESTIMATING CONTEST which will take the form this year of a huge Salt Seller, loaded with coppers and the person who is the best estimator will have an $85 WILTON RUG given to her at the end of January. New Council to Strike Committees On January 13th

The Wreck of Last Year's Council Will Likely Result in New Men Receiving Chairmanships—The New-Comers Can Dictate, If They Wish.

The first meeting of the new Council will be held on Monday, January 13th, at 11 a.m., for the drafting of committees, with the incidental and interesting duty of selecting chairmen, and otherwise organizing for the year's work. It is not likely that the old Council will be called in the meantime unless some question arises next week that must be dealt with at once.

The new Council will also meet on the evening of January 13th for the transaction of whatever business has accumulated. The custom of distributing the chairmanships among the veteran members will have to be discarded on this occasion for the simple reason that there are not enough old members to go the rounds of the committees. Only three of last year's Council remain to share seven or eight chairmanships. Some of the committees are as follows:—

Board of Works, Fire, Water and Light, Finance, Property, Legal and Reception, Railways, Manufacturers, Municipal Fuel, Committee, Special Committee for the Hunter street bridge.

Alderman Edgar, Alderman McIntyre and Alderman Taylor are the surviving members of last year's Council. They will of course secure chairmanships, but the interesting phase of the upheaval is the personnel of the other chairmanships. Mr. Turner and Mr. Phelan have had experience in the Council, but the Labour members have a decided power and prestige emanating from their two-year terms and their places at and near the top of the polls:

The organization meeting of the new Council admits of interesting possibilities, but it is more than likely that there will be no radical departure from precedent.

Would Confer With Labour

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., to-day received the following letter from Senator G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labour. Mr. Burnham says he would be very glad to arrange for the Trades and Labour Council or other organized body of labour to meet Senator Robertson on this occasion without interfering with the Canadian Club programme, and hopes that advantage will be taken of Senator Robertson's visit in Peterborough to have a heart-to-heart talk on labour conditions.

The Letter.

Ottawa, Jan. 2.

Dear Mr. Burnham,—I expect to go to Peterborough on Thursday, the sixteenth, to address the members of the Canadian Club and also to interview as many as possible of the labour people there, and while in the city I hope to have the pleasure of meeting you. I will leave here on the C.P.R. train which reaches Peterborough at 3.35 p.m., and will be staying at the Empress Hotel, where, perhaps, you could find it convenient to look me up. Wishing you the compliments of the season,

G. D. Robertson,
Minister of Labour.

"THE BETTER 'OLE."

Old Bill; Bert and Alf, the three principal characters of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's "Fragments From France," the pictures that have made the Empire laugh, were most realistically portrayed on the screen at the Grand Opera House yesterday in "The Better 'Ole," an all-British moving picture that delighted the big crowds that attended in the afternoon and evening. The producers have caught the spirit of the Bairnsfather drawings admirably and many of the funny incidents of his sketches are reproduced most effectively. Old Bill, who typifies the middle aged British soldier who went out to do his bit in France, and Bert and Alf, his two younger companions, breathe the spirit of the British army—the dauntless spirit that causes them to find amusement in the misery of the trenches and to laugh in the face of danger. The picture version is a most striking representation of soldier life in France—not the actual firing line, but the happenings of Tommy's life in billets. There are incidents that cause laugh after laugh. Bert's love-making constantly interrupted by Alf, the latter's struggle with a lighter that won't light, the spectacle of Old Bill staggering along with the "officers' billiard table" and dozens of other features of the same kind provide much amusement.

Incidentally there is a well-connected plot, and Old Bill wins a decoration after detecting a German spy plot and foiling an enemy attempt to entrap a French force. And everybody rejoices with him when he returns home to dear old Blighty to find his wife has bought a public house for him and named it "The Better 'Ole'."

The picture is a remarkable one, splendidly acted and wonderfully photographed and designed. Charles Rock, who is seen in the part of Old Bill, gives a life-like portrayal of the role, and the other principal parts are well handled.

"The Better 'Ole" will be seen at the Grand again to-night and to-morrow afternoon and evening. No one should miss this splendid film.

Influenza Interferes With Holiday Wedding Plans of Two Minneapolis Brides

Miss Marian Moore Becomes Bride of John Howard Rowand, son of Rev. W. L. H. Rowand of Peterboro.

(From Minneapolis Journal.)

Influenza interfered with the wedding plans of two brides of the holiday season. Invitations had to be recalled for one, while another bride had to forego all pleasures of pre-nuptial entertaining.

At an altar improvised of foliage, flowers and candles before an imported console, the large panel mirror above which reflected a beautiful holiday setting, the marriage vows were spoken Friday evening by Miss Marian Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Moore, of 1701 Logan Ave. S, and John Howard Rowand, of Williston, N.D. Rev. Murdoch McLeod read the service at 8 o'clock. Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, of Peterborough, Canada, father of the bridegroom, announced the blessing. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white tulle with a train of old point lace, an heirloom of her mother's. Her veil of the same old lace was arranged in a cap effect and held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was a shower of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a platinum bar pin set with diamonds, a gift of the bridegroom. Walter M. Ringer was the best man and the only attendant at the wedding.

An informal reception to relatives and intimate friends followed the services. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Rowand were Mr. and Mrs. Moore and the father of the bridegroom. Mrs. Rowand came to Minneapolis but was taken ill and could not attend the ceremony. The rooms were decorated with California pepper berries. In the dining room a colour effect of pink and white was carried out with a centerpiece of pink and white roses in a tall silver filigree basket and white tapers. Mr. Rowand and his bride left on a short wedding trip. They will be at home in Williston, N.D., after Feb. 1.

DREW PLANS FOR PETERBORO CHURCHES

Death of Well Known Architect in Toronto.

One of Ontario's most prominent architects and designers in the person of Mr. Edmund Burke, passed away yesterday at his residence, 23 South Drive, Toronto, after an illness of only one week. Mr. Burke in his student days drew the plans for the George Street Methodist Church, and in late years prepared the plans of Murray Street Baptist and Trinity Churches, two of the largest churches in Peterborough. The plans of many of the largest buildings in Toronto were prepared by him, among them being the Metropolitan Methodist Church and Castle Frank, the palatial residence of Sir Edward Kemp.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now Ointment. We cannot recommend it is and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's preparation too highly."

We have heard of the blessings of poverty, but we can't recall having ever seen any of them.

LOVE SPURNED HE STABS YOUNG WIFE OF WOUNDED HERO

Mrs. M. Thompson's Assailant Roughly Treated by Crowd —Both Near Death.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—"Her indifference to my love had driven me insane and I resolved that she should be made to suffer as I have suffered," is what the police of the Charles street station say Paul Ward, forty-nine years old of No. 49 Bethune street, told them after he was roughly handled by a crowd following an assault on Mrs. Mary Thompson, twenty-four years old, of No. 93 Bank street. He is in a serious condition in St. Vicent's Hospital as a result of the beating and under arrest on a charge of felonious assault.

Mrs. Thompson is known as "the belle of Greenwich Village," the police say. She is in the same hospital and not expected to recover from stab wounds.

The woman is the wife of John Thompson, a soldier now lying wounded in a base hospital in France.

The assault upon Mrs. Thompson occurred late in the afternoon in front of her home, when, according to witnesses, the police of the precinct say, Ward told her:—"You have turned me down once too many. Tell me now, will you return my love or will you again send me away?"

Rebuked, He Uses Knife.

Mrs. Thompson, the police say, rebuked Ward for interfering with her and he took a penknife from his pocket and slashed her across the face several times. Then, it was said he plunged the knife into her neck and body until she fell senseless.

Detectives learned later, they said, that persons on their way to the Christopher street ferry, seeing her lying apparently dead on the sidewalk with a man standing over her with a knife, rushed on him. Ward is alleged to have slashed right and left with his knife, injuring no one, until a blow on the chin sent him to his knees, the crowd then punching and kicking him.

The man who knocked Ward down cried "String him to a lamppost!" the detectives said, and it seemed for a time as if the crowd might try to do that. Women by this time had joined the crowd, and they jabbed at Ward with hatpins.

Detectives Frank Campbell and John Spevlin, of the Charles street station, arrived and with revolvers held the crowd back. An ambulance call was sent to St. Vincent's Hospital. Dr. J. Cashman said Ward and Mrs. Thompson were in a very serious condition. He thought they would live only a few hours, the man probably dying first.

Tells of Spurned Love.

Regaining consciousness an hour after his arrival at the hospital, the detective said Ward declared his love for Mrs. Thompson.

"She has spurned me so often," he is reported to have said, "that I made up my mind that she'd have to reciprocate my love or take the consequences for trifling with my affections. I waited in front of her house since nine o'clock this morning. Many times I heard the door open and expected her to come out, but she did not. When she did come I asked her point blank if she would return my love and when she said no I stabbed her."

Mrs. Thompson's mother, with whom she lives, said her daughter met Ward in a social way last September.

"Ever since that time," she said, "he has been bothering Mary, who has never wanted anything to do with him. She refused to go out with him many times and she has often complained to me about the way Ward was bothering her."

Mrs. Thompson's husband went to France with the first contingent of the American Expeditionary Force and recently wrote a letter to his wife saying he had been over the top in almost every battle since the force went overseas.

"I got mine in the last trip over the top," he said in his letter, "but I'm not injured very badly."

Mrs. Thompson is employed as a stenographer in a downtown office.

HARD WORKING WOMAN

Knows From Experience that Nothing Equals Vinol to Create Strength.

Holmdel, N. J.—"I live on a farm and am a hard working woman and for weak, rundown, overworked conditions have found nothing that will create an appetite, build me up and make me strong equal to Vinol."—Mrs. Thomas Ellis.

The reason we recommend Vinol for such conditions is because it is a constitutional remedy and all of its ingredients are printed on each package which will prove that it is a safe and valuable remedy to create strength for weak, rundown, overworked men, women and children.

Czecho-Slovacks Celebrated Their First Free New Year

Scarce Food and High Prices Failed to Dampen the Enthusiasm.

By Frank J. Taylor.
(United Press.)

PRAGUE, Jan. 3. — To-day the Czecho-Slovaks celebrated their first free New Year in four hundred years. The city was gay with flags. The Stars and Stripes are being seen everywhere in anticipation of the arrival of Allied troops.

Scare food and exorbitant prices failed to dampen the ardour of the people's jubilation.

Automobile trucks, coming from Italy, are bringing relief supplies and food.

New Confederation.

Special to The Examiner:

VIENNA, Jan. 3.—President Wilson, Premier Lloyd George and Premier Clemenceau have agreed on the "creation of a new German Confederation under Bavarian direction," according to an announcement made by President Masaryk of the Czecho-Slovaks, a Prague despatch reported to-day.

Masaryk was said to have stated that this scheme included the destruction of Prussian supremacy, separating the provinces of Posen, Silesia and the Rhine, destruction of Hungarian supremacy by separation of all lands in which the Hungarian tongue is not spoken, and the establishment of a Danube Czecho-Slovak Confederation, including German Austria.

"Turn to the Right" Pleased the Duke

A Real Metropolitan Attraction Which Has Been Booked for Peterboro Played Toronto Twice This Season.

A Real Metropolitan Attracttion Which Has Been Booked for Peterborough, Played Toronto Twice This Season.

"Turn to the Right," the brilliant New York comedy success, which will be presented here at the Grand Opera House Tuesday next, January 7th, has broken quite a few theatrical records in Canada. Both Montreal and Toronto are playing return engagements inside of three months, something never attempted by any other attraction. In the States, President and Mrs. Wilson left cares of State and horrors of war and saw it twice, once in Washington and second time, during a busy visit to New York.

Now Canada has taken this delightful comedy under her wing, and on Saturday evening of last week, December 28th, H. R. H. Duke of Devonshire, three of his charming daughters and his entire Vice-Regal suite attended the performance at Russel Theatre, Ottawa, afterwards expressing delight and pleasure. This is absolutely the first theatrical performance, other than Red Cross benefits, that H.R.H. has attended since he beginning of the war. Mr. Peter Gorman, manager of the Russel Theatre, and Mr. William B. Naylor, business manager of the company, were personally thanked by members of the Suite for a delightful evening's entertainment, seemingly glad the close of the war had enabled the Duke to accept their kind invitation.

The local management wish their patrons to thoroughly understand that identically the same distinguished company and huge scenic production will present this delightful comedy, "Turn to the Right," in Peterborough, as were happily accorded the high honours mentioned. Seats will go on sale at the theatre box office on Saturday.

TRAVELLING COMPANIES MAY HAVE BAGGAGE CARS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—A new rule issued by the Railroad Administration and supposed to go into effect at once doubles the number of fares that must be paid by a travelling company to obtain the use of a special baggage car for the transportation of its effects. The news raised a storm of protest in theatrical circles. Instead of twenty-five tickets the order reads that fifty must be bought to obtain the necessary baggage car.

The managers fumed and worried and were about to take a ticket each for Washington when came word from the capital that the General Director of Railroads, William G. McAdoo, had rescinded the order.

"Northland" Staff Inexperienced in Feeding Transport Crowds

Reporters Will be Called in Ottawa Probe Into Conditions on Transport Complained of by Men Returning Home.

RATIONS LIGHTER

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—Enquiry into conditions on board the White Star liner Northland commenced at 11 o'clock this morning before Mr. Justice Hodgins in the board room of the Rail way Commission.

J. F. Orde, K. C., appeared for the White Star Co., and R. B. Maxwell and David Loughneu for the G. W. V. A.

Complaints Were Numerous

Mr. Orde, after reading the order-in-council creating the commission, declared that there had been no official complaint lodged with the Government, but that such complaints from the men on board the vessel had appeared in the press, and that these complaints were numerous.

The complaints referred to the food which was said to be bad; to the accomodation and quarters, said to be verminous, to the ventilation, said to be bad, to the relative deck space given to officers and men. Reasons given for bad ventilation had been varied. It was stated that the ship had been held in quarantine when reaching Halifax. One man had said, however, that the reason for the holding up of the vessel was not quarantine, but a desire to give officers on board a chance to sober up. On this, Mr. Orde, however had no observation to make.

A Frank, Full Probe

Mr. Orde declared that it was the desire of the Government to probe the newspaper reports to the very bottom, whether they were true or not. "Any man," he said "who knows anything may come and give his evidence in the frankest and fullest manner with no fear of results to himself. No one need keep his mouth shut for fear of injury to himself, should he tell the truth. We should call all those who have made statements, in fact, we are endeavoring to get these men from Toronto and Ottawa."

Mr. Justice Hodgins: "I understand you say that the men can speak without fear though in uniform."

Mr. Orde: "Yes your Lordship, both Sir Thomas White and the Militia Department has said that.

To Call Reporters

Mr. Orde declared that in his opinion the reporters who had secured the interviews should be called. Mr. Justice Hodgins agreed. "It is important," he decared, "that we get the reporters here to ascertain whether they exercised due care to publish what the men actually said."

Mr. Orde declared that he had the name of the Toronto Star reporter published.

"There is one who reports that he went through the quarters after." said the judge, "and who says he can verify everything that was said regarding them. We would like to get him. There are two viewpoints here, in the first place these men who made the complaints are men to whom Canada feels that everything possible should be done for their comfort. I don't think of course, that this should degenerate into sentimentality. It is due to them that the complaints should be thoroughly and sympathetically looked into.

Ethel Strickland as Ma' Bascom in "Turn to th eRight" at The Grand next Tuesday, January 7. Seat sale opens to-morrow morning.

Gen. Bigger, quartermaster-general was called as the first witness. He explained the scope of his duties as covering transport and supply of Canadian troops.

"The Overseas minister of Militia," he stated, "makes the arrangement for sending the troops home. We take charge of them when they arrive."

"Who arranges the rations?" asked Mr. Orde.

"That is done on the other side. I understand it is done by the Admiralty."

"Is this a new arrangement?" "No, it has been going on for about eighteen months. The Admiralty since then has had control of all the ships."

"What of the character and sufficiency of the rationing?" asked Justice Hodgins.

A Lighter Ration

"It is more varied than the Canadian field ration, but not as heavy by 11 ounces.

"Why the difference?"

"The field ration is when troops are in active training, they are not so active when on ship."

"How does it compare with rations for troopships eastbound in 1916 or 1917?"

"We had more experienced crews and stewards then. They got more out of the rations."

For Invalided Men.

Mr. D. Loughmen, of the G.W.V.A. inquired if the rations for wounded men were different from those for men going over.

"We have hospital ships with special diet for that class of men," said Col. Clarke.

"Is it suggested that any invalided men were on the Northland?" asked the Commissioner.

"I am not aware, but I asked the question in view of my own experience," said Mr. Loughmen. "The rations were not always suited to men suffering, for instance, from gastritis."

Major-General E. C. Ashton, acting adjutant-general, explained that since May the conducting officers of ships, both coming and going, had been under the Militia Departmens at Ottawa. The idea was to have trained men. The Northland was included in this list. On the last trip of this ship, however, conditions arose in England whereby only one of the regularly employed conducting officers was able to come over. He was the adjutant. The rest of the staff for the trip was organized by the Overseas Ministry.

"By whom?"—"By Gen. Tucker."

"Do I understand that only one officer the conducting party had previous experience?" asked Mr. Orde.

"In this particular work, yes."

Who Was Senior

General Ashton stated that there had been some difficulty, not in the case of the Northland, but in others due to conflict between conducting officers and O.C. troops. "We asked the overseas authorities that the O. C. troops should always have charge but the King's regulations stipulate that it shall be the senior officer on board." On the Northland Major Westmore was the conducting officer.

"Who was senior?"

"Col. Burrows of the Imperial Staff was on board, but didn't assume any command," stated Major Westmore in answer to the commissioner.

"Has the conducting officer any authority over the ship's staff?" asked Mr. Orde.

"He can complain to the captain but he has nothing to do with the ship's staff."

The conducting officer, the witness added, had charge of the discipline. If sufficient help was not on board, the conducting officer could detail fatigue parties to help clean up, wash dishes, serve tables, make beds, etc.

Dancing Berliners Threw Confetti At Bolshevist Ghost

BERLIN.—Berlin tangoed her way out of the old year, fox trotted into 1919, and scared away Bolsheviam with confetti. It was the first dancing indulged in here since the outbreak of the war, and revellers made the most of it

In the downtown section of the city the crowds approximated those of peace times, and police reports show them to have been well behaved. The only disturbances were caused by a demonstration by unemployed waiters, who attempted to force a general walk-out. Six hundred of them paraded through the streets of the Inner City, carrying placards demanding fixed wages, and the abolition of tips. They succeeded in getting enough recruits to close down some of the popular cafes. Hotel patrons, except those visiting the wine rooms were not inconvenienced. A general strike of waiters is expected on Thursday

Every restaurant and hotel dining-room in greater Berlin was closed to-night as a result of the waiters' strike. The guests in even the leading hotels were compelled to dine in their rooms, and had only makeshift service.

CHARGES FORMER MAYOR WITH MAKING PROFIT OF $4,000

J. H. Spence of Brantford Produces Marked Check in Defense.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 3.—An interesting side issue in the municipal elections has developed here. Mayor MacBride has charged that J. H. Spence, one of the members of the municipal league, made a commission of $4,000 while acting as intermediary for the Dominion Government in the purchase of a Brant avenue property for a new armories.

Mr. Spence has encountered with a marked cheque for the above amount and has offered to donate dollar for dollar to the Children's Aid Society what he is said to have made on the transaction. The other parties are called upon to contribute similarly for what they may fail to prove. Judge Hardy has been asked to decide the issue.

Demobilizing Army On Selective Basis

Colossal Tasks Undertaken by Great Britain Affects Ten Million.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Reuter's has received the following statement in regard to demobilization in Great Britain affecting at least ten million men and women who were engaged in Britain's war effort, and of whom 775,000 have already been released, including 170,000 soldiers and sailors, 110,000 returned war prisoners and 390,000 munition workers.

The three factors governing demobilization are the size of the British arm; which must for the present be maintained . This has already been practically settled by Marshal Foch in conference with the Allies holding the western lines. Secondly, the machinery of discharge and thirdly the economic situation at home.

At the present time demobilization is proceeding on a selective basis as distinct from discharge by units, the men being selected as far as possible among those who are most essential to industry. Obviously to demobilize the seven million men of the army and navy on a selective basis is a colossal task. Moreover, the army has been moving forward with many services working at a higher standard than during the fighting. Should the existing strain on the armies be relieved there will be a change from the selective basis of demobilization to the industrial basis, while later it may be possible to work on a formation basis, bringing the formation home and then demobilizing collectively.

One of the great problems is transportation, especially over the devastated areas of France. Marshal Foch declared that on a selective basis the maximum he can discharge from the army in France is ten thousand a day, while on a non-selective basis he can release twenty-two thousand daily with the same transportation facilities. By opening a passage through Antwerp it would be possible considerably to increase these numbers, but this step would take time. At the present time 272,000 people are drawing out of work benefit, while the out of work population is advancing to 17 per thousand of the total population weekly.

Consequently in demobilizing the unemployment factor must steadily be borne in mind. The authorities are, however, not alarmed at the present situation. There exists a good deal of optimism as regards the revival of industry and it is believed that a boom will come later.

POLAND FOR THE POLES

WARSAW, Jan. 3.—Andreas Moraczewski, the Polish Premier, said to-day: "I desire to see Poland inhabited only by Poles. I do not favour giving special autonomy and schools to Jews, but do believe in giving them their civic rights if they perform their civic duties."

Women Have Not Right to Sit in Parliament Here

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.— Whether women will have the right to sit in the Dominion Parliament is a question which is bothering some people interested in women's enfranchisement. They will be accorded that privilege if and when Parliament so decides. All law proceeds from either custom or statute. It has never been the custom, nor is there any statutory authority for Canadian women to sit in Parliament, and only this year was the electoral franchise conferred on them. Some advocate that the right to sit in Parliament is the natural accompaniment of the right to vote. The Government has not considered the matter, and it is doubtful if Parliament would receive it very sympathetically.

The fate of women candidates in the British elections is not encouraging to those who entertain similar ambitions in Canada, but they cannot even be candidates until Parliament lifts the ban. Some of the suffragettes are urging that it should be."

Cobb Claims He's Released

Will Consider Offers From Any Club Now.

A special to The Detroit Free Press from Augusta, Ga., says:—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, foremost baseball player of the world, stated that he had received his notice of release from the Detroit Baseball Club and that he would consider offers from other baseball clubs if they should approach him with a view of securing his services.

"As to whether I will play baseball next season, I am at present unable to say. I am not much interested in the matter just now and frankly am making but few plans to play," said Cobb.

"As to my having had a conference with Miller Huggins of the New York Americans, I will say that I know nothing at all of it. I have not seen Mr. Huggins nor heard from him and the report that he was in Augusta to see me was a mere rumour so far as I know."

Speaking of his status in baseball, Captain Cobb said that he did not exactly understand what his position is, and that he was not worrying about finding out, but is leaving that to the Detroit club.

"This I know, however," said Cobb "that prior to the close of the 1918 baseball season I was handed my ten days' notice of release as specified in the contract which expired at the end of the playing season. The contract has been in effect four years. Whether I go back to Detroit or whether I go with another club I will have to sign another contract. Understand, however, I make no claims to being a free agent. There are rules that bind baseball contracts that but few people understand and I am not worrying about them. I am leaving that to the Detroit club and the National Commission."

Asked if he would consider an offer from another baseball club, if approached in regard to securing his services, Captain Cobb said: "Yes, I would consider such an offer, for under the rules of baseball no club can approach a man bound to another club without the consent of the club or unless the man is free. Therefore should another club approach me I should think that I were free to consider its offer and that Detroit no longer had any claim on me."

SAVE FROZEN POTATOES.

Do not throw away the frozen potatoes. An American Chemical Society bulletin says if they are kept frozen until they are used they will be just as wholesome, nutritious and palatable as if they had not been frozen at all. It is only when prematurely and too suddenly thawed out that they are spoiled. It would be difficult to estimate the waste caused by the mistaken belief that potatoes are unfit for food because they have been frozen. Any gardener knows that potatoes that remain in the ground over winter come out (or some up) perfectly fresh in the spring, even when the ground must have been frozen hard. They may have when cooked the sweetish taste of potatoes pitted over the winter.

Man of 24 Has 51,000 Employees

Ford Motor Co. Announces New Wage Minimum of $6 a Day.

DETROIT, Jan. 3.—A new minimum wage scale of $6 a day, a flat increase of $1 a day, for approximately 23,000 employees throughout the country, was announced by the Ford Motor Company. Employes of the Ford Tractor interests also are included in the increase. The new wage minimum becomes effective to-day.

Twenty-three thousand other employes of the Ford interests already receive $6 or more a day.

Coincident with the announcement of the wage increase it was made known that Henry Ford has formally resigned as president of the Ford Motor Company, and his son, Edsel, elected to succeeded him at a salary of $150,000 a year.

Mr. Ford, in tendering his resignation, gave as his reason his intention to devote more time to the tractor industry. He retains, however, his seat on the board of directors of the company in an advisory capacity. Edsel Bryant Ford, who becomes the executive head of a corporation representing an investment of close to $200,000,000, is only 24 years old. He entered the shops of the Ford plant when he was a boy.

TO BEGIN SOON.

Conversations Between Representatives of Allies Near.

PARIS, January 2. — Conversations between representatives of the allies will begin at the French Foreign Office immediately upon the return to Paris of Premier Clemenceau, which is expected to be about January 6 or 7. The Premier is now taking a brief rest in La Vendee.

President Wilson is expected back in Paris at the beginning of next week, while Premier Lloyd George will arrive on Saturday.

The number of delegates representing each of the great nations at the coming peace conference is likely to be increased beyond five, the number previously considered probable, by the inclusion of several delegates who may exchange places with others, taking part in the conferences only when the special subjects upon which they are authorities are being considered.
